3 CHILDREN KILLED BY BOMB SET IN HOME TO WIPE OUT FAMILY

Brooklyn Victims, Thinking the Parcel in Kitchen Was for Christmas, Tried to Open It.

BLAST ROCKS WIDE AREA

Father, a Contractor, Away at the Time, Had Received Blackmail Threats.

TOLD TO LEAVE COUNTRY

A Woman Friend of His Questioned —Wife and Two Children Escape Injury.

Three children, preparing to go to mass, were killed by the explosion of a dynamite bomb in the kitchen of their home in Brooklyn yesterday morning. The mother and two other children were in another room and escaped injury.

Last night the police, under the personal direction of Commissioner Whalen, were turning over a mass of apparently unrelated information, ranging from threatening letters addressed to the father, to family troubles between Falzone and his wife, in an effort to unravel a recklessly designed murder.

The victims were Mary, Philip and Rose Falzone. Mary was 10 years old, Philip 13 and Rose 8. They lived with their mother and father in a stucco-covered two-story house at 1,317 De Kalb Avenue, in a neighborhood of modest homes.

The father, Joseph Falzone, a prosperous marble contractor, was not at home. He had left Thursday on a hunting trip in Pennsylvania. Last night at 9:35 o'clock, just eleven hours after the tragedy, he returned to his bomb-scarred house. He sank to his knees and swore vengeance against those responsible for his children's deaths.

He was taken by waiting detectives to the Wilson Avenue police station and questioned at length. Four companions of the hunting trip bore out his declaration that he had been with them constantly.

Children Dressing for Church.

Mary Falzone was to have partaken of her first holy communion yesterday at St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church near by. Her mother got the five children up early. The three eldest dressed themselves and Mrs. Falzone dressed Patsy, 5 years old, and Sally, 3, in the front room.

"Go into the kitchen and make coffee while I finish dressing the babies," she told Philip. It was 8:30 o'clock and mass was at 9.

Philip obeyed. His two sisters accompanied him. Mary had in her hand a $10 bill which her mother had given her to contribute at the church. On the kitchen table was a large package wrapped in brown paper. It immediately excited the children's curiosity. Perhaps they thought it was an early Christmas package. Philip reached for it, and at that instant there was a shattering explosion.

Philip's arm was blown away and he and his elder sister, who had been standing beside him, were hurled dying across the room. The younger sister, Rose, who had been standing at a distance, was wounded by missiles from the paper-wrapped package. Mrs. Falzone and the small children in the next room were hurled to the floor.

The explosion rocked neighboring houses and was heard for several blocks. That and a billow of acrid smoke which arose from the kitchen brought a shouting crowd of neighbors together with policemen from the Wilson Avenue Station, less than a block away.

Taxi Driver Gives Aid.

Giuseppe Di Benedetto, a taxicab driver of 185 Irving Avenue, Brooklyn, who was cruising past the house, ran into the smoking kitchen and carried the children out. Mary and Philip were dead, but Rose was still alive. Two priests from St. Joseph's Church, Father Tortora and Father Genova, gave absolution. One of three ambulances which arrived meanwhile rushed Rose to the Wyckoff Heights Hospital, but she died on the way.

Neighbors took care of Mrs. Falzone and the surviving children.

Fire apparatus put out a small blaze which had started in the kitchen and detectives, at once, began working on a multiplicity of clues.

Commissioner Whalen and Acting Deputy Chief Inspector Edward P. Mulrooney, together with Charles H. Hand, secretary to Mayor Walker, Fire Marshal Thomas P. Brophy and other officials arrived soon after learning of the tragedy. District Attorney Charles J. Dodd and Assistant District Attorney Anthony di Giovanna began an investigation for Kings County. Police of the Wilson Avenue Station, supplemented by reserves from neighboring precincts, went to the scene at the first alarm to keep order.

The wrecked kitchen contained proof that the explosion had been caused by a time bomb of unusual

Swiss Hotels Feel Slump Here As Americans Cancel Visits

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Dec. 8.—It is now known that in the Wall Street slump Swiss financial firms which were speculators lost more than $25,000,000.

So far an expected slump in export trade of Swiss jewelry and watches to America has not occurred, as no orders have been canceled. On the other hand, many Americans who had booked rooms at Swiss hotels for Winter visits have abandoned those plans, and a number of others have withdrawn their children from Swiss private schools owing to losses on the New York Stock Exchange.

LIVINGSTON LOSES IN LEADERSHIP ROW

Steinbrink Has Signed Pledges of Support From 31 of 46 on Executive Committee.

FIVE OTHERS TO BACK HIM

He Wants an Advisory Group— Meeting to Ballot Will Be Held in a Few Days.

Meier Steinbrink, lawyer and one of the original supporters of Herbert Hoover for the Republican nomination for President, has won his fight to displace Jacob A. Livingston as leader of the Brooklyn Republican organization, it was learned yesterday. Formal ratification of the selection of Mr. Steinbrink will occur at a meeting of the executive committee, which is expected to take place this week, probably tomorrow or Wednesday.

Mr. Steinbrink has received the written pledges of thirty-one of the forty-six members of the executive committee to support a resolution to make him the spokesman of the Brooklyn Republican organization instead of Mr. Livingston. Five more members of the committee were said to have agreed to vote for such a resolution, but had not affixed their signatures when Mr. Steinbrink left late Saturday afternoon for Boston.

To Outline Plans Today.

Upon his return today Mr. Steinbrink will issue a statement setting forth his position and something of what he intends to do toward building up the party in Brooklyn. It also is likely that a meeting of the executive committee will be called. Under the rules this may be done by any five members, but Mr. Livingston has said that he is ready to call a meeting if one is desired.

There will be no attempt to displace Mr. Livingston as chairman of the executive committee, since he has been elected for a term which will not end until after the primary election next September. In Brooklyn, however, the position of Republican leader is by a resolution empowering some individual to act as party spokesman. This form of Republican leadership does not exist in any other county in the State but is similar to the form of leadership of Tammany. Mr. Livingston held his place as leader under such a resolution. The late Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff and former United States Senator William M. Calder, neither of whom was a member of the executive committee, held the leadership by such resolutions.

Proposes an Advisory Group.

It was learned that Mr. Steinbrink, as the first steps in rebuilding the Brooklyn Republican organization, intends to appoint an advisory committee which will work in harmony with the executive committee and with the county committee, of which Transit Commissioner Charles C. Lockwood is chairman. He also will attempt to revive interest in the party among the members of the

PHONE TO LEVIATHAN 200 MILES AT SEA, OPENING NEW SERVICE

VOICES HEARD CLEARLY

Head of A. T. & T. Says, 'Get Me Commodore Cunningham,' and Has Reply in Few Minutes.

BRITTEN ON LINE IN CAPITAL

Man in Atlantic City Hears Lipton on Ship—Purser Calls The Times and Tells of Balmy Weather.

A telephone bell rang yesterday in a room on the twenty-sixth floor of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company Building, 195 Broadway. That commonplace sound marked the establishment of two-way telephone service with a ship at sea for the first time on a commercial basis.

Soon afterward William H. Rankin in Atlantic City was chatting with Sir Thomas Lipton aboard the Leviathan, 200 miles from her Hudson River pier, Europe bound, and J. G. Summitt, chief purser of the liner, was in conversation with THE NEW YORK TIMES office, which received one of the first "ship-to-shore" calls.

Gifford Opens Service.

Walter S. Gifford, president of the telephone company, opened the new service at 11 A. M. after explaining some of the difficulties which had to be overcome before it could be put into operation for general use by telephone subscribers anywhere in the United States. Lifting the receiver from an ordinary instrument before him, he spoke quietly into the transmitter:

"Get me Commodore H. A. Cunningham aboard the Leviathan at sea," he said.

The twenty-odd men seated about an oval-shaped table, each with a receiver pressed against his ear, had time for only about two puffs on their cigars before the bell broke the tense silence of the crowded room. The circuit was completed, from New York by land wire to the radio sending station at Deal Beach, N. J.; across 200 miles of water to the ship and back again by way of the receiving station at Forked River, N. J. Clear and strong the listeners heard a voice say:

"This is Commodore Cunningham aboard the Leviathan."

Converse Twenty Minutes.

Twenty minutes of uninterrupted conversation—perfect technically at least—ensued. As usual the weather proved a matter of paramount concern to almost every one and few could resist that old favorite for such occasions:

"I hear you as well as though you were in the next room."

The ability of the Leviathan's master to recognize voices caused a great deal of wonderment until Arthur Batcheller, radio supervisor for New York, asked Commodore Cunningham if he remembered the last inspection of wireless equipment.

"I guess I do," replied the commodore, "but according to my program you are out of turn."

"That's a social error, so I'll sign off," replied Mr. Batcheller hurriedly, but the secret was out.

Others who took part in the opening of the service by chatting with Commodore Cunningham were:

E. A. LA FOUNT, Federal Radio Commission.
Lieut. Commander T. A. M. CRAVEN, radio division, United States Navy.
Lieut. Commander R. H. BLAIR, United States Navy.
F. W. CHAPMAN, president of the United States Lines, owners of the Leviathan.
C. H. SHERRY, president United States Lines Operations Company.
KENT COOPER, general manager of The Associated Press.
FRANK MASON, president of International News Service.

When every one in the room had had his turn at the transmitter, the

Childs Returns to the Restaurant Business; Buys the Archambault as First of New Chain

William Childs, ousted head of the chain of restaurants bearing his name, confirmed at his home in Bernardsville, N. J., last night reports that he is organizing a new chain of restaurants. The site of the first of the new chain has already been selected and the company which will operate them will be incorporated in about two weeks, he said.

Mr. Childs was somewhat indignant that the news of his new ventures had become public prematurely, but after he had been informed that it was known that he and his associates had taken over the premises of the old Archambault Restaurant at 2,675 Broadway, at 102d Street, he admitted the truth of the report.

With his brother, the late S. S. Childs, Mr. Childs began the string of restaurants which bear their name forty years ago. He came into disagreement with his stockholders a year ago when, they complained, he subordinated meat dishes on his menus to his own vegetarian preferences. After some internal dissension Mr. Childs was prevailed upon to try his opponents' policy, but he did not like the venture and last January, by a surprise attack recaptured control of the chain.

An extensive campaign for proxies was waged in the following weeks, but when the stockholders' meeting was held on March 7 Mr. Childs and his associates were decisively beaten. He then retired from participation in its operation, although so far as is known he has not disposed of his extensive holdings in its stock.

The Childs chain has been reporting increased profits regularly during the last year. Their stock, which had fallen to a low of 44 in 1928, rallied to about 70 just before the stock market crash. It closed Saturday at 50¾.

12 Killed, 60 Drown as Pirates Attack Ship; Warships Save Burning Vessel From Chinese

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HONGKONG, Dec. 8.—Chinese pirates made a desperate attempt today to seize the British steamer Haiching, carrying 300 passengers from Swatow to Hongkong. They stormed the captain's bridge, fought for an hour with the officers and guards, and terrorized passengers, several of whom were drowned in trying to escape in a lifeboat.

By the time two British destroyers had rushed to answer frantic S O S calls they found the 2,000-ton ship had been set ablaze, with a British officer, two Indian guards and a number of the pirates killed and twenty-six wounded in the struggle. All the pirates are under arrest tonight in the Hongkong jail.

The pirates boarded the steamer as passengers at Swatow yesterday afternoon. Mingling with other Chinese aboard, they bided their time until it was dark. Early this morning, as the Haiching was approaching Chilang Point, they crept to the top deck and rushed the bridge. The officers held them at bay while the captain managed to send a wireless call for help.

Finding they could not capture the bridge, the pirates ran below decks and set fire to the ship.

Meanwhile, the destroyers Sterling and Sirdar, which happened to be near by, raced to the rescue, and after a boarding party from the Sirdar had put out the flames, the ship was towed into port, with its decks strewn with bodies, its hull still smoking, and its cargo of pirates as prisoners.

HONGKONG, Dec. 8 (AP).—Three American women were witnesses to a bloody conflict today between a swarm of Chinese pirates and the crew of the British steamship Haiching. The women, whose names had not been learned tonight, were not injured, but twelve persons were killed and about sixty native passengers leaped overboard and were drowned.

The steamer reached here tonight with its superstructure partly burned away, and one officer dead and another wounded. Thirty-eight wounded buccaneers were sent to the hospital, where the condition of most of them was said to be serious. Others were brought ashore securely bound and thrown into jail.

Panic-stricken Chinese passengers swarmed from below as the smoke poured over the vessel. Mothers clasping children in their arms leaped overboard, while others of the passengers attempted to launch lifeboats. In their haste three of the boats, overcrowded by the frightened people who jumped into them, overturned and many were drowned.

DEAD PUT AT SCORES IN GALE OFF BRITAIN

Fifteen Ships Send Out Signals of Distress as Fresh Winds Roar In From Atlantic.

WRECKAGE STREWS SHORE

Two on British Warship Drown, 6 on Italian Vessel—France Cut Off From England.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—On the heels of the gale which ravaged English coasts yesterday new winds of hurricane force roared in from the Atlantic today, piling up tempestuous seas in the English Channel and playing havoc with shipping.

Such a wild week-end has not been known since accurate weather records have been kept in England. Gusts of ninety-seven miles an hour whistled across Falmouth, while at the Scilly Isles, where the hurricane blew at 108 miles yesterday, new squalls of ninety-three miles an hour lashed the ocean into a fury.

Liners and trawlers, tramps and freighters were battered alike by the raging seas. Fifteen ships of all nationalities sent out distress signals today, in addition to yesterday's toll.

The White Star liner Homeric limped into Southampton twenty hours late with windows on the promenade deck smashed and the passengers exhausted by the almost continuous gales across the Atlantic. Several suffered minor injuries from falling on the decks. The Bishop of Winchester, returning from a visit to the United States, said that he had never had an experience like it.

Had to Heave-to Six Hours.

The waves were so mountainous that the Homeric had to heave-to for six hours yesterday morning. By skillful seamanship Captain Warner turned the 34,000-ton liner around with her bow to the wind until the hurricane abated. The windows smashed were sixty feet above the waterline.

News was received at the Cunard offices here that the Lancastria was struck by lightning at the height of the week-end gale. The wireless was disabled and the lights went out, but no one was injured.

Ship Forced Back.

The Hamburg-American liner Kellerwald, bound for South America, crept back into Plymouth harbor after traveling thirty-four miles in twenty-four hours in the teeth of the gale. Falmouth harbor was filled with damaged shipping, while bits of wreckage were strewn along the Cornwall, Devonshire and Dorsetshire coasts. Off Deal in the Straits of Dover a strangely-assorted fleet of thirty vessels was huddled for shelter, waiting for the storm to abate.

England was virtually isolated from France, with the Channel services crippled and the air services canceled. Terrific seas crashed against the Folkestone breakwater throughout the day, and it was impossible for Channel boats to leave the port. The service from Dover to Calais was partly resumed toward afternoon as conditions on the French side showed a slight improvement. The Southern Railway steamship Alberta, which left Southampton yesterday morning, did not arrive at Guernsey until today, having taken twenty hours to make the 104-mile crossing.

Two seamen were swept to death from the British destroyer Walpole while the ship was rounding the coast from Portsmouth to Chatham. One officer was thrown to the deck by the roll of the ship and injured. The seas were so fierce that the Walpole turned back to Portsmouth, where she arrived safely this evening.

FISHER TO APPOINT GRUNDY AS SENATOR

Acceptance by Pennsylvania Tariff Advocate Is Likely to Start Hard Primary Battle.

VARE GETS PLEDGES OF AID

Philadelphia Leaders Back Him —Three-Cornered Fight Looms, With Pinchot in Field.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 8.—Joseph R. Grundy, president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association, the veteran advocate of protective tariffs, who recently held the stage in the Senate lobby inquiry, will be appointed by Governor Fisher as Senator from Pennsylvania, taking the place of William S. Vare. The Senate last week refused to seat Mr. Vare because of huge campaign expenditures.

The appointment will be proffered to Mr. Grundy by the middle of the week, and his acceptance is expected, although in accepting he will face an intense primary fight in May should Mr. Vare's health permit him to continue in his announced plan of again seeking the nomination for the Senate.

It is known among the anti-Vare political leaders, who inherited the Penrose machine, that if the Philadelphia leader actually goes into the primary and can command loyal support from the organization in that city, ex-Governor Pinchot will again seek the nomination as a third candidate.

Thus tonight, the situation in the Republican politics of this State is confused, with contests developing over the Senatorship, the Governorship and other State offices similar to the battle of 1926, which resulted in Senator Pepper's defeat in the primaries, and the investigation by the Senate of campaign expenditures of nearly $2,500,000 by three candidates for the Senate.

Seek to Avoid Another 1926.

The election in 1926 became a scandal, and the present Republican leaders are determined to conduct affairs differently in the primary, with the result that candidates will be slated who can command support without heavily financing the machine workers.

It is declared that Mr. Grundy satisfies many politicians. Messages that have come to Governor Fisher since the unseating of Mr. Vare have commanded Grundy for frankly laying down Pennsylvania's tariff views to the Senate lobby committee.

The messages, which were sent by business men and political leaders, expressed themselves so emphatically in support of Mr. Grundy that Governor Fisher is said to feel that they are equivalent to a referendum and that Mr. Grundy is the choice of the party.

The veteran tariff advocate has not been consulted as to his political ambitions. The offer will be made to him without any political pressure having been exerted on the Executive. Governor Fisher was reported to believe that Mr. Grundy is a candidate who could win even in a three-cornered fight in the primary.

Some Republican leaders are hopeful that Mr. Vare will not carry out his threat, but will be content to withdraw if he is permitted to have some say in picking a candidate for Governor.

Believes Grundy Will Accept.

In some circles it is felt that Mr. Grundy will refuse the proffer from Governor Fisher in order to prevent

HAITI AGAIN QUIET AS CRUISER ARRIVES; STRIKE LEADERS HELD

CROWDS ASSAIL PRESIDENT

PRESS RESTRICTION DENIED

People's Lobby, Headed by Prof. Dewey, Attacks Military Rule on Island.

By The Associated Press.

PORT AU PRINCE, Dec. 8.—Quiet prevailed today throughout Haiti. Wire communications were open to all points. Threatened demonstrations scheduled for last night and this morning at three points failed to materialize.

The cruiser Galveston with its regular marine detachment of fifty men arrived at Jacmel at 8 A. M. and found the city quiet. The inhabitants plainly showed relief that fears of attack had been dispelled.

News of the action taken so promptly by President Hoover and the dispatch of marine reinforcements from the United States was published as a bulletin by the newspaper La Presse, and this contributed to the feeling of stability.

Outposts which had been threatened at Chantal, Torbeo and Port-a-Piment in the Cayes district reported today that all was quiet with a handful of members of the Haitian National Guard in control. Intelligence agents of the Garde were circulating through the disaffected area to restore confidence and tranquillity.

No Censorship at Force.

Under the martial law there has been established no censorship in any form on the press and the usual flexible censorship of cable and telephone communications has not been added to. Three opposition papers have voluntarily suspended publication, although encouraged by Brigade Commander Cutts to continue. The reason given by the papers was that no news could be printed, but it was said by the authorities that the actual reason was that the papers were facing bankruptcy.

Under Haitian law only cable messages of plainly seditious nature are referred to the Minister of the Interior for censorship. Cable business has been brisk and telephone lines have shown a large increase in the volume of business, so that any censorship necessarily would have been ineffective.

Despite this freedom of circulation of real information, alarmist reports have circulated. One was that airplanes had bombed Aux Cayes without warning and had inflicted heavy losses. Another was that a marine patrol had ambushed peasants without warning and taken a severe toll in killed and wounded.

As evidence that the marines in their clash with natives who tried to force their way into Aux Cayes on Friday had been in full control of their fire and had unusually fine discipline, the brigade commander today released an official report showing that the ammunition in the machine-gun belt used to drive off the attackers was not exhausted. This was said to show that the marines had fired only as long as the attacking band had pressed forward.

There have been three arrests here and one at Cape Haitien in the past twenty-four hours. The prisoners were charged with being strike agitators.

Russell Reports Quiet.

T. D. Toy Jr., 24, Son of Yarn Merchant, Killed By Fall From Window of Pershing Sq. Building

Thomas Dallam Toy Jr., 24 years old, son of the president of Thomas D. Toy & Co., yarn merchants of 461 Fourth Avenue, was instantly killed just after 6 o'clock last night when he fell from a window in the offices of the W. L. Brahn Advertising Company on the fifth floor of the Pershing Square Building, into Forty-first Street.

Apparently no one saw him fall. He had gone to the offices of the advertising agency, where he was employed, early in the afternoon and had signed the visitors' register as required on Sundays and holidays, before the superintendent took him up in the elevator.

Soon after 6 o'clock a man called the attention of Patrolman Walter Staib to a body lying in Forty-first Street near Park Avenue. Staib hurried over and examined the body. Toy's neck had been broken and his skull fractured. Staib sent for an ambulance, then set to work to identify the body. An open window on the fifth floor of the Pershing Building was his first clue.

Staib consulted Harry F. Burrows, night superintendent of the building. Burrows examined the register and found that young Toy was the only person supposedly on the fifth floor. Burrows and the patrolman ascended to the offices of the advertising agency. Near the window was a chair. Scratches on the floor and on the chair itself indicated that Toy apparently had been standing on the chair in the act of raising the window, when the chair slipped from under him, and he was catapulted through the open window to his death.

As soon as Dr. Firmeich arrived from the Ruptured and Crippled Hospital he ordered Toy's body removed to the East Thirty-fifth Street station. The fatality then was notified. The dead man had lived with his parents at 3,165 Park Avenue. His younger brother, Horace R. Toy, is a student at Princeton.

Greece Will Erect Two Cities For Farmers Who Quit Russia

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Dec. 8.—An international architectural competition has been opened for the construction of two new cities in Greece. The names chosen for the cities are Neosmyrna and Neogallipolis.

The new urban centres will be erected largely for the accommodation of thousands of Greek farmers who have recently returned from Russia as part of the exodus of foreigners from the land of the Soviets. As Greece is already busy with the problem of its Asiatic refugees, the new influx is a serious matter for the government.

MOVE TOWARD COURT AIDS NAVAL PARLEY

Hoover's Action Held as Disarming Criticism That We Do Not Back Peace Talk.

DEVELOPMENTS FORECAST

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Washington's announcement that it had authorized signature of the World Court statutes, which assures the government's asking the Senate to ratify the adhesion of the United States to that tribunal, helps the prospects of the five-power naval conference, it could not be otherwise.

This action by President Hoover is perhaps the best step he could have taken at this time to disarm the critics of Washington, who like to say that in promoting peace Uncle Sam uses words, while in promoting his navy he uses acts. Of course, America's reply would be stronger were the Senate to ratify adhesion before Jan. 22, but even without that Washington has made an answer to those who say America would have others disarm and arbitrate but she will depend on her fleet.

The charge that America would rather trust to cruisers than judges cannot now be used effectively against her at the naval conference.

If there are those who think America's action some ten years late, it must be admitted that this administration could not have acted a great deal sooner. And if the criticism which has been voiced of American abstention from any action to substitute something else for the military method of settling international disputes, which is barred by the Kellogg pact, may be a measure of the commendation of Washington's step, then Europe must this week echo with praise of America.

Completion of Kellogg Pact.

It may be hoped that approval of this move away from isolation may come somewhere near in vigor to the condemnation of America's having formerly stuck to that policy.

Not only Premier MacDonald, but Aristide Briand and the late Gustav Stresemann pointed to the use of the World Court as a logical completion of the Kellogg pact. If nations do not settle their differences by war any more, then the World Court offers the best way to settle them. Mr. Hoover would now fill the gap in the way other statesmen have approved.

What could have been more opportune as an answer to allegations that the United States is purely nationa-

HOOVER AUTHORIZES ACTION

American Charge Will Sign 3 Protocols Covering Our Reservations.

STIMSON EXPLAINS STATUS

In Letter to President, He Says Root Formula Safeguards Us on Advisory Opinions.

RATIFICATION FACES DELAY

Four Member Nations Must Still Agree and Senate Leaders Oppose Submission Now.

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—By authority of President Hoover, the signature of the United States Government will be attached tomorrow at Geneva to the documents which provide for the membership of the United States in the Permanent Court of International Justice, otherwise the World Court. Announcement to that effect was made by the State Department today.

The three protocols which our representative, Jay Pierrepont Moffat, Charge d'Affaires ad interim at Berne, will sign in behalf of this government must be submitted to the Senate for ratification.

There is likelihood of rather long delay in action by the Senate, but opinion is general among Senators that when action comes it will be favorable. Such action would mean that the United States will enter into full participation in the World Court's functions, with the exception of the optional provision for compulsory jurisdiction and provided all the nations which adhere to the court accept the conditions imposed by the Senate for American entrance. Four nations, Albania, Costa Rica, Ethiopia and Lithuania, have not yet adhered to the protocols accepting the Senate's reservations.

When President Hoover will submit the World Court protocols to the Senate is problematical. From a practical standpoint, they need not be sent there until there has been unanimous acceptance by the court's adherent nations of the protocols dealing with the Senate's reservations.

Senators Against Action Now.

There is some objection, also, on the part of the Senate's Republican leadership and a portion of the membership of the Foreign Relations Committee to having the Senate requested now or in the immediate future to ratify the clarifying protocols.

This objection is based partly on the opinion that the disposition to ratify will be more apparent later on, leading to wider concurrence when the step is taken. Also, some of the Republican leaders feel that the tariff legislation and other matters of more immediate importance should be disposed of before such a highly controversial subject as our entrance into the World Court is brought forward.

That there will be opposition to agreeing to the Root formula, which provides a method for overcoming objections made by member nations in the court to unconditional acceptance of one of the Senate reservations, is evident, but the belief prevails that the atmosphere of the Senate is much more friendly to the formula than it was at the time it was accepted at a conference of signatory governments at Geneva.

This formula, which critics of it prefer to term the Hirst-Root formula, the "Hirst" being Sir Cecil Hirst, now the British member of the World Court, gives the United States certain rights, among them a vote against permitting the court to render an advisory opinion in any case in which the United States "claims an interest" and the privilege of withdrawing from the court if its objection to the rendering of such an advisory opinion is overruled.

Authorization by the President.

The Charge d'Affaires in Switzerland will sign at Geneva the original World Court protocol of 1920 and two documents covering the special adherence of the United States. The authority for him to do so was given in a letter written by President Hoover on Nov. 26 to Secretary of State Stimson in response to a communication in which Mr. Stimson reviewed the steps leading up to the acceptance of the Senate's reservations under certain qualifications by the powers signatory of the original World Court protocol.

The President's letter reads:

Nov. 26, 1929.

The Honorable
The Secretary of State,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Mr. Secretary:

I have received your note of Nov. 18, analyzing the situation created

Stimson Letter Explains World Court Terms

by the almost unanimous signature on the part of the members of the Permanent Court of International Justice to the Protocol of Accession of the United States of America and to the Protocol of Revision of the Statute, and in accordance with the request contained therein, I authorize you to make the necessary arrangements for the signature on behalf of the United States on Dec. 9, 1929, of

1. The Protocol of Signature of the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice,

2. The Protocol of Accession of the United States of America to the Protocol of Signature of the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice, and

3. The Protocol of Revision of the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice.

For this purpose I am enclosing the full powers authorizing Mr. Jay Pierrepont Moffat, Chargé d'Affaires ad interim of the United States at Berne, to sign these documents.

Yours faithfully,
(Signed) HERBERT HOOVER.

Secretary Stimson's letter to the President, dated Nov. 18, is a long document covering the history of the efforts of the United States Government toward the adjustment of international disputes through judicial means, and ending with the recommendation that our diplomatic representative in Switzerland be authorized to sign the protocols.

Our Early Leadership Reviewed.

Among Secretary Stimson's historical references it is mentioned that, in 1907, President Roosevelt and Elihu Root, then Secretary of State, sought to have the Second Hague Conference provide for the establishment of a permanent tribunal composed of judges who were judicial officers and nothing else, and who received adequate salaries to devote their entire time to determining international cases "under a sense of judicial responsibility."

Mr. Stimson praises the World Court for its work in the interest of adjusting international controversies.

He sketches the submission to the Senate in 1923 of President Harding's recommendation that this government adhere to the World Court protocol, the Senate's action in giving its advice and consent after nearly three years and an explanation of the five reservations attached by the Senate to its resolution of adherence.

A conference of adhering nations at Geneva in September, 1926, to which the United States was invited but which it declined to attend, accepted the Senate reservations except part of one and all of another, the latter being Reservation 5, imposing various conditions with respect to the right of the court to render advisory opinions.

The conditions under which the member nations would sanction the Senate's reservations were not acceptable to this government, President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg holding that no proposal to modify the dictum of the Senate could be entertained.

In February, 1928, however, a movement to seek a method of overcoming objections to Reservation 5 on the part of the member nations was begun in the Senate, and the matter again was taken up at Geneva in connection with a meeting there of the committee of jurists which had drafted the original protocol of the court, Mr. Root among them.

Composition of Root Formula.

Out of that gathering came the acceptance of reservation No. 5 under the Root formula to safeguard the interests of the United States with respect to advisory opinions of the Court in cases in which this government "has or claims to have an interest." The words "claims to have" had been the stumbling block in the consideration given to the matter by the member nations.

In the opinion of Secretary Stimson, the Court, by its procedure in the past, already had safeguarded the United States with respect to rendering it amenable to an advisory opinion. Commenting in this connection, he says:

"If the United States has an interest in any matter which another nation is seeking to bring up for an advisory opinion which is of so vital a character that the United States would not be satisfied to appear and present its interest to the court, but desires to shut off all consideration of the court therefrom by its objection, that matter, in all human probability, will have already attained the character of a dispute or controversy between the two nations, in which case the United States would already have a veto power under the new Article 68 of the Charter Statute, which adopts and enacts the spirit of the Eastern Carolia decision (by which the court, in an issue between Finland and Russia, refused to act because Russia declined to take part in the proceedings.)"

Regarding what he calls the "very slight possibility" that the court would act without our consent in a matter in which we even "claimed to have an interest," Mr. Stimson shows how the United States is to be notified whenever an advisory opinion of any sort is asked of the court; and if the United States makes objection to having the opinion rendered, "there shall be attributed to that objection the same force and effect as attaches to a vote against asking for the opinion given by a member of the Council or the Assembly [of the League of Nations]."

"The objections which caused the Senate reservations have been met," Mr. Stimson concludes; "* * * and in the extremely unlikely event of our being unable to persuade the majority of the Council or the Assembly that our interest is real and that the request for the opinion should not proceed, we may withdraw from membership in the court without any imputation of unfriendliness."

Other reasons are advanced by Secretary Stimson in advising the President to authorize our adherence to the court, among them the advances made in the interest of preserving international peace, with especial emphasis on the Kellogg pact renouncing war as an instrument of national policy.

TEXT OF STIMSON LETTER.

The text of Secretary Stimson's letter to the President is:

Nov. 18, 1929.

The President,
The White House.

My dear Mr. President:

There is now awaiting our decision the question of whether this government shall sign the Protocol of Adherence to the Statute of the World Court, on the conditions set out in the resolution of the United States Senate of Jan. 27, 1926, as this resolution was accepted by the recent protocol of Sept. 14, 1929, now open for signature in Geneva. Closely involved in this decision is the question whether the United States shall also sign the protocol revising the Statute of the World Court, also dated Sept. 14, 1929, and also open for signature at Geneva.

This latter protocol provides for certain amendments to the charter statute of the Court which have an important bearing upon the question of our adherence. Practically all of the nations which are signatories to the World Court have already signed these protocols, during the past few weeks in which they have been open for signature, fifty nations having signed the former and forty-nine the latter. The only nations which have not signed the former to date are Albania, Costa Rica, Ethiopia and Lithuania.

For over half a century the United States has taken a leading part in promoting the judicial settlement of international disputes. Not only have its citizens been prominent in advocating such settlement as a substitute for war, but the government itself, has participated in many important arbitrations; and our Presidents, as well as our Foreign Ministers, have frequently acted as arbitrators in such disputes between other nations.

Permanent Arbitration Court.

In 1899 the American delegation to the first Hague conference was active in securing the establishment of the so-called Permanent Court of Arbitration, which still exists and in which we are members. Our government, under Mr. Roosevelt, submitted to that body its first case, a controversy between the United States and Mexico.

This so-called Court, however, was but a step in the direction proposed by the American delegation. It is not constituted as a real court, holding regular meetings and sessions. It is a mere panel or list of about one hundred and fifty names of gentlemen who have been selected by the member States as qualified and available to sit as arbiters in any disputes which may be submitted to them. Whenever a controversy is desired to be referred to it, the arbitrators who are to sit are selected by the parties, are called out from their private lives, and the case is then referred to them.

In 1907 the American delegates to the second Hague conference were instructed by President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Root to work for the development of this Court of Arbitration "into a permanent tribunal composed of judges who are judicial officers and nothing else, who are paid adequate salaries, who have no other occupation, and who are devoting their entire time to the trial and decision of international cases by judicial methods and under a sense of judicial responsibility."

Owing to difficulties in agreeing upon the method of selecting the judges, they were unsuccessful then; but such a Court was finally established in 1920 under the name of the Permanent Court of International Justice, commonly referred to as the World Court. Its charter was framed by a group of distinguished jurists in which the United States was represented; and it is interesting to remember that the difficulty which had prevented the establishment of the Court in 1907 was solved by the suggestion of the American member, Mr. Root, based upon the analogy of a precedent in the creation of our own Federal Constitution, the so-called Connecticut Compromise.

Although this final movement which established the Court was initiated by the League of Nations, the Court took its existence and became effective not by the action of the League, but under a statute and protocol separately signed by over fifty States, not all of whom are League members. It thus owes its existence to the independent authority of those signatory States.

Eight Years of Accomplishment.

This Court has now been in existence for over eight years. It has rendered sixteen judgments in controverted cases and has also delivered sixteen advisory opinions on questions which have been submitted to it. Several of these judgments have been rendered in cases which were of great importance and in which bitter international controversies had existed. Both the judgments and the advisory opinions have rendered important service in settling such controversies and, thus, in preserving peace.

Confidence in the Court has so developed that its business is rapidly increasing, and one of the chief purposes of the proposed amendments of its charter statute above mentioned is to provide for more continuous sessions and in other respects to increase the importance and efficiency of the tribunal.

Unless a State has signed the so-called "optional clause," granting to the Court compulsory jurisdiction over it in certain classes of legal disputes (which it is not proposed in the present protocol that the United States shall sign), the Court can take jurisdiction only over cases which the parties themselves refer to it. It has no power to draw an unwilling suitor before it, even if that suitor has a signatory of the Court, and render judgment in respect to such suitor. The Court simply stands ready and available as a carefully chosen and experienced tribunal to which the nations of the world, if and when they choose, can refer their disputes for settlement, without the ordinary delays and difficulties which accompany the selection of arbitrators.

Under the terms of the original charter of the Court, the United States is already a competent suitor to appear before it. The only obligation which we would assume by joining the Court is one which we ourselves have asked for in the Senate reservations—namely, that we should pay our appropriate share of the expenses of its maintenance. I am informed that the largest contribution by any State has been but little more than $35,000 a year, and although these expenses will be slightly increased in the future by an increase in the number and salaries of the judges, this obligation in any event will be comparatively trivial.

The only other changes in our present status as suitor which would be effected by our joinder would be to give us new rights and privileges. If we join the Court, we shall be admitted, under the protocol of adherence, to participate on an equality with the other signatory States in the election of the judges of the Court. We should also be assured that no amendment of the charter of the Court could be made without our consent.

Would Resume Leadership.

Far exceeding the weight of these legal considerations, by joining the Court the United States would resume its time-honored place of leadership in the great movement for the judicial settlement of international controversies, and in the future, through its representatives and jurists, exercise its proper influence in the development of the kind of court which our representatives proposed to The Hague conference more than thirty years ago.

These considerations were pointed out by my predecessor, Mr. Hughes, in his letter to President Harding on Feb. 17, 1923, advising adherence to the Court. On Feb. 24, 1923, President Harding submitted to the Senate the proposal of adhesion. On March 3, 1925, a resolution was passed by the House of Representatives stating that it desired "to express its cordial approval of the said Court and an earnest desire that the United States give early adherence to the protocol establishing the same," and expressing its readiness to participate in the enactment of such legislation as would necessarily follow such approval.

On Jan. 27, 1926, the Senate gave its advice and consent to adherence to the Court upon five reservations. As to the first four of these reservations, no objection has been raised by any of the other signatories of the Court, and they are accepted in toto in the proposed protocol of adherence now before us.

The fifth reservation related to advisory opinions and was as follows:

5. That the Court shall not render any advisory opinion except publicly after due notice to all States adhering to the Court and to all interested States and after public hearing or opportunity for hearing given to any State concerned; nor shall it without the consent of the United States entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest.

As to the first half of this reservation, Article Four of the protocol of adherence now open for signature provides:

The Court shall render advisory opinions in public session after notice and opportunity for hearing, substantially as provided in the now existing Articles 73 and 74 of the rules of the Court.

These rules provide for public hearings by the Court and advisory opinions after notice to all member States or States admitted to appear before the Court (which would cover the case of the United States whether we adhered or not). They provide for an opportunity for argument on the part of all States notified or asking to be heard and for a public delivery of the opinion in open court.

Furthermore, these rules will be incorporated into the charter statute of the Court in the second protocol revising the original statute, which, as I first pointed out in this letter, is also open for our signature. By thus incorporating these rules, they become irrepealable and permanent; and therefore, if we adhere to the Court, these provisions for notice and public hearing cannot be withdrawn without our consent.

One of Chief Dangers Removed.

By these provisions one of the chief dangers which has influenced American opinion in its objection to the rendering of advisory opinions by the Court has been removed. America's fear lest the opinion of the Court could be sought by some nations and rendered by the Court in private, and that other nations might thus suddenly find their interests compromised by a decision of the Court on a question in which they are involved, no longer has any foundation. The Court in rendering advisory opinions must follow substantially the same procedure as is followed in controversies, or as they are termed in the rules of the Court, "contentious cases." It must set in public; it must give general notice of its proposed hearing, in order that any one who is interested may have an opportunity to be heard; and it must hear them.

But the Court and the pending protocol go even further. In April, 1925, the Court was requested to render an advisory opinion in respect to the effect of the treaty of peace between Finland and Russia in reference to the autonomy of Eastern Carolia. When this request came before the Court in January, it was found that Russia, although notified of the pending hearing, refused to take any part in the proceedings.

Thereupon the Court refused to go forward with the matter or to render any advisory opinion, saying that it found it to be "well established in international law that no State can without its consent be compelled to submit its dispute to other States, whether to mediation or to arbitration, or to any other means of pacific settlement. * * * The Court, being a court of justice, cannot even in giving advisory opinions depart from the essential rules guiding their activities as a Court."

By this ruling the Court assimilated its practice in advisory opinions where a dispute was involved between any nations to the same rule provided by its charter to govern contentious cases. It will not act unless the parties to such dispute request it to act. This rule of obviously laid down by the Court itself will now be made imperative and binding upon it by an amendment in the new proposed protocol of revision which is before us for signature. That protocol contains new Article 68 reading as follows:

In the exercise of its advisory functions the Court shall further be guided by the provisions of the Statute which apply to contentious cases to the extent which it recognizes them to be applicable.

The Court, having already recognized this principle of contentious cases to be applicable, is required by this provision in its charter now to forever hereafter act accordingly.

The report of the Committee of Jurists of Sept. 13, 1929, recommending these amendments, sets forth the reasons for these amendments as to advisory opinions. The amendments are shown to be general in character, so as to include all nations; they also show that the reason why it is proposed to assimilate the procedure on advisory opinions to the procedure on contentious cases is the fundamental reason that unless both parties to a dispute are present and heard, the opinion will not carry any weight. The report, therefore, makes it clear beyond peradventure that the consent of the disputant nations is required in every case as a pre-condition to the granting of an advisory opinion involving any dispute.

By this ruling and amendment another fear as to advisory opinions is removed. If the United States is involved in any dispute or controversy, to whatever degree, with another country, that matter cannot be brought before the World Court without the consent of the United States, even for the purpose of obtaining an advisory opinion.

It will be noticed that these last considerations fully meet the most important portion of the last half of the fifth reservation of the Senate. They give to the United States what amounts to an absolute veto upon an advisory opinion touching "any dispute * * * in which the United States has an interest."

There remains only that portion of the last sentence in the fifth reservation, which provides that the Court shall not without the consent of the United States, entertain a request for an advisory opinion touching any question in which the United States merely claims an interest and where the claim does not amount to a dispute or controversy. It will be obvious at once that the scope of this remaining clause is necessarily very narrow.

If the United States has an interest in any matter which another nation is seeking to bring up for an advisory opinion which is of so vital a character that the United States would not be satisfied to appear and present its interest to the Court, but desires to shut off all consideration of the Court therefrom by its objection, that matter, in all human probability, will have already attained the character of a dispute or controversy between the two nations, in which case the United States would already have a veto power under the new Article 68 of the Charter Statute, which adopts and enacts the spirit of the Eastern Carolia decision.

Otherwise, we should perforce be brought to assume that the United States under this reservation was seeking rather arbitrarily to interfere with its veto in the affairs of other nations in which it had a very slight interest—a conclusion which is not lightly to be assumed. Therefore, I think it a fair assumption to say that the field covered by this last remaining portion of the Fifth Reservation is very narrow, and the need for such a prohibition unlikely ever to arise.

Yet this very slight possibility is elaborately guarded against by the new Protocol of Adherence. So anxious have the framers of this protocol been to meet even the most unlikely desires of the United States that they have devoted the major portion of the protocol to providing machinery to meet this contingency.

Advisory opinions can only be rendered by the Court on the request of the Council or the Assembly of the League of Nations. Article 5 of the proposed protocol provides that the Secretary General of the League shall inform the United States of any proposal for obtaining an advisory opinion of the Court which is pending before the Council or the Assembly, with a view to obtaining an exchange of views between the United States and the Council or Assembly as to whether an interest of the United States is affected.

Then when a request for such an opinion actually comes to the Court the Registrar of the Court shall notify the United States and give a reasonable time in which a statement of the United States concerning the request will be received. If necessary, the Court will grant a stay of proceedings in respect to the request for such time as is necessary to enable an exchange of views to take place.

In considering a request for an advisory opinion, if the United States makes objection, there shall be attributed to that objection the same force and effect as attaches to a vote against asking for the opinion given by a member of the Council or the Assembly.

Right to Withdraw Provided.

After all these steps have been taken, if it appears that no agreement can be reached and the request for the opinion is still persisted in, and the United States is unwilling to forego its objection, the United States can withdraw immediately from the Court "without any imputation of unfriendliness or unwillingness to cooperate generally for peace or good-will."

A mere recital of these precautions makes it apparent how remote the contingency is that the United States will ever be constrained to exercise its right of withdrawal. It may be suggested here that this contingency of withdrawal might place the United States in an awkward or embarrassing position, and thus submit it to moral pressure to permit a question to which it really objects. The real hazard is more likely to be the other way. The influence of the United States is so great, the effect of its mere suggestion of withdrawal would be so embarrassing to the other nations, that there is far more likelihood of their submitting to an ill-founded objection on our part than of their forcing us to withdraw when we really had a legitimate reason for opposition to a question.

If any proof on this point were needed, the extreme consideration which has been shown in this protocol to the objections of the United States and the promptness and unanimity with which the protocol for our adherence to the Court has already been signed by practically all of the nations of the world who are members of the Court would supply it.

It seems to me, therefore, that the dangers which seemed to inhere in the rendering of advisory opinions by the Court at the time the question was last presented to this government in 1926 have now been entirely removed, both by the action of the Court itself and by the provisions of these new protocols. The objections which caused the Senate reservations have been met. Advisory opinions can no longer be a matter of secret procedure but must follow the forms and receive the safeguards of all formal court proceedings in contentious cases.

Whenever a dispute to which we are a party is involved, no opinion on that dispute can be rendered unless we consent. When we claim an interest, although no dispute exists, we can if we so desire, bring our great influence to bear against the rendering of such an opinion with the same legal standing as if we were a member of the Council or the Assembly of the League of Nations; and, in the extremely unlikely event of our being unable to persuade the majority of the Council or the Assembly that our interest is real and that the request for the opinion should not proceed, we may withdraw from membership in the Court without any imputation of unfriendliness.

The general situation in the world has also changed since 1926 in a way which renders the World Court more vitally important than ever before. Since that date practically all the nations of the world have by the execution of the Pact of Paris renounced war as an instrument of national policy and have solemnly convenanted that "the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts, of whatever nature or of whatever origin they may be, which may arise among them shall never be sought except by pacific means."

By this event not only has the need of developing judicial means instead of war to settle the inevitable controversies between nations become more pressing, but it has become even more important to establish and clarify the standards and rules of international conduct by which such controversies can be prevented or minimized.

Never has there been a period in the world's history when there was such an imperative need for the development of international law by an international court. Admitting freely all that must be accomplished toward this end by the quasi-legislative action of international conferences which may meet to discuss and agree upon international compacts and codes, it is nevertheless to the judicial action of a World Court, passing upon the individual controversies which arise between nations, that we must look not only for the application and interpretation of these compacts and codes but for the flexible and intelligent development in this way of all the subsidiary principles and detailed rules which will surely be found necessary in such application.

Supreme Court an Example.

No people are more familiar with this need than the American people, or have greater reason for confidence in this judicial method of developing the law of conduct between separate States. They have seen their own Supreme Court wisely and flexibly work out the myriad difficult and changing problems which in the course of 140 years have grown out of the compact in which thirteen sovereign States in 1787 agreed to settle their relations by pacific means. And they have seen that court settle these problems between States with no other power or sanction than the mandate of such a compact and the force of public opinion.

We cannot frankly face the limitations which inevitably inhere in the process of enacting laws or creating public compacts so evident even in domestic legislation; so certain under the much more difficult conditions of international conferences—without appreciating that in this process of interpretation and application the World Court will perform take a vital part in the development of international law. The standards set up by international conferences will hardly be able safely to go beyond the statement of broad general principles; the development of details will necessarily grow out of the application of such principles by the Court. Here, again, to the American brought up under the common law, patiently and intelligently evolved by six hundred years of judicial decisions, this will be familiar as the method by which a system of law can be most safely, flexibly and intelligently produced.

In this work, protected as they are now protected, advisory opinions rendered on questions before they have ripened into bitter quarrels and wounded pride, can play a most useful part. Such opinions will be rendered with all the advantages of full argument from opposing interests, but before those interests have settled into dangerous international grievances.

Not only do the records of the World Court show how useful such opinions have already proved to be during the eight years of the Court's existence, in the interpretation of international treaty relations in Europe, but the rather similar form of obtaining declaratory judgments of courts upon domestic legislative questions is becoming a not unfamiliar practice in a number of the United States.

In the great future work of transforming the civilization of this world from a basis of war and force to one of peace founded upon justice, we today stand at the threshold. But it is already evident that in this work the World Court is destined to perform a most fruitful and important part. It is also clear that such an agency is more closely in line with the traditions and habit of thought of America than of any other nation.

Traditional Policy Not Jeopardized.

And, finally, it is now possible for us to assist in the support and development of this judicial agent without in the slightest degree jeopardizing our traditional policy as a government of not interfering or entangling ourselves in the political policies of foreign States or of relinquishing our traditional attitude as a government toward purely American questions with which we are concerned.

Is there any reason why on such terms our government should not join in the support, moral and financial, of such a Court, or why it should not lend its efforts toward the selection of judges who will act in this great work in accordance with the noble traditions of the American judiciary? Or why our government's great power should not be placed in a position where it can influence for good or check against evil in the future development of the Court's charter and work? I think not.

For all of the foregoing reasons I have the honor to advise you that, in my opinion, the United States can now safely adhere to the Permanent Court of International Justice, and to that end that the American Minister in Berne should be immediately authorized to attach the signature of the United States to both of the protocols above mentioned now open at Geneva for our signature. Inasmuch as the signature of the United States has never been attached to the original protocol of the World Court of 1920, I recommend that he be also authorized to sign that protocol as the formal necessary preliminary to the signature of the United States.

I am, my dear Mr. President, faithfully yours,
(Signed) HENRY L. STIMSON.

ROOSEVELT APPEALS FOR PORTO RICANS

Island Governor Says in Pulpit 60 Per Cent of the Children There Are Underfed.

NO BREAKFASTS FOR MANY

Others Do Without Lunch at School —Colonel Says Gifts There Totaled $1,500 Saturday.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SAN JUAN, P. R., Dec. 8.—To two English-speaking congregations in San Juan today Governor Roosevelt made an appeal in behalf of the island's children, not for observance alone of Golden Rule Sunday, but of application of the Golden Rule 365 days in the year.

"It is a matter of national concern that the children of this island grow up to be healthy, clear-thinking, hard-hitting citizens," said the Governor from the pulpit of St. John's Episcopal Chapel, where he worshipped. "An appeal being made in the United States today by the Golden Rule Foundation for the hungry children of this island is having a response here that gratifies me tremendously. Giving in Porto Rico today hurts, yet I want to tell you that Porto Rico is giving. Up to last night voluntary gifts from the island to the Golden Rule committee totaled fully $1,500, mostly in small amounts —some in very small amounts. But these small contributions probably meant more to the givers than large gifts—they represented personal sacrifice."

From personal observation and official reports made to him the Governor said he was convinced that fully 60 per cent of all the island children were undernourished and partially starved, therefore handicapped in normal development, physically, mentally and morally. Medical examinations at one San Juan school, the Governor said, showed that 67 per cent of the children were underfed, with 40 per cent coming to school without breakfast and about the same proportion going without luncheon, while many, for supper, had no more than a handful of rice, beans and possibly a little codfish.

"In many rural schools I have seen children naturally bright with bodies stunted and minds dulled by lack of food," said the Governor. "Yet these children ten, fifteen and thirty years from now will be grown-up citizens, not only of the island but of the nation. It is but a patriotic duty to see that they have a fair chance."

Before going to St. John's, the Governor spoke briefly at the Union Church, where he said that not only were individuals observing Golden Rule Sunday, but that parent-teachers associations, Boy Scouts and other organizations were both giving and working to give the island children a permanently better chance in life.

URGES LAW TO PERMIT SEIZURES IN WARTIME

Representative Patman Seeks an Amendment Allowing Government to Take Over Property.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Representative Patman of Texas, a new member of Congress, will introduce a joint resolution tomorrow proposing an amendment to the Constitution which would permit the Federal Government to take private property for public use in time of war.

"The object of this amendment is to permit Congress to pass laws taking the profit out of war," Mr. Patman said. "I do not believe in war. If we have legislation in advance against the making of profit of any concern, war will be less likely; the money barons and steel magnates will join us in using their influence in preventing war.

"The United States Steel Corporation, during the year 1914, made $23,000,000 profit, and during 1917 it made net profits of $477,000,000, or $1,500,000 a day, or approximately $200,000 an hour. My opinion is that legislation should provide that a concern like the United States Steel Corporation should be required to escheat to the government, for the prosecution of war, all profits.

"The amendment would provide that, when private property is taken for public use during wartime, such property shall be held to have been taken by due process of law, and just compensation shall be held to have been paid therefor if such property is taken and such compensation is paid therefor as Congress may by law prescribe."

BYRD'S GEOLOGISTS SCALING MT. NANSEN

Dr. Gould Reports Finds of "Amazing Interest" in 3-Day Climb Amid Storms.

ON ROCKS 6,500 FEET UP

ANOTHER FLIGHT AT BASE

Captain McKinley, at Altitude of 10,000 Feet, Maps the Entire Bay of Whales.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, Dec. 8.—The Byrd geological party now in the Queen Maud Range have climbed part way up Mount Nansen on the west side of the Axel Heiberg Glacier and Dr. Lawrence Gould, the geologist, who is leading the group, reported findings of "amazing interest."

The party has been working in clouds and snowstorms for the past three days.

Dr. Gould's messages of the past two days read:

"Dec. 6.—Present camp, which we call Camp Sverre Strom and which is west of Mount Betty on Axel Heiberg, is at Lat. 85 degrees 2 minutes S., Long. 155 degrees 30 minutes W. O'Brien, Thorne and I started for Mount Betty today, but heavy fog came up and we had to return.

"Have established our mountain base here. With better weather we shall start up the Glacier tomorrow with two weeks' supplies in an attempt to reach the flat-lying rocks that cap Mount Nansen.

"Just learned about your eastern flight and am very happy about it. Anxious to know what you saw. Heartiest congratulations from your geological party."

Ascend 6,500 Feet to Rocks.

"Dec. 7—Came up west portion of Axel Heiberg yesterday and camped in snowstorm on north side of Mount Nansen.

"Rocks very difficult to reach, crevasses on all borders of the glacier, but we climbed 6,500 feet up the flank of Mount Nansen today and found a series of rocks that has told us a geological story of such amazing interest as to make the whole trip worth the effort.

"We have only started. Have been in clouds most of time for last three days, and it greatly interferes with our work. Camp tonight at Camp Martin Ronne, last night at Camp Bernt Balchen."

The entire Bay of Whales, with its inlets and deeply crevassed areas running east and west from the bottom of the bay, formations of great interest which can be seen in their entirety and relationship to each other only from the air, was mapped yesterday by Captain Ashley C. McKinley.

He used the Fairchild plane and Harold June was the pilot. William C. Haines, the meteorologist, went along to help Captain McKinley check the drift.

When they reached an altitude of 10,000 feet Captain McKinley found that to map the entire bay with vertical shots would take several days of flying, because of its enormous extent due to inlets running into the Barrier at many points. So he outlined the edge of the bay, sixty miles, with vertical photographs and then from one side took an oblique photograph which takes in the whole area.

Accurate Detail of the Survey.

Accurate control points have been placed around the bay and, by means of astronomical observations at each of them and chaining some of them in by surveying on the surface, the bay has been mapped as accurately as any region in civilization.

Aerial maps without surface control points can only relatively be called maps or surveys, although they give an approximately accurate picture of the relationship of the various parts of the area surveyed. They present a record the accuracy of which can be calculated within a reasonable distance.

But a map such as has been made of the Bay is in every sense of the word an accurate map and gives details which cannot be obtained in any other way.

HOBBS DOUBTS SHIFT OF SOUTH POLE CAIRNS

Michigan Professor Believes Capt. Joyce Confused Polar Plateau With Ross Ice Barrier.

Special to The New York Times.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Dec. 8.—Professor William H. Hobbs, geologist, explorer and leader of the Greenland expeditions of the University of Michigan, has taken issue with Captain E. M. Joyce's statement that the cairns of Captain Robert F. Scott and Captain Roald Amundsen at the South Pole had drifted four or five miles.

In a statement declaring his reasons for believing that bodies upon the surface of the Polar Plateau "maintain their position indefinitely," Professor Hobbs says:

"The statement of Captain E. M. Joyce as published in Friday's Times that the cairns left at the South Pole by Captains Amundsen and Scott may have since drifted a distance of four or five miles and that they must have been buried in snow to the depth of many feet calls, I think, for a correction.

"Captain Joyce has had so long and so varied experience in that Antarctic that it is a matter for surprise that he should have confused the Ross Barrier of shelf ice with the inland or plateau glacier ice on which the pole is located.

"The former, as first shown by Captain Scott, is floating upon the sea, above which it rises to a nearly uniform average height of about 150 feet, whereas the inland ice is a true continental glacier (like the similar one over Greenland), is dammed back by a mountain wall and rises to a height of about 10,000 feet.

"The Ross Barrier is largely of snow and has an outward drift to the northeast (at least at Depot 8, the one point where measured) of about a quarter of a mile per year. It is also being deepened by about a foot of snow each year.

"For the plateau ice, on the contrary where the South Pole is found, there is no evidence of lateral movement and every reason to believe that bodies upon the surface of the glacier maintain their position indefinitely, if we except the near-marginal portions of the glacier. In my belief there is no reason to suppose that the snow surface at the South Pole is rising.

"Wholly different conditions surround the North Pole, and Perry's cairn, which was built on shifting pack ice, has, it is safe to say, drifted at least a hundred miles from its first position."

SAY WOMAN BEGGAR HAS A FLAT AND A MAID

Two Boys Who Wheel Her About Tell Magistrate She Often Made $25 a Day.

A woman beggar who received enough at her trade to maintain a well-furnished apartment in the theatrical district was taken to night court last night. It was said that she kept a personal maid and four expensive pets—a German police dog and three small puppies.

The woman is Edna Townsend and the apartment is on the fifth floor of 117 West Forty-eighth Street. She was taken into court by Patrolman Frederick Gleason the day after he had arrested two boys who wheeled her about the streets while she solicited alms. Their testimony that their employer often made $25 a day led to her appearance in court.

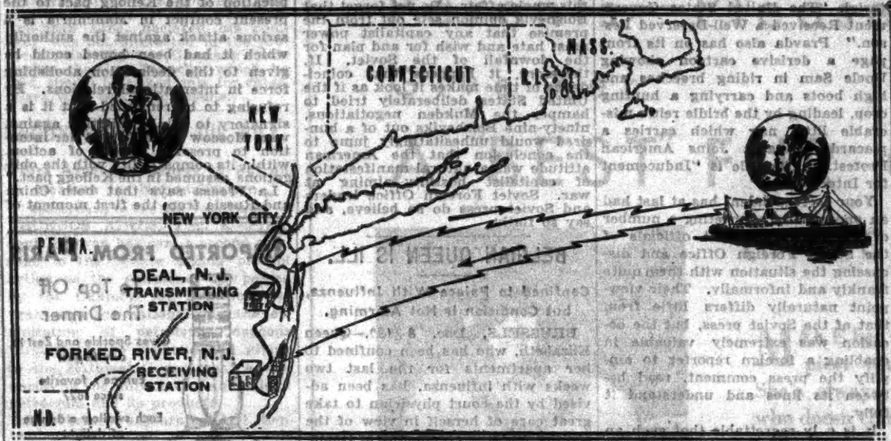
The boys, Theodore Burk, 18 years old, and Alton Toisen, 17, both of Baltimore, said they lived at the woman's home, that she had paid their fares from Baltimore, where she used to live, and that she made anywhere from $10 to $25 a day.

Magistrate Dreyer had put off the case to last night, when the woman was in court. She said she had come from Baltimore three months ago, but denied that her earnings were as large as the boys said they were. The woman who was said to be her maid—Evelyn Elliott—also was present, but contended she worked for the woman only as a kindness. She got nothing for it, she said. The boys, however, thought that her salary was about $15 a week.

The two boys declared that the woman paid one of them, Burk, $1 a day and his room and meals, but that the other got only the room and meals. Burk had been working for her for almost three years, the other not so long. Magistrate Dreyer asked the woman, "Why don't you pay their way back to Baltimore," and she said she had no money. He then held the pair until Dec. 11, until something could be done for them, and gave the woman a suspended sentence, telling her to leave town.

NEW PHONE SERVICE LINKING SHIPS AT SEA WITH SHORE FORMALLY LAUNCHED.

Scene in American Telephone and Telegraph Company's office at 195 Broadway yesterday as President W. S. Gifford talked by phone with Commodore Harold Cunningham of the Leviathan, 200 miles at sea. Seated at table, left to right, David Lawrence, president Consolidated Press Association; Kent Cooper, general manager Associated Press; Lieut. Commander R. H. Blair, Atlantic Fleet; H. A. Lafount, Federal Radio Commission; P. W. Chapman, president United States Lines; Mr. Gifford, J. W. Sheedy, president United States Lines and Operations; Lieut. Commander T. A. N. Craven, Radio Division, United States Navy; Captain Guy Hill, acting chief engineer, Federal Radio Commission; Arthur Batcheller, United States Supervisor of Radio, New York.



How wireless telephone messages travel by radio from ship at sea to the land receiving station at Forked River, N. J., whar they are transferred to land wires for transmission te the New York telephone exchange. Outgoing messages are transmitted by short wave radio from Deal Beach N. J. to the ship.

PHONE TO LEVIATHAN 200 MILES AT SEA

circuit was switched over to Washington and Representative Fred Britten of Illinois, chairman of the House Committee on Naval Affairs, after the customary pleasantries on the weather and the perfection of the reception, read a formal speech of congratulation.

When he finished Commodore Cunningham remarked:

"One of the passengers just came in and said 'I'll bet that's Britten talking.' I don't know whether he recognized your voice or what."

"Or what, probably," said Mr. Britten.

"Give my love to Mrs. Britten," the commodore requested.

"I will not give her your love. I'll give her your best wishes," replied Mr. Britten.

"All right," said the commodore, "I'll have to attend to the matter myself."

A year ago Mrs. Britten underwent an emergency appendicitis operation on the Leviathan.

After Mr. Britten's first conversation yesterday, he picked up the receiver and got a second connection with the liner in less than two minutes, he reported.

Formal Greetings Exchanged.

The formal greeting of Mr. Gifford to the Leviathan's master, officially opening the service, follows:

"Commodore Cunningham, I am glad to open this service with you, the senior ranking officer of the American Merchant Marine, and to the Leviathan, the largest American ship afloat. Transportation and communication have been linked together since the beginning of history and we are glad to continue that old relation by extending the long lines of the Bell System aboard ship so that any one on the Leviathan can talk to any one ashore."

Commodore Cunningham's greeting follows:

"Mr. Gifford, the Leviathan is indeed fortunate in being the first vessel to have the commercial wireless telephone installed for commercial use. Up to now our passengers have enjoyed every comfort, convenience and luxury that the finest hotels in the world can provide, and now they can demand nothing more when they can pick up a telephone receiver aboard this great American flagship and talk to their relatives and friends back home. Permit me to congratulate you and your staff for this very splendid achievement."

At 12:50 P. M. the telephone bell on the desk of the city editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES rang and the voice that came over the wire said:

"This is Mr. Summitt on the steamship Leviathan, 200 miles at sea. We're having a nice, sunshiny day. Everybody is wearing white flannels. Golf games are being played on deck. It's a real Summer voyage."

"Did you have any trouble getting away in the fog last night?" asked the city editor.

"We had no trouble at all. I can hear you as plainly as if you were in the next stateroom. Is everything O. K.?" asked Mr. Summitt.

"Everything is O. K.," said the city editor. "Hope you have a pleasant voyage."

Not Yet Linked to Staterooms.

Although the Leviathan has the largest telephone exchange afloat, the ship to shore service has not yet been connected with the telephones in the staterooms. Yesterday's conversations were carried on from a room set aside for the purpose on B deck. Later, it is believed, the Leviathan's telephone system can be hooked in. In clear, static-free weather it is expected that two-way communication can be maintained up to a distance of 1,500 miles—about a two-and-a-half day sail from New York. When conditions are less favorable the distance will be shorter. The rate ranges from $7 a minute to $11, according to the part of the country in which the shore telephone is located.

The problem involved in ship-to-shore telephone communication, Mr. Gifford explained, is more complicated than one which already has been overcome in transatlantic telephony. On shore, he pointed out, the receiving and sending stations can be located far enough apart to avoid interference, while on the ship one point has to serve for sending and receiving. Space for antennae is limited and a great deal of technical work had to be done to overcome the interference from ordinary wireless and other electrical apparatus aboard. For the present the Leviathan is the only ship equipped for ship-to-shore telephone service on a commercial scale, Mr. Gifford said, but others will be equipped as the demand warrants expansion.

Calls Sir Thomas Lipton.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 8.—Soon after the "ship-to-shore" telephone service was opened today, William H. Rankin, a guest at the Hotel Chalfonte here, put in a call for Sir Thomas Lipton aboard the Leviathan. Sir Thomas, who will return next June with the Shamrock V, declared that the thrill he experienced in the conversation could only be exceeded by capture of the America's Cup, according to Mr. Rankin.

SENATORS STRIVE FOR TAX AGREEMENT

Coalition Group Willing to Lay Aside Tariff Today, but Smoot Opposes Procedure.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8 (AP).—Senate leaders sought an arrangement today for early disposition of the $160,000,000 tax reduction resolution, but the program was in doubt tonight.

Spokesmen for the Democratic-insurgent-Republican coalition, which has control of the tariff measure, offered to set that bill aside tomorrow under an agreement that the tax resolution be taken up immediately and voted on by Tuesday at the latest.

Senator Watson, the Republican leader, who sought an arrangement today on procedure, took this offer under consideration, but Chairman Smoot of the Finance Committee, who has charge of the tax resolution, was determined tonight to go ahead with the tariff bill first.

However, it appeared likely that the question of priority of tax or the tariff legislation would be thrashed out tomorrow on the floor when Senator Smoot reports the resolution in the same form as it was adopted by the House last week.

Adoption by the Senate of the tax resolution without amendment seemed assured with both Democratic and Republican leaders supporting it. Republican insurgents are considering an attempt to modify the resolution, but they realize that such an effort probably will be futile without support from the Democrats. They do not favor the reduction in the corporation tax applying on this year's income, believing the corporations already have passed this tax on to the consumers.

Senators Simmons of North Carolina and Harrison of Mississippi, ranking Democrats on the Finance Committee, announced they would favor immediate consideration of the tax resolution. Senator Simmons said he would agree to this if the Senate would agree to vote on the resolution after one day or two days of debate and then return to the tariff.

Senator Borah looked favorably on the program, provided the Senate would agree to return to the tariff measure not later than Wednesday.

Senator Smoot said "we will go ahead tomorrow with the tariff bill and we will keep at it until we know when we are going to finish." Calling attention to the fact that income taxes are not due until next March 15, Senator Smoot said there would be ample time for disposition of the tax resolution.

There is a possibility that Mr. Hoover may be asked to indicate whether he wants the tax cut put through immediately or to have another attempt made to dispose of the tariff.

URGES FEDERAL COURT IN THE CIVIC CENTRE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—In an effort to settle the controversy between the city of New York and the Federal Government over the removal of the old postoffice, Senator Wagner will introduce a bill tomorrow to direct the exchange of the old postoffice site opposite the City Hall for a site in New York's civic centre, in the vicinity of the new County Court House.

He will propose the erection on the new site by the Federal Government of a suitable building devoted exclusively to the purposes of a Federal court house.

The negotiations, which have been in progress since 1922, have failed thus far, in Mr. Wagner's opinion, because of the attempt to secure a site that would serve the divergent needs of a court house and postoffice.

He declared himself in favor of a plan for a separate court house building in appropriate surroundings, designed to accommodate the expanding judicial business of the Southern District of New York and the Circuit Court of Appeals. He also let it be known that Chief Justice Taft of the Supreme Court concurred in the proposal for a separate court house.

"At the present time," Senator Wagner said, "the Federal Government pays $62,000 a year in rent for quarters in various buildings to house judicial activities that ought to be under a single roof. It is a measure of economy to effect such a result.

"The branch postoffice should be located where it will best serve the needs of the local business community.

"The court house requires a separate location, different kind of construction, and an individual type of architecture which will lend dignity and beauty to the city, and make possible proper decorum and efficiency in the conduct of judicial business."

ASKS LIBERAL GROUPS TO FORM FEDERATION

J. H. Holmes Would Include Socialists, Independent Voters and Others—Hillquit Objects.

A federation of liberal organizations, including the Socialist party, trade unions, social settlement groups and non-partisan and independent voters, to capture the political machinery of New York City, was proposed by John Haynes Holmes in a discussion last night with Morris Hillquit, Socialist leader, at the Community Church. The subject of the forum was "Socialism and Non-Partisanship in New York: Can They Get Together?"

Mr. Holmes, contending that the political control of New York City should be wrested from Tammany Hall to assure a more peaceful and comfortable city administration, said no time could be more auspicious than the present, with the Republican party defeated in the recent election and liberal sentiment strongly favoring the Socialist leader, Norman Thomas.

He denied that he had ever meant to suggest that the Socialist party change its name or organization in any way, as recently reported. He based his proposed program for a federation upon the premise that the Socialist party should maintain its entity, but "subordinate" itself to the advantage of a federation, such as the present British Labor party exemplifies.

Mr. Hilquit refused to admit the practicability of Mr. Holmes's plan saying the trade unions and social settlement groups could never be induced to connect themselves in a federation with the Socialist party so long as the latter maintained its present principles. He suggested that the present group of liberal and non-partisan voters in this city organize themselves into a definite party, with definite party principles, and that the two groups, Socialists and Liberals, should act together in capturing political organizations not only in New York City but in national elections.

Scientists Tell How to Live Longer

In the United States Registration Area there were reported in 1926—the latest available statistics—1,285 927 deaths.

	Deaths
Heart and Circulation	237,010
Kidney disease	106,311
Cancer	99,883
Tuberculosis	91,568
Apoplexy	90,167
Diabetes	18,881
	643,770

Inasmuch as this Registration Area represents but 89.8% of our population, the total number of deaths from these chronic troubles throughout the country is more than 700,000 annually.

Span Of Life Is Shortening

Although it is probable that 50% of these deaths are preventable or postponable, they are increasing each year. This is reflected in a rising death rate at middle life and later as shown by the latest census figures given below:

Loss in Expectation of Life at Certain Ages
(U. S. Registration States)

Age	1921	1927	Loss
37	32.86	31.47	1.39 years
47	25.01	23.68	1.33 "
57	17.72	16.57	1.15 "
67	11.50	10.60	.90 "

The rational measure of correction in connection with this life-waste is the periodic health examination designed to detect the early signs of trouble in time to check or cure it.

Overwhelming Scientific Endorsement

There is probably no measure for the benefit of both men and women generally that has received such overwhelming scientific endorsement as that of a yearly health examination. Men and women who ignore this simple measure of protecting their health are passing up the best means they could employ to insure themselves a long and pleasant life.

By such an examination, minor defects that would otherwise develop into full-fledged diseases can be detected and corrected. Faulty living habits that cause organic strain can be noted, and the various types of infection that constantly injure the tissues and cause organic disease can be located and attended to.

The Life Extension Institute was organized in 1913 to interest men and women in these periodic health examinations and in more healthful living habits. At its Head Offices in New York City, Boston and Chicago the Institute has assembled every scientific facility necessary to the making of these critical and searching health surveys.

Sixteen Rules Of Health

If you will send in the coupon below, the Institute will send you many interesting free reprints on this subject including the "Sixteen Rules Of Health" and the free booklets "How to Live Long" and "Hygiene at Middle Life". Your inquiry involves no obligation of any kind.

The Institute offers two forms of health examination services—one known as the "Standard" and the other as the "Unlimited." The Standard Service covers a period of one year and includes a standardized survey of your whole life and body, together with adequate health literature and other features. This service is available at the Institute's Head Offices and at the offices of its medical examiners in all the different cities of the United States and Canada and in several foreign countries. There are a number of women physicians on the Institute's head office staffs.

The Unlimited Examination includes all the details of the Standard Service, together with many other valuable tests as a regular part of the service and, in addition, any needed X-ray examination, laboratory test or special examination which it is within the power of the Institute to furnish at its Head Offices.

Only registered and ethically accredited physicians, highly trained and experienced in this work, are selected by the Institute to examine its members. The Institute renders no treatment, performs no operations, but makes a scientific survey of your whole life and body to determine the need for medical treatment, for correction of defects, or better regulation of the ways of living. Every man and woman should be examined at least once a year, either by their own physician, through the Life Extension Institute, or by any other accredited scientific agency where the work can be competently done. FOREIGNERS IN PERIL IN CHINESE REVOLT

Fears Felt for Nanking, Hankow and Ichang as Rebellion Gains New Strength.

EVACUATION IS PREPARED

Ships Stand By for Women and Children—American Warships Ready to Aid.

CHIANG'S DEFEAT EXPECTED

Only Miracle Can Save Him, It Is Felt, but He Denies Resigning and Will Fight On.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 8.—With five areas in revolt throughout the country, the Nanking National Government faces the gravest crisis in its history, threatening the complete overturn of the present administration, unless President Chiang Kai-shek is able to perform a political miracle, which is doubtful in this case.

Saturday's revolt of 1,500 troops at Changchow, half way between Shanghai and Nanking on the railway, has resulted in there being rebel forces to the north and south of the capital, while at Canton, at Ichang on the upper Yangtse, and at Hankow, where General Tang Seng-chih, former Nanking General, is gradually moving on the city, the government is similarly hard pressed.

With the capital denuded of troops, which have been thrown across the Yangtse, the counter-threat of the Anhwei revolters, who are entrenched in large force south of Pengpu, has caused the greatest alarm. The troops cut the railway, looted the city, and collected $75,000 from the Chamber of Commerce before retreating to a point twenty-five miles south.

Troops have already been rushed from Shanghai up the line, and Nanking has withdrawn 30,000 men from Hankow to hold the district around the capital, but the situation is so menacing that foreign authorities have taken measures to evacuate foreign women and children in case of emergency.

No American Vessel Yet.

At present there are eighty American and twenty British women and children there. The British cruiser Suffolk left Shanghai today prepared to evacuate them. Some concern is felt since there is no American vessel there, but the gunboat Tulsa is being diverted there from Shanghai today, while three British destroyers have been ordered from Hongkong on river duty.

At Ichang, where a large force of rebels is besieging the city, foreign women and children have already been evacuated on river steamers, but there are government officials and other foreigners ashore.

Trouble is expected in Shanghai, where 5,000 Chinese troops remain and 15,000 guard the railways, but foreign authorities are following developments closely and are ready to initiate a defensive scheme in case of trouble with local radical organizations. On Saturday Chinese police disarmed the Chinese Volunteer Corps, owing to signs of disaffection.

Nanking has not yet revealed the measures it will adopt to meet this serious situation, but it is apparent that nothing will be done north of the Yangtse, where government troops have taken a position near Pukow, owing to the realization that it will be difficult for the rebels to cross the river, but for the present Nanking is on the defensive here.

The withdrawal of Nanking troops from Hankow leaves that area at the mercy of General Tang Seng-chih, who is reported to have ordered officials to evacuate the district west of Wuhu in three days, which leaves no doubt of his intentions.

Report Railway Is Cut.

Hankow reports declare that the Peking-Hankow Railway has been cut, General Tang Seng-chih holding the rolling stock at Chengchow. In South China, where Nanking recently dispatched a large force commanded by General Ho Yin-ching, an order for retreat has resulted in Kwangsi troops and General Chang Fa-kwei's "Ironsides" occupying Samshui, twenty-five miles from Canton, but there are no signs of local disturbances, as indications point to a political settlement there.

In all this upheaval reports bring no news of Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang, who is apparently sitting quiet, awaiting developments. A Nanking spokesman declares that, while the situation is tense, the worst has passed, and Nanking will deal determinedly with the situation, but in other quarters it is stated that although Nanking may pull through it will be at the cost of important changes in the government because of the dissatisfaction demonstrated by these revolts, all directed at President Chiang Kai-shek and his clique, and it is expected that Wang Ching-wei, Left leader, will emerge to the detriment of General Chiang.

Nanking rejected Mr. Wang Ching-wei's peace overtures during the Nationalist campaign, but it is now felt that he is bound to emerge as a powerful element in the present situation.

Ichang Is Surrounded.

SHANGHAI, Monday, Dec. 9 (AP).—Foreign naval dispatches today from Ichang, important city in Western Hupeh Province on the Yangtse River, said rebellious troops surrounded the city. The condition was described as "serious."

Six foreign gunboats were said to be lying off the city. They included the American warships Guam and Luzon, with the commander of the Yangtze patrol, Rear Admiral Thomas T. Craven, on board. The commander of the British river patrol was expected to arrive today from Hankow.

Rebels at 5 A. M. today again severed the Shanghai-Nanking Railway at a point thirty-five miles from this city. A freight train was wrecked by the removal of rails. This railway had been reopened only last evening after foreign engineers had supervised repairs. The only other communication had been by river boats.

Foreign diplomatic officials, including two Americans, left here at midnight seeking to begin a Sino-French conference concerning possible change of status of the Shanghai Provisional Court. It was reported that this train had arrived safely, passing before the insurgents severed the rails.

General Ho Chien Turns Rebel.

HANKOW, Dec. 8 (AP).—General Ho Chien, provincial chairman of Hunan Province, has declared himself in sympathy with the rebellion against the Nationalist Government. As a result Nationalist Government officials here arrested General Ho Chien's representatives this morning.

CHIANG DENIES RESIGNATION.

Nanking Leader Says He Will Fight Rebels to Dying Breath.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 8 (AP).—The National Government's official news agency, Kuo Min, tonight circulated a purported interview with President Chiang Kai-shek, at Nanking, quoting him as denying he has any intention of resigning.

"Being entrusted with the responsibility of maintaining peace and order, I will fight to my dying breath," the interview quoted the Generalissimo as saying with regard to the outbreaks against the Nanking Government. "As long as there is one loyal soldier I will strive to exterminate the rebels. If there is any person able to preserve peace and complete the revolution, I am willing to sacrifice my personal interests, but for me to retire now will only plunge the country into greater confusion and disaster.

"The National Government has the military situation in hand. Officers and soldiers at the front and responsible local authorities are not supporting the rebels. The nation should support the National Government and not listen to rumors.

"As soon as peace and unity are attained I will attempt internal readjustments. I ask the people to be patient, to endure their suffering a little longer. The government will presevere until all the rebellions are suppressed."

SOVIET PRESS HAILS 'REBUFFS' TO PACT

Foreign Evidence of Critical Attitude Toward Stimson Pleasing to Moscow.

LOSS OF TIME DEPLORED

Waste in Communicating Seen as Drawback—Officials Unbend to Foreign Press.

By WALTER DURANTY.
Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, Dec. 8.—The press continues to gloat over foreign appreciations of the Stimson Soviet note exchange and the principal newspapers feature cabled extracts from the American press unflattering to Secretary Stimson's initiative.

Pravda captions these with a quotation from a Washington Post editorial, "The United States Government Received a Well-Deserved Lesson." Pravda also has on its front page a derisive cartoon showing Uncle Sam in riding breeches and high boots and carrying a hunting crop, leading by the bridle rein a miserable little nag which carries a placard "Panama Joins American Protest." The title is "Inducement for Intervention."

Your correspondent has at last had an opportunity of meeting a number of the most important officials of the Soviet Foreign Office and discussing the situation with them quite frankly and informally. Their viewpoint naturally differs little from that of the Soviet press, but the occasion was extremely valuable in enabling a foreign reporter to amplify the press comment, read between its lines and understand it fully.

It is only regrettable that such an opportunity did not occur earlier, as it is becoming increasingly clear that a misunderstanding—mutual misunderstanding—rather than malevolence, is what is chiefly wrong between the United States and the Soviet Union.

With the exception of the official Tass agency, there are no Soviet correspondents in the United States, but there are plenty of Americans here. It is therefore up to Moscow, rather than Washington, to use the press to smooth out difficulties, and eliminate misunderstandings, in view of the fact that diplomatic communication between the two countries are non-existent.

A brief résumé of Soviet press comment, as interpreted in the light of talks with Foreign Office leaders will explain this further. Izvestiya says today: "Mr. Stimson declares the American note was sent on Nov. 30 and the Soviet-Mukden agreement concluded on Dec. 3. But an exchange of notes between the Soviet Foreign Office and Mukden was published the night of the 27th and known in Washington on the morning of the 28th. We therefore must conclude that either Washington sent the note will full knowledge of the Russo-Mukden negotiations or was misled by insufficient and inadequate information."

Izvestiya says also, "Secretary Stimson's note was sent on Nov. 30. We only received it on Dec. 3. Our reply was sent the same day, but on Dec. 6 Mr. Stimson had not yet received it officially through Paris."

In this connection, perhaps, it is permissible to cite a statement to your correspondent of a Foreign Office representative. "Do not take my words as 'propaganda' for United States recognition. But I would like to ask you why the American Government saw fit to lose three or four days each way—that is, more than a week in all—using Paris as a means of transmission, although it must know the unfriendly attitude of the present French Government to the Soviet Union and the powerful French financial interests connected with the Russo-Asiatic Bank and the Chinese Eastern Railroad?"

Your correspondent cites this remark because it is clear that time has played a most important rôle in this whole affair. Do not forget that Bolshevik opinion sets out from the premise that any capitalist power must hate and wish for and plan for the downfall of the Soviet. If, therefore, it happens that coincidence of time makes it look as if the United States deliberately tried to hamper the Mukden negotiations, ninety-nine Bolsheviks out of a hundred would unhesitatingly jump to the conclusion that the American attitude was a natural manifestation of capitalist hostility—aiming at war. Soviet Foreign Office leaders and Soviet press do so believe, and say so flatly.

BELGIAN QUEEN IS ILL.

Confined to Palace With Influenza, but Condition Is Not Alarming.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 8 (AP).—Queen Elizabeth, who has been confined to her apartments for the last two weeks with influenza, has been advised by the court physician to take great care of herself in view of the coming wedding ceremonies at Rome. Her condition, however, was said not to be alarming, and Prince Leopold and the Princess Astrid yesterday returned to Ostend to rejoin the little Princess Charlotte.

For years the Queen has been susceptible to colds and on several occasions has been sent to Switzerland or the South to recover. It is believed a similar course may be taken after the Rome wedding ceremony to prepare the Queen for the many festivities in connection with next year's centennial celebration.

PAPER SAYS MOVE BY STIMSON FAILED

Buenos Aires La Prensa Holds First Pact Attempt Gives Small Hope for Future.

SEES AUTHORITY WEAKENED

Soviet Answer Shows the Kellogg Treaty Has No Real Influence on World Relations, It Asserts.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 8.—La Prensa, commenting on the Soviet's rejection of the Washington note, says that this first attempt to apply the Kellogg pact in international relations does not promise much for its future efficacy as an instrument for preventing armed conflicts between nations.

"The Soviet's note denying the application of the Kellogg pact to the present conflict in Manchuria is a serious attack against the authority which it had been hoped could be given to this declaration abolishing force in international relations. By refusing to be reminded that it is a signatory to this prohibition against war, Moscow has affirmed her intention to preserve liberty of action, within its compatibility with the obligations assumed in the Kellogg pact."

La Prensa says that both China and Russia from the first moment of the present conflict have acted violently, using the same warlike methods which were popular before signing the Kellogg pact in August, 1928, after which the world was led to believe no signatory power would ever again resort to violence in an attempt to settle its differences with another nation.

"The failure of this first attempt to apply the Kellogg peace pact does not allow much hope for the future success of its objects," it continues. "The pact evidently has had no real influence on international relations, because they are still the subject of suspicions, of the fear of appearing weak before an adversary and of the belief that a warlike machinery is still necessary, and that nothing can be attained by putting animosities aside.

"The spirit of the preamble of the Kellogg pact has not proved contagious amongst the signatory powers, which proves that there still exist artificial treaties, which do not interpret the reality of facts."

A MYSTERY SOLVED

The kilts worn in Scotland have always been a mystery to dwellers in other parts of the world.

Who wonder how the wearers manage to keep warm during the long winter months.

Not such a puzzle, after all, when we consider that oatmeal is the principal food of Scotland;

And oats contain more fat, and therefore produce more heat, than any other cereal.

The rich, creamy oatmeal served at CHILDS is a real fortification against the chill of a cold day.

CHARGES STIMSON ERRED IN PACT MOVE

National Patriotic League Says Reds Will Take Advantage of It to Mislead People.

SCORES SOVIET'S ANSWER

Secretary Should Realize It Lacked Sincerity and Treat It So, League Asserts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Charging that the State Department blundered in its note to the Russian Soviet Government calling attention to the Kellogg peace pact, the National Patriotic League through its general counsel, H. Ralph Burton, sent a communication to Secretary of State Stimson today in which it contended that the Soviet had taken advantage of the incident further to inflame the people of Russia and lead them to believe that they must be prepared for attacks upon their country by other nations.

The League held that the pact was utterly lacking in any inherent authority for "strangers to call attention to alleged violations of its self-imposed restrictions," an element which, it asserted, the State Department had attributed to it.

"Whatever virtue it may have," the communication added, "is of an autophonous nature, because the very essence of its qualities flows from its self-declaratory nature, and hence rests upon the moral stamina of its signatories.

"Regardless, however, of what may be a proper interpretation of the import of the Kellogg peace pact, it is distressing to note that you, as Secretary of State of this nation, have failed to appreciate that the communistic rulers of Soviet Russia have taken advantage of what was intended by the United States as a friendly act toward the world at large, and through deliberate misinterpretation and fraudulent intent have made it an instrument of propaganda further to inflame their victims, the people of Russia, against what they, the Communists, choose to label 'imperialistic' or 'capitalistic' governments for the purpose of further entrenching themselves and stimulating greater preparation for war.

"They know only too well that the note sent them by us was fully intended as a friendly act, that we do not want the Manchurian Railway, and that we have no desire to invade Russia's dominions, but to admit that would be disastrous to their control over the Russian people and their extensive militaristic program.

"You, Mr. Secretary, have erroneously treated this attitude on the part of the Soviet Government officials as sincere, have accepted it literally, which has subjected the United States to embarrassment it does not deserve. It is to be hoped that you will see this situation in the light of an expedient gesture on the part of Soviet officials, which it really is, lacking utterly in sincerity and by so doing restore this government to its true and proper international status."

ZEPPELIN POLAR TRIP STILL IS UNCERTAIN

German Group Will Ask British Company Next Week to Insure Airship for Flight.

Wireless to The New York Times.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Dec. 8.—The fate of the Graf Zeppelin's proposed North Pole expedition still hangs in the balance, and it is not at all certain whether the trip will be made next Spring.

Negotiations with a British insurance company which were to have been concluded here last week were again postponed until next week, when representatives of the Aero Arctic Society will visit London. Captain Lehman, who was to lead the delegation, declared he was unable to participate because his presence was needed elsewhere. He insisted, however, that an insurance contract must be signed before Christmas or it would be impossible to finish the necessary reconstruction of the Zeppelin's interior in time for the trip.

Wireless to The New York Times.

HAMBURG, Dec. 8.—Dr. Kiep, one of the directors of the Hamburg-American Line, declared his company was not interested in the proposed polar flight of Germany's sole airship, the Graf Zeppelin, which he held, should be risked only for enterprises with economic results.

IRIGOYEN PUSHES OIL BILL.

Urges Argentine Senate to Act on Measure for Nationalization.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 8.—President Irigoyen has sent a second message to the Senate urging prompt action on the petroleum bill passed by the Chamber of Deputies two years ago for nationalizing the exploitation of petroleum deposits throughout the republic and giving to the National Government a monopoly in the importation and sale of petroleum and its products.

Just before adjourning last September the Senate refused to vote on the petroleum bill, but appointed a committee to obtain more facts on the measure and intimated it would not receive the committee's report for at least a year. President Irigoyen's message says it is unbelievable that the Senate is not already in possession of all the information required, and insists that the project get early consideration.

FIVE SOVEREIGNS IN CHURCH

Two Kings and Three Queens Attend Sandringham Service.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Two Kings and three Queens attended a simple service this morning in Sandringham Church. Another sovereign, King Haakon of Norway, arrived from London soon after the service ended.

In addition to King George and Queen Mary in the congregation, the King and Queen of Denmark and the Queen of Norway were there, all of whom spent the week-end at Sandringham. They will all come to London tomorrow, when King George and Queen Mary return to Buckingham Palace for a brief stay before Christmas.

SPAIN DROPS CENSOR FOR FOREIGN PRESS

After Six Years Government Feels It Safer to Let Truth Be Printed Abroad.

RECENT ACTS GAIN FAVOR

De Rivera Strengthens Position by Amnesty for Prisoners and Credit Arrangement.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

MADRID, Dec. 8.—The Spanish dictatorship, after six years of airtight censorship, has decided to remove all restrictions on activities of the foreign press. As far as domestic publications are concerned, censorship will continue, it was stated.

This decision was taken by the government in the belief that foreign news readers, knowing news from Madrid is censored, are in the habit of giving too much credit to such uncensored stories as seeped over the border at Hendaye and Gibraltar, it was said.

Two weeks ago alarming reports of the political situation were printed abroad, and when one newspaper wired for details its message was stopped by the censor, making the editors think the situation was more serious than it really was.

Press cards will be issued to foreign correspondents, who have previously had no official recognition, and cooperation will be given to them in obtaining interviews and news. The government states, however, there will be no attempt to coerce, and that writers may criticize the government freely if they wish, but warning is given that the cards will be taken away if harmful or deliberate lies are printed.

Individual messages hereafter will not be read by the censor, but "flagrant" cases will be noted and reported by Spanish diplomatic representatives abroad and will be called to the correspondent's attention.

Premier Primo de Rivera is riding a smooth road again in Spain. Two of his acts in the past few days have had the effect of militating against the feeling of alarm which was almost general a week ago.

The first of these is the arrangement for paying back foreign credit, which seems to have restored confidence in the government's financial policy, which was being criticised. The second is his action for the general liberation of military prisoners which has done much to solidify his position with the army.

Madrid dailies are hinting at the possibility of municipal elections after a cessation of many years, and are even discussing the possibility of a general election being called for reassembling the old Parliament to discuss the new Constitution. The fact that the censor has allowed these articles to be printed shows the government is willing to sound out public opinion on this subject, but at present it would be unsafe to predict that the suggestion will actually be carried into effect.

PARAGUAY ACCEPTS CHACO PEACE MOVE

Announcement of Resumption of Relations With Bolivia Is Expected Today.

EXCHANGE OF FORTS NEXT

Uruguayan Officers Who Will Be the Supervisors of Transfer Likely to Act Independently.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MONTEVIDEO, Dec. 8.—Tomorrow is expected to produce important developments in the Uruguayan Foreign Office's efforts to bring about a definite settlement between Bolivia and Paraguay of their dispute over the Chaco region. Dispatches from Asuncion state that the President's Cabinet has decided to accept Uruguay's suggestion that both countries announce the appointment of new diplomatic representatives at Asuncion and La Paz on the same date. Bolivia had already accepted the suggestion and it is expected that the date of renewal of diplomatic relations will be announced after tomorrow's conference between the Uruguayan Foreign Minister and the Bolivian and Paraguayan Ministers accredited to the Uruguayan capital.

It is hoped that the conference also will iron out what appears to be the last serious difference between Bolivia and Paraguay standing in the way of negotiations toward arbitration of the Chaco dispute. Bolivia contends that the return of Fort Boqueron to Paraguay is contingent upon Paraguay's having previously rebuilt Fort Vanguardia. Paraguay rejects this contention and insists that the two acts must take place simultaneously. It is believed likely that this minor dispute may be solved by having the Uruguayan army officers who are to oversee the delivery of the two forts depart from Montevideo simultaneously with instructions to carry out their respective tasks immediately, without any reference to each other.

Well-informed Paraguayan sources in Montevideo believe that Paraguay will appoint as Minister to La Paz Rogelio Ibarra, former Minister at Rio de Janeiro. It is felt in official circles here that when the Uruguayan Foreign Office has succeeded in re-establishing diplomatic relations between Bolivia and Paraguay it will be only a short time until a definite agreement is reached regarding arbitration of the territorial dispute, as it is generally believed that this renewal of diplomatic relations will expedite the present negotiations, which are progressing satisfactorily in an atmosphere of cordiality, which are necessarily slow because of the absence of direct communication between Asuncion and La Paz.

WOULD SAFEGUARD PRESS.

Hastings Drafts Bill to Protect Confidential News Sources.

A measure designed to exempt newspaper men from testifying with respect to confidential news sources will be introduced in the State Senate, when it reconvenes in January, by Senator John A. Hastings of Brooklyn, it was learned yesterday. Senator Hastings drafted the bill in the belief that "a law of this kind will establish with certainty the privilege which has by tradition attached itself to the newspaper profession." The principle of a "free, untrammeled and useful press" was endangered, he declared, with the conviction some time ago of three District of Columbia newspaper men for their refusal to disclose confidential news sources.

"If newspapers are to continue the effort in the interest of clean, honest and efficient government and public service to which most of them are dedicated, it follows, perforce, that those employed in the gathering, editing and publishing of news must be free to safeguard the many confidences that are reposed in them leading to news," the Senator said.

MEXICAN AIR WEEK BEGINS TOMORROW

Flights at Valbuena Field to Open Fete in Memory of Captain Carranza.

FOREIGN ACES TO TAKE PART

Will Vie With Mexico's Military Airmen in Stunt Flying—British Aviator Is Welcomed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 8.—All is in readiness for Mexico's great aviation week, which will begin on Tuesday at the Valbuena air field in memory of Mexico's ill-fated ace, Captain Emilio Carranza. The latter lost his life in a severe storm when flying homeward after his notable journey to Washington to repay the compliment of Colonel Lindbergh in making a non-stop flight from New York to this city.

Aviation week will begin officially at 10 A. M. Tuesday, at which time every plane within the Federal District will be in the air. That function will be Mexico's welcome to the host of foreign aviators who, with their machines, are gradually arriving. All kinds of stunts will be performed, and Mexico's famous traffic motorcyclists, likened to the Russian Cossacks in their daring, will furnish the crowds with thrills additional to those arranged by the crack Mexican military aviators.

This morning the sky above the Aviation camp was heavily dotted with planes practicing, and parachute descents were seen momentarily. One of the features of the week's entertainment will be a competition for planes which must at a certain altitude stop their engines and land nearest a fixed mark.

One of Mexico's most distinguished guests for the festival arrived last night. He is Air Commodore Lionel Evelyn Oswald, representing the British Royal Air Force. His war record is formidable and he wears the Distinguished Service Order. He was received at the station on his arrival by commissions from the Ministries of War, Communications and Foreign Relations and one of the British Legation secretaries also welcomed him.

A number of United States planes are reported en route here from Brownsville, Texas.

PAPAL CORPS APPEARS OUTSIDE VATICAN CITY

Palatine Guardsmen March to Religious Celebration, Making the First Emergence in United Italy.

ROME, Dec. 8 (AP).—For the first time in the history of united Italy a band of the Papal armed corps, the Palatine Guard, was seen in the city of Rome outside of the Vatican City this evening.

They marched to the Piazza di Spagna, the American and foreign section of the city, where stands a column dedicated to the Immaculate Conception on which is a statue of the Virgin Mary. The Papal Guards assisted in the celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the promulgation of the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception.

The column was heaped high with flowers and a number of searchlights were focused on it. A large crowd attended the ceremonies. The appearance of the Palatine Guard was a result of the recent settlement of the Roman question by the Lateran treaty.

Three Hundred Agrarians Try to Lynch Italian Rancher Whose Cattle Strayed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 8.—Two men were killed and at least three wounded in an encounter last night on the outskirts of this city between agrarians and employes of the Rancho de San Agustin.

The cause of this sanguinary clash was the straying of a number of cattle belonging to an Italian, Pascual Nanci, onto lands owned by the agrarians and destroying crops.

The clash took place just before dark. About 300 agrarians began an attack on the ranch, intending, it is said, to capture and lynch the owner.

While the battle was in progress the authorities were advised and mounted police were soon on the scene.

When the police arrived the agrarians were at a small stream surrounding the ranch, the last obstacle in the way of victory. The firing ceased immediately.

ORTIZ RUBIO ON WAY HERE.

Mexican President-Elect Leaves Hot Springs, Ark., Suddenly.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Dec. 8 (AP).—Soon after receiving a telephone call from New York, Pascual Ortiz Rubio, President-elect of Mexico, left here tonight presumably for New York City.

Although his rather hurried departure prevented his making a statement to newspaper men, it was believed Señor Ortiz Rubio left to meet former President Plutarco Elias Calles in New York. A meeting of the two had been arranged for New Orleans.

All of Señor Ortiz Rubio's party of sixteen left at 9:30 P. M. on a Missouri Pacific train bound for St. Louis.

JAPAN SETTING PACE IN NEW CRUISER TYPE

The Nachi Is Revealed as Grimmest Vessel Since the War, Heavily Armed and Swift.

AMERICA AND BRITAIN LAG

Treaty Vessels Are Old-Fashioned by Comparison—Other Small Powers Ahead of Us.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Striking evidence of the pioneering spirit with which Japan and smaller naval powers are building new warships is shown in the new edition of "Jane's Fighting Ships," the authoritative British naval annual, which is out tomorrow.

On the eve of the five-power conference, neither Great Britain nor the United States is leading the way in naval construction, according to the photographs, diagrams and statistics in the book. The two greatest naval powers are content to build on more or less orthodox lines, while Japan, with her formidable Nachi class 10,000-ton cruisers; Italy and France, with their submarines and new cruisers, and finally Germany, with the amazing Ersatz Preussen cruiser, are setting the pace.

Alongside the photographs of Japan's deadly Nachi, England's Washington treaty cruisers of the Kent class look prim and old-fashioned. Every available foot of the Nachi's 630-foot length has been utilized by the resourceful Japanese designers. She has five gun turrets, each with two eight-inch guns, as compared with the eight eight-inch guns on the British Kent. The ordinary bridgework is supplanted in the Nachi with a bristling fortress of control stations and range finders towering up above the deck.

Grim-Looking Vessel.

With her two funnels tilting sharply backward and the swift lines of her hull, the Nachi probably is the grimmest-looking war vessel built since the armistice, and with her 33-knots speed and triple hull she would be a menacing opponent in battle. Three other ships in the Nachi's class have been launched and four others are building, while the construction of four more 10,000-ton cruisers to replace the Tenyru, Tasuta, Kuma and Tama will depend on the decisions of the naval conference.

Japan's giant aircraft carriers, the Kaga and Akagi, are shown to be ferocious looking sea monsters with enormous funnels projecting horizontally from the sides to leave more room for airplanes. Each can carry from fifty to sixty planes, but, as with the American Lexington and Saratoga, the book says they will be the last giant carriers to be built by Japan. Experience has taught the Japanese Admiralty as well as the American Navy Department that small vessels are a better investment.

In the field of submarine warfare, Japan offers another new idea with the anti-submarine net layer Shiraitaka. It is a tiny ship, only 1,403 tons, but, in the words of the British experts, it "illustrates the wide and comprehensive views which govern Japan's naval construction."

Gas-Proof Gun Houses.

The new destroyer Fubuki foreshadows future warfare with its gas-proof gun houses instead of the usual open shields with guns.

Both Italy and France are shown to be sacrificing excessive speed for better protection in their new 10,000-ton cruisers. Thus the Italian Zara and French Suffern compare favorably with the new British York and the American Pensacola, whereas the earlier Italian and French cruisers, with their speed of thirty-five knots but with little strength, had been criticized as "sport models" or "glorified destroyers."

The smaller Italian cruisers of the Bandanere class are regarded by the British experts as having "great possibilities for fleet work in the Mediterranean."

York Diesel-Driven.

New developments in the British Navy include the launching of the 10,000-ton cruiser York, details of which were published last year. The photograph shows her to be a handsome and efficient looking ship. The proposed 6-inch gun cruisers, it is said, will be Diesel-driven, although nothing more is published concerning them.

An interesting addition to King George's navy is the submarine depot ship Medway, of 15,000 tons, which can mother eighteen submarines.

The editors of "Jane's" are pessimistic as to the usefulness of 10,000-ton cruisers and say that if it had not been for the Washington treaty no nation would build them. The prediction is made that the five-power conference will defer replacement of existing capital ships, thus involving their retention for many years to come.

"The United States Navy Department," the editors assert, "has already anticipated such an event by rebuilding and modernising its older battleships and Japan is following a similar policy with her battle cruisers. It is difficult to imagine that proposals for abolition of the submarine have any chance of success. So many powers, great and small, have devoted their energies to development of the under-water arm that it is unlikely they can be persuaded to a complete change of plans."

ITALY PICKS GRANDI FOR NAVAL PARLEY

Foreign Minister Will Be Aided by Admirals Sirianni and Acton at London.

ENVOY ALSO A DELEGATE

Rome Is Skeptical of Success, but Willing to Let France Fix Cut If Based on Parity.

ROME, Dec. 8 (AP).—The Italian delegation to the five-power conference in London next month, unless there are eleventh-hour changes, will be composed of Foreign Minister Grandi, Admiral Sirianni, Minister of the Navy; Admiral Acton, who participated in the Washington naval conference, and Ambassador Bordanaro, whose post is at London.

There will be numerous advisers and experts, among them Minister Plenipotentiary Augusto Rosso, formerly counselor of the Washington Embassy, and Captain Ruspoli, who also participated in the Washington conference.

Chief interest is now centred in the negotiations between Rome and Paris attempting to reach a preliminary agreement in order that the two Latin countries may present a united front at the London meeting. Although the Foreign Ministry maintains the greatest secrecy concerning these negotiations, it was understood tonight that some dissatisfaction was felt with the French reply to the Italian proposal.

The Italian Foreign Ministry does not intend for the present to break off negotiations, but the French attitude was described as such as to render ultimate agreement difficult unless the viewpoint of the Quai d'Orsay is changed.

Italian policy in the matter of limitation of armaments remains the same as repeatedly announced by Premier Mussolini, namely, that Italy is ready to accept any reduction, however sweeping, providing other countries reduce their armaments proportionately.

Italy, in other words, has suggested that France herself should fix the limit of naval armaments, Italy binding herself to accept the limit set by France without argument, provided France recognized the right of Italy to perfect equality with her.

The French answer to the proposal made to the Quai d'Orsay by Count Manzoni, the Italian Ambassador in Paris, ignores such equality of navies and suggests rather that France is entitled to a stronger navy than Italy. This reply caused considerable surprise here.

It was pointed out that Foreign Minister Aristide Briand, at the Washington conference, had cabled his delegation on Dec. 23, 1921, authorising acceptance of parity with Italy not only where capital ships were concerned but also in light craft, provided France was left free to fix the maximum limit of these two categories of warcraft to suit her needs.

France, in the reply just received, has avoided giving direct answer to the Italian request for naval parity and has changed the basis for discussion to a contention that the respective strength of the two navies should be made dependent on the geographical positions of the two countries. It was felt here that if discussion began on such a basis it could be continued indefinitely without reaching any practical conclusion. Italians believed they could produce arguments as numerous and as convincing as the French to prove they are entitled not only to parity with France but indeed to a navy stronger than the French.

PANAMA CANAL HEAD SAILS FOR NEW YORK

Governor Burgess Will Testify in Washington on Budget Needs for Next Year.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA CITY, Dec. 8.—Colonel Harry Burgess, Governor of the Panama Canal, sailed today for New York en route to Washington, where he will appear on Dec. 17 before the Appropriations Committee of Congress regarding funds for operation of the canal in the next fiscal year.

Practically all revenues from the canal are delivered direct to the treasury of the United States and operation depends upon appropriations from Congress, excepting some business operations. Colonel Burgess will explain the major features of the canal appropriation, which already has been approved by the Bureau of the Budget. These include provision for more adequate ferry service across the canal, connecting the national highways system of Panama and building a road from the ferry near Balboa to the national highway at Arrijan, increased housing for canal employes and additional school houses, including an appropriation for a survey school system which will be made by Columbia University educators.

One of the largest items is a request for $2,000,000 to continue the work of construction of the Madden Dam project, for the purpose of increasing the water supply of the canal to meet increased traffic.

MOVE TOWARD COURT AIDS NAVAL PARLEY

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

alistic in her foreign policy, and especially in her naval policy?

But not only should the signature of the World Court statutes improve the international atmosphere in which the naval conference will meet, but also it may work out that the World Court will offer a possible solution for the great problem of freedom of the seas, the shadow of which must fall across the naval conference table. Last September in Geneva, Premier MacDonald accepted the mandatory jurisdiction of the World Court for the interpretation of treaties, and in so doing he did not make any reservation regarding the reviewing of decisions on British prize courts in time of war.

Britain accepted the optional clause in respect to those nations also accepting it. This would mean that a dispute over a British seizure of ships on the high seas in time of war could be reviewed by the World Court on the demand of any nation which had also adopted the optional clause in a manner to apply to such disputes.

No Advantages for Britain.

Now, while much has been said in the United States of the danger of trusting vital American interests to a bench composed mostly of foreigners, the freedom-of-the-seas issue is one for which no such fear could reasonably be entertained. For it so happens that so far as political factors could influence the court the British would not enjoy any certainty of benefiting from such influences. And that for the reason that she, almost alone, supports her interpretation of sea rights.

Thus, if it should develop that sea rules could be put into written form, and the World Court entrusted with their interpretation, certainly a long step would have been made toward stabilizing on a safety basis the old issue between England and America.

The optional clause gives the court the right to rule on alleged violations of treaties. Logically, England and America could leave future disputes to the tribunal rather than to their Admiralties.

That, perhaps, is looking a long way ahead, but not impossibly far ahead. If American foreign policy should be based on the Kellogg pact, plus the World Court, two or three decades might see great developments.

COMPROMISE CABINET PROPOSED IN POLAND

President Will Confer With Party Leaders—Patek Suggested as Premier.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WARSAW, Dec. 8.—The Polish political crisis may rather unexpectedly end in the formation of a moderate government seeking cooperation with the Sejm. It was said today in Parliamentary lobbies, after a surprising and mysterious communiqué was issued from President Moscicki's private chancery.

Because the majority which defeated Premier Switalski's Cabinet did not say how to solve the crisis, the communiqué states, and because the situation is exceptionally delicate owing to the budget not yet having been passed, the President decided to hold conferences to clear the situation. It is expected that Parliamentary party leaders will be asked by the President to those conferences with a view to forming a Cabinet acceptable to the majority.

The Polish envoy at Moscow, Stanislaw Patek, is suggested as Premier; General Casimir Sosnkowski for the War portfolio and former Premier Casimir Bartel for Minister of the Interior.

Such Cabinet might, indeed, enjoy the confidence of both Marshal Pilsudski's and some of the many Sejm groups, besides the present government bloc.

PUBLISHERS TAKE UP PAPER PRICE TODAY

Emergency Meeting Expected to Protest Proposed Rise in Newsprint Rate.

$20,000,000 ADDED COSTS

Estimate for Year Based on $5 a Ton Increase—American Mills Likely to Follow Canadian Lead.

Newspaper publishers from all parts of the country will assemble today at the Hotel Pennsylvania for an emergency convention called by the American Newspaper Publishers Association to consider the proposed increase in the price of newsprint by Canadian paper mills. The projected increase has the sanction of the provincial governments of Ontario and Quebec.

The convention after considering the threat of greatly increased costs of newspaper production is expected to register a strong protest against the rise. Officials of the A. N. P. A. have estimated that if $5 a ton is added to the cost of paper, it will mean an added expenditure of $20,000,000 for American publishers next year, based upon an increased usage of paper.

The call for the meeting was issued on Nov. 29 by Edward H. Butler, as president, and George M. Rogers, as secretary of the publishers' association. Notices to newspapers holding membership in the A. N. P. A., of which there are nearly 450, reported that the board of directors of the association felt that the membership should be convoked "in view of the imminent prospect of change in newsprint prices and terms of contract for next year and future years."

Although no formal announcement of the increase has yet come from the Canadian paper manufacturers as a unit, two of the largest companies announced the $5 increase last Tuesday. They were the Abitibi Power and Paper Company, Ltd., and the St. Maurice Valley Paper Company. The companies announced their willingness to enter into three-year contracts providing for a price of $55 a ton for the first six months of 1930, followed by a price of $60 a ton for the following thirty months.

Approximately 65 per cent of the newsprint used in the United States comes from Canada. Officials of the newspaper publishers' association declared that, under the "one price to all" policy of the paper makers, a rise in the Canadian price would be followed by an increase in price by the American paper mills.

Officials of the association said that it was the general contention of the members that it would be unfair for the paper mills to raise the price for the coming year.

EXPLAINS CANADIAN VIEW.

Beck Says Ontario and Quebec Aim to Distribute Tonnage.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Dec. 8.—Edward Beck, manager of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, discussing the rise in newsprint prices, said tonight:

"These governments (Ontario and Quebec) have at no time interested themselves in the establishment of any particular price for newsprint, as has been repeatedly made clear by the premiers themselves. What they have interested themselves in is the distribution of tonnage, in such a way that the present total volume of business, which is not adequate to keep the whole industry running at full time, may be equitably distributed among the various mills. In other words, they have sought to prevent a condition under which, by price-cutting or other means, one company or group of companies might readily have obtained sufficient business to keep their plants in full operation, while the rest could run only at 40 or 50 per cent, or even less, of their rated capacity.

"The objections of the provincial governments to such a condition are based on purely economic grounds. They are two in number.

"In the first place, the authorities fear that the operation of any of the mills at the maximum rate mentioned above, especially when associated with an abnormally low price for the product, could only lead to extravagant and destructive cutting of pulpwood timber on the limits from which these mills are served. It is the policy of both Provinces to place the pulp industry on a sustained yield basis, or, in other words, to insure that no more wood shall be taken off in a given year than is replaced by growth in the same period; and capacity operation at low prices is incompatible with this policy.

"The second objection relates to the effect of unevenly distributed business upon the population and commercial interests of the large and important communities which have grown up around the newsprint mills. The closing down or part-time operation of these mills involves unemployment and dislocation of trade which is in no degree compensated for by the increased employment in the busy mills. It is the firm belief of the Provincial Governments that the best interests both of their industrial population and of their permanent forest resources will be served by securing an approximately even distribution of the available business among the various plants.

"But this policy has nothing to do with price except in so far as it tends indirectly toward the establishment of a uniform level of prices for the entire output of the Canadian mills, a uniformity which the newspaper publishers have long since recognized as desirable in the interests of their own business and have always demanded.

"The provincial governments further believe that they are serving the real, permanent interests of the publishers by a policy which is designed to maintain unimpaired the natural resources of the pulpwood forests and the labor supply of the logging camps and newsprint towns all over the country.

"Eliminating, therefore, the objection to the new price of newsprint that it is a government-fixed price, it remains to consider whether it is a reasonable price in view of current conditions. That it is not as low a price as might be obtained by some publishers for a short time should a cutthroat price war develop within the newsprint industry is obvious, but the majority of publishers are sensible enough to see that such a war would not be to their permanent benefit.

"Taking it in comparison with prices which have prevailed in the past, it may be pointed out that the proposed rate of $60 (considerably reduced by a five dollar allowance for the first six months in the case of three-year contracts), compares with $70 and $75 a few years ago, and that few if any of the elements of cost have been reduced in the interval, while some of them are substantially higher."

TELLS MOTIVE OF ONTARIO.

Premier Ferguson Says Forests of Province Are Publicly Owned.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 8.—Expressing regret at the suggestion that because Ontario and Quebec were interesting themselves in the newsprint price controversy. Political influence was being used to dictate the prices, G. H. Ferguson, Prime Minister of Ontario, gave his view of the situation in an interview here today.

"Such a statement gives the public a wholly erroneous impression of the motive actuating the Governments, and it probably arises from failure to consider the situation in its entirety," he declared.

"There are three distinct interests involved in the newsprint industry and there can be no proper discussion of the subject unless all three have fair consideration: First, the people of the Province who own the forests from which the raw material comes; second, the mill operator who makes the paper, and third, the publisher who furnishes the market.

"While these three interests are distinct, they are interdependent. Each is essential to the others and to the whole industry, and the industry can only be made efficient and successful through the cooperation of all. This fundamental fact should not be lost sight of in the consideration.

"The forests of Ontario are publicly owned. The government of the province is a trustee charged with the responsibility of the proper administration of the people's property. It is the duty of the trustee to secure adequate return when any portion of these assets is disposed of. We sell by public competition the right to cut pulp wood from a defined area at a price per cord and guarantee a supply sufficient for the needs of the undertaking. The purchaser is required to expend a definite minimum sum in the establishment and equipment of a plant, to operate a minimum period each year, to consume a certain cordage, to employ a minimum number of men, to expend certain monies for wages and to comply with other conditions.

"The purpose of all these conditions is not to increase the volume of our business but to advance the settlement and development of the newer portions of our province. The mill begets a town. The payroll creates a purchasing and consuming power. New settlers are encouraged to go into the district because of the market for their wood and the sale of their produce. When the industry is in a healthy condition the expansion of settlement grows and the community makes progress. When the mills slow down employment decreases, the settlers' market for wood and other products falls down, wages may be cut and the whole district built up around this industry suffers grievous hardships.

"That is exactly where and why the government is showing concern of the present situation. It is not with any idea of price fixing, but with the hope that as one of the interests concerned we might assist in the solution by bringing about a more equitable adjustment of the burden of the depression that should be fairly shared by the other interests concerned.

"A price war would be a calamity to the industry as a whole and would destroy millions of investments. There is only one way to avoid such a disaster—to deal with the difficulty from the standpoint of the industry as a whole with the determination to make it successful and not have regard only for the special interest in which we may be directly concerned."

FRANCE SPEEDS BUDGET BY WORKING ON SUNDAY

Many Deputies Forego Speeches and Discussion of Public Works Is Concluded.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—In an effort to get through the discussion on the budget before the new year, the French Chamber, which ordinarily adjourns over Sunday, held two long sessions today. It was nearly 9 o'clock when the second sitting ended, and because of this late hour the government abandoned its project for a late night sitting.

To facilitate matters, many Deputies were inscribed, including many among the opposition, who consented to forego their speeches, and in this manner the general discussion on the budget of public works was concluded. The debate did not proceed, however, without some hitches. Premier Tardieu indulging in several warm interchanges with Vice Chairman Bedouce, and with M. Camille Chautemps regarding the flaming red posters which appeared in Paris today attacking Parliament and the government for failure to keep their promises to workers.

REPORTS POWERS PRESSING HUNGARY

Budapest Paper Says Britain, France and Italy Seek to Alter Reparations Stand.

HAGUE DELAY IS RUMORED

Bethlen Declares the Nation Will Fulfill Treaties but Cannot Yield on Optants Issue.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUDAPEST, Dec. 8.—Representatives of England, France and Italy, according to the newspaper Reggel, are bringing diplomatic pressure to bear on Hungary to induce her to alter her stubborn refusal to accept the decision of the Eastern reparations committee. Negotiations are being opened and it is expected that a demarche will be presented within a few days on the same lines as that already presented to Sofia.

It is even reported that if Hungary does not give way, The Hague conference, fixed for Jan. 3, will be postponed. Certainly, until Hungary accepts the proposal already made by the Eastern reparations committee or until some compromise is reached, the whole agreement achieved by the great powers with such difficulty at the first Hague conference will remain in question.

To induce the Little Entente powers, particularly Rumania, to consent to an arrangement which would satisfy both England and Germany, the great powers are alleged to have given a virtual promise to let them have their own way in the optants question. The result was an immediate demand on Hungary at the Paris meeting which followed to permit the indemnification of her optants by the Little Entente powers to be set off against her own reparation obligations. This she absolutely refused to do and a complete deadlock has been the sequel.

According to a declaration yesterday by the Premier, Count Bethlen, there seems little chance of Hungary giving way.

"Hungary is ready to fulfill all the obligations of the Treaty of Trianon but will defend the rights guaranteed by it," he said. "The recent requests by the powers which dictated that treaty are an open breach thereof. Paragraph 250 of the treaty, providing that the confiscation of the property of Hungarian Nationals in alien countries can be taken before international arbitral courts, gives us some protection.

"It is impossible to relinquish such means of legal defense or to make it a mere matter of compensation. Public opinion in Hungary would blow away any government which proposed such a measure. Hungary's foreign politics must consist of honest fulfillment of the peace treaties. No one can order us to accept further tasks than are provided there."

TO BE SLENDER
All Women are Akin

And the First Step is the Attainment of a Perfect Waistline

The unique Wilson method of Slenderization answers scientifically the prime fashion requisite of this year of grace.

In the Saks Silhouette Shop, where it is administered, the body is molded into a trim, slender, vitally lovely silhouette. With bone structure and height as the determinants, the parts to be reduced are concentrated upon and perfection of proportions is achieved.

Since the 1930 figure is centered upon the waistline, the molding of waistline and abdomen is the first step. The abdomen is firmed, unseemly flabbiness is eliminated, and a slight, supple curve at the sides is the graceful result.

A consultation will be gladly arranged, quite without obligation.

STORM CUTS PARIS FROM COAST POINTS

Four-Day Gale Cuts Communications With England, Spain, Italy and Cherbourg.

FIFTEEN RESCUED BY TUG

The Iroise Sets Out From Brest Again After Bringing in One Ship and Crew of Another.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—The storm which, with only brief respites, has been raging on the French coasts for four days, continued today to increase damages on land and fierce destruction at sea.

Communications were interrupted tonight between Paris and Western Spain, between Paris and the region of Cherbourg, and with Italy. Channel steamers and airlines have discontinued service.

In Paris several persons were injured by street signs and window shutters that were blown down. A wall in the Passage Auvry collapsed for a distance of thirty meters.

One incident of the storm is that the huge French flag which floats from the top of the Eiffel Tower was blown to ribbons, and this evening when it was lowered there remained only a small shred of blue attached to the hemline.

The rescue tug Iroise, which left Brest on Thursday night, returned tonight with the disabled Spanish steamer Galdana in tow. On board she brought fifteen men, survivors of the crew of the Danish vessel Helen, in response to whose distress calls she had set out.

The officers of the Iroise told a tale of a dreadful three-day battle with the storm. When they reached the Helen they found her in tow of the British steamer Sabor, which was enabled then to proceed. The Helen, with her hold half filled and engines stopped, was helpless, but the tow was established, and all night Friday the tug slowly fought toward Brest with the slowly settling steamer behind.

Endeavoring to lighten the ship by casting away deckload lumber, the Helen's first officer was swept overboard and lost. Then, on Saturday afternoon, the tow-chains snapped and before the Iroise, which had the broken chains wound in her propeller, could go to its aid, the steamer went on a reef. Ten of her crew escaped in a lifeboat and the tug succeeded in rescuing five others who had jumped into the sea with lifepreservers. The last man had died from congestion and cold in the sea.

The Iroise again left Brest tonight, responding to distress calls from the British steamer Alba, the freighter Tynebridge and the Italian ship Senatore, all disabled.

On the little island of Muessant, 150 houses have been unroofed by the hurricane. The body of a sailor from the wrecked sailing vessel Caroline was washed ashore at St. Malo today.

Liner Grounds in Fog in Bay but Is Freed; Storms at Sea Delay Incoming Vessels

Fog which blanketed the harbor yesterday morning for the third successive day caused one steamship to go aground off Robbins Reef, because the captain and pilot were not able to see the channel for big steamships, which is very narrow at that point.

The vessel is the Tolon of the United Fruit Line, incoming with sixty passengers and a cargo of bananas from Limon, Costa Rica.

The Tolon grounded at 9:48 A. M. and was hauled off an hour later by two tugboats. She proceeded to her pier at the foot of Fulton Street under her own steam and landed her passengers and mail. Officials of the United Fruit Line declined to make any statement as to whether the vessel had been damaged. She will be examined today by divers, who will report to the underwriters.

The only other ocean liner to reach port yesterday was the Buenos Aires of the Spanish Royal Mail Line from Cadiz, which anchored early off Quarantine and went to her pier at the foot of Old Slip, East River, when the weather cleared at noon.

Radio reports from captains of incoming passenger liners stated they will be more than twenty-four hours late due to the exceptionally stormy weather prevailing on the Atlantic. The North German Lloyd liner Bremen, the Cunarders Berengaria and Ausonia, the French liner France, and the Hamburg American liner Reliance will not arrive until Wednesday or possibly Thursday, it was said.

The Republic of the United States Lines, which has one of the shipwrecked fishing schooner's crews on board, is expected tomorrow morning. The other rescued crew on the White Star liner Baltic will dock late tomorrow night or Wednesday morning. The Southern Pacific steamship Creole, which was damaged in a collision in the harbor Saturday with the Anchor liner Transylvania, completed her repairs at Tietjen & Lang's yard, Hoboken, and left for New Orleans at 6:30 A. M. yesterday.

HISTORIC HOUSES BURN IN GALE IN HOLLAND

Rotterdam and The Hague Send Fire Trucks to Fight Flames at Middelburg.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Dec. 8.—Eight eighteenth century buildings at Middelburg, including the mansion "Verseput," known to thousands of American tourists, were destroyed by fire which broke out at the height of the gale last night and was not extinguished until morning.

The loss is estimated at $2,000,000, but the historic interest of the picturesque gabled structures is beyond computation.

The buildings, which stood in the main street of the town, dated from the early seventeen hundreds, when they were erected for wealthy merchants of Middelburg's most prosperous period. Even now on market days the street is alive with the quaint costumes of old Holland, which still are worn in Middelburg, although the rest of the country long ago abandoned them.

When the flames spread from house to house calls for help were sent out to other cities and soon apparatus arrived by rail from Rotterdam and The Hague. At dawn the flames were still blazing from the ruins but all further damage was past. The world-famous town hall at Middelburg was not damaged.

This was the second fire within a year to carry off historic buildings in Holland. In a cold snap last March the town hall at Leyden was destroyed with heavy loss.

by two tugs from Hamburg to Rotterdam capsized in the North Sea today and sank. Eight of the crew were saved by the tugs, but two drowned.

Storm Subsides Somewhat.

LONDON, Dec. 8 (AP).—The terrific gale which has gripped the English coasts for the past several days subsided tonight.

The Air Ministry, however, predicted that further violent storms were en route. Continental shores had also felt the force of the gale, which several times reached hurricane force, from Southern Portugal to Northern Denmark.

The high wind and mountainous seas prevented relief ships in several instances from reaching other vessels which had reported themselves in great distress hours before. The total of larger vessels which suffered done today, principally because most from the storm exceeded fifty.

Comparatively little damage was of the shipping had either found its way to port or had been previously wrecked. Floods continued on land, but there was less damage reported from flying debris. With the fate of several vessels not definitely known, it was impossible to estimate the loss of life, but it was known to run into the scores.

Liners Almost Helpless.

The finest of ocean liners had found themselves almost helpless from the force of the gale. The American liner President Roosevelt, from New York, reached Plymouth today after battling the hurricane. Her officers said that the velocity of the wind had exceeded 100 miles an hour at times and had done some deck damage. George Stopfer, a German, was lost overboard, but it was believed he was a suicide.

The gale was most intense over Dover at 5:30 this evening. It was accompanied by lightning, thunder, hail and severe rain. The western entrance to the harbor was closed owing to the weather.

The famous scenic Valley of Wye was flooded from Bakewell to Haddon Hall and Rowsley because the River Wye was unable to carry off the heavy rainfall. Rising waters in the Thames caused some anxiety, although the river thus far was below the flood height reached last year.

There has been no communication between Weymouth and the Channel Islands since Thursday. Many persons who went to that port on Saturday night to cross to the islands slept on the boat train at the pier. A chimney crashed into the dining rooms on Weymouth quay. The woman proprietor was buried under the débris and seriously injured, but ten guests escaped without harm.

Several bodies were washed ashore. One discovered at Hartland was believed to have been that of a member of the crew of the steamer Radyr, which sank on Saturday. It was tentatively identified as that of Radio Operator Meredith. Another body was seen in the surf at Welcombe on the Devon coast, but could not be recovered. A lifebuoy with the name Mira Gella was found at Lulworth, Dorset, but no such ship had been reported in distress.

The Greek steamer Georgios P. lost several lifeboats and one of its crew was sent ashore with a broken leg. Cabins of the Japanese steamship Tasmanian Transport were flooded and some of its lifeboats smashed. The ship also lost its anchor and cables and so had to steam around until able to enter a dock.

The British liner Valacia had its boats smashed and other deck damage done by the mammoth waves. The steamer Laristan radioed that it had suffered damage and that its captain received a broken leg.

Steamer Driven Ashore.

The British steamer Britannic drove ashore between Linney Head and Saint Gowans, Pembroke, Wales, and the steamer Tehana was proceeding to the assistance of the crew. The British steamer Hatasu was in the vicinity and the tug Zwartesee was also attempting to render aid, but the high wind kept them at a distance. A lifeboat from Milford Haven later succeeded in reaching the Britannic and on its return reported that the ship was in no immediate danger of breaking up.

Lloyd's reported that the British steamer Tynebridge, twenty-four miles west of Bishop's Rock, had asked assistance. Its radio reports said the steering gear was disabled and three men injured. The Cunard steamer Alaunia, from New York, went out of its course to assist the Tynebridge.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The Italian treasure ship Leonardo da Vinci, with its priceless cargo of paintings by old masters, is plowing steadily through storm-tossed seas off Cape Finisterre, it was learned tonight.

After two days of steadily growing anxiety, a wireless message from the ship was received by Major A. A. Longden, secretary general of the great Italian art exhibition, to which the pictures are being brought. The captain said that the weather, which had been favorable at the start of the voyage from Genoa, had became adverse, with strong westerly gales blowing.

"The pictures are safe and everything is going well," was the reassuring note at the end of the message. When the ship arrives in the Thames on Wednesday morning it will receive a joyful official welcome.

Passengers Cut by Glass.

FALMOUTH, England, Dec. 8 (AP).—With her rudder damaged, the Blue Star liner Andalucia Star arrived here today with 110 passengers, some of them cut by pieces of glass sent flying through the air when a mountainous sea struck the vessel while they were at dinner yesterday.

The passengers signed a resolution thanking the master, Captain Richard J. Thomas, for his courageous seamanship. During the worst of the storm the ship had a list of 40 degrees and many of the passengers expected the vessel to sink. Most of them were Argentines, Britons, French and Spaniards.

Ships in Distress Off France.

BREST, France, Dec. 8 (AP).—The Spanish freighter Galdames went aground just outside Brest Roads in Bottleneck Pass. Two members of the crew drowned.

The British ship Essex Heath was waterlogged and reported sinking between Ushant and Brest. The three-master Notre Dame de Bonne Nouvelle, a French sailing vessel, and the schooner Berthe both foundered off Ushant Light this morning. The crews were saved.

The telegraph wires between Brest, Paris, Havre and Cherbourg were down.

Six members of the crew of the Italian cargo boat Alfri drowned when the vessel sank about 100 miles off Bordeaux. Ten other sailors were rescued by the trawler Gascogne.

The Italian steamer Dali radioed an appeal for help when 150 miles west of Ushant Light. The German steamer Heinz Ferdinand was waterlogged off the coast and the Spanish freighter Mari was drifting helplessly in the Channel off Boulogne.

Storm Sweeps Holland.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 8 (AP).—The third gale within a few days swept over Holland today and many shipwrecks and other disasters were reported. German, Spanish and Greek steamships off the coast sent urgent appeals for assistance.

German Steamer Doomed.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 8 (AP).—The German steamer Aegir, which ran ashore on the west coast of Gottland yesterday, appeared tonight likely to become a total wreck. One man was drowned today when four of the crew tried to row ashore and the boat was overturned.

URGES AN INCREASE IN NAVY PERSONNEL

SEEKS MORE OFFICERS, TOO

Leigh Says That Air Force Cuts Sea Complement — Better Pay for Commissioned Men Wanted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—A total enlisted strength of 95,285 men for the navy during 1930 was urged by Rear Admiral R. H. Leigh, chief of the Navy Bureau of Navigation, in his annual report today, as compared with the 84,500 men authorized by Congress for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930.

Without the additions, Admiral Leigh said, the naval forces could not be manned at full strength, if consideration was to be given to present needs, to five cruisers and two submarines soon to be commissioned and to nucleus crews from the navy for training reserves.

The minimum requirements for the fiscal year 1931, he said, based on 97 per cent allowance for battleships, 100 per cent for cruisers and 90 per cent for destroyers, is 95,400. This would not provide for any men under the nucleus crew system.

During the fiscal year 1929 the sixteen battleships in full commission had 91.9 per cent of their complement, the ten light cruisers of the first line 92.6 per cent, the two aircraft carriers of the first line 87.5 per cent, the 103 destroyers of the first line 85.5 per cent and 100 per cent complements were given to submarines, fleet submarines, the Asiatic fleet and the special service squadron in Central American waters.

The maximum strength during the fiscal year 1929 of the commissioned line of the navy was 5,484, or fifteen short of the authorized strength.

Asks Increase in Officers' Ratio.

"In order to provide the additional officers now required afloat and in aeronautics," Admiral Leigh said, "to meet the future needs of the aeronautical building program, and to supply officers for the new vessels under construction, the line strength should be 6 per cent of the authorized enlisted strength, whereas the present ratio is 4 per cent."

The continued expansion of aeronautics in the navy was said by Admiral Leigh to make both the officer and enlisted personnel situations difficult.

Since 1923 the officer personnel assigned to aeronautical duties has increased from 456 to 715, and the number of enlisted men from 4,247 to 10,771. This has taken place in the face of a reduction in the total enlisted strength of the navy of 1,500.

During the fiscal year there was an increase in aviation pilots. On June 30, 1928, there were 141 aviation pilots and 29 balloon and airship pilots, a total of 170. On June 30, 1929, there were 173 aviation pilots and 31 balloon and airship pilots, a total of 204.

Says Pay Is Inadequate.

"The present pay," he said, "is not adequate under existing and prospective economic standards. Justice and equity warrant and require an adequate compensation to naval personnel in return for the services they render.

"Aside from the general inadequacy of the present pay, the controlling law also discriminates between officers with and without dependents and frequently permits officers of the lower ranks to receive more compensation than those under whose orders they serve."

Admiral Leigh reported that reenlistments for the fiscal year 1929 were 72.8 per cent, while desertions reached a new low mark of 528 for the year. At the same time there was a marked improvement in leave and liberty breaking by the enlisted personnel. He attributed this to the higher character of the personnel, saying that "the mental quality of the men now being recruited is higher than at any time."

"Only 14 per cent of all those recruited during May, 1929, for example," he added, "had not completed an elementary school course, and 56 per cent of them had completed one or more years of high school."

POPE RECEIVES DOUGHERTY.

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 8 (AP).—Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia was received today in private audience by Pope Pius. The Pontiff had wished to see him before going into retreat for a week tomorrow. The Cardinal was greeted with familiar and cordial kindness and thanked warmly for his visit at the close of the jubilee year of the Pope. The Pope expressed a desire for another interview with him after the retreat.

The audience lasted nearly an hour, the Pontiff speaking at some length about the new seminary in Philadelphia, in which he took special interest because he is about to build one in Milan in the style of Italian abbeys of the Middle Ages.

PHILIPPINES VOTE LIKELY IN FEBRUARY

Senate Committee Will Start Hearings on Independence Resolution in January.

FOES FEAR IT WILL PASS

Favorable Report Is Expected, but a Harder Struggle Is Looked For in the House.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The King resolution, providing for the withdrawal of the United States from the Philippines and the establishment of an independent government in the islands, probably will come to a vote in the Senate late in February, and the opponents of the measure are apprehensive that it will pass.

As a result of controversies provoked by demands of Senators from the farm States for duties on sugar and other Philippine products, the movement to grant independence to the islands is said to have gained some momentum in both houses.

Hearings will be begun on the King resolution in January before the Senate Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, of which Senator Bingham of Connecticut is chairman. The committee is pledged to make a prompt report.

In the Senate debates on Thursday Senator Bingham, in reply to a question put by Senator Walsh of Montana, said that hearings on the King proposal had been postponed from December until January for the accommodation of a delegation representing the Philippine Legislature.

The committee is made up of eight Republicans and six Democrats. A recent check indicates that two of the Republicans probably will join with the Democratic minority in a favorable report.

Democrats All Favor Passage.

The Democratic members of the committee all favor independence for the Philippines in accordance with platform promises, and the party leaders, notably Mr. Walsh of Montana, seem determined that the issue shall be brought to a vote at an early date.

Indications are that when the time comes for a vote, the coalition, composed of Western Republicans and the Democratic minority, will be found battling for a common cause.

It is understood that Senators and Representatives from the farm States, who contend that the importation duty free of sugar, cocoanut oil and other products from the Philippines is a menace to agriculture on the Pacific Coast and in the Middle West, are determined to seek a solution by setting the islands free. They do not believe that a modification in the tariff policy can be effected as long as the islands continue as a possession of the United States.

Chairman Bingham's Republican associates on the Insular Affairs Committee are Senators Johnson of California, Robinson of Indiana, Nye of North Dakota, Metcalf of Rhode Island, Vandenberg of Michigan, Goff of West Virginia and Cutting of New Mexico.

The Democratic members are Senators Pittman of Nevada, Robinson of Arkansas, Harris of Georgia, Broussard of Louisiana, Hayden of Arizona and Tydings of Maryland. Senator Bingham is opposed to Philippine independence, and will fight it in committee and on the floor. He is of the opinion, however, that as things now stand, a majority of the committee favors the King proposal.

House Chances Weaker.

In the House the situation is different. There the King resolution, if it passes the Senate, will be referred to the Committee on Insular Affairs, of which Representative Kiess of Pennsylvania is chairman.

Mr. Kiess is convinced that the King resolution will be smothered in committee. There will be few changes in the House committee as it is about to be reorganized, and these, it is said, will strengthen the sentiment in opposition to the resolution.

Mr. Kiess believes that if the Insular Committee should decide to report the King proposal for a test of strength on the floor, the House would defeat it by an overwhelming vote.

The King resolution, introduced last April 18, authorizes the Philippine Legislature to provide for a general election of delegates to a constitutional convention, which is directed to "formulate a constitution for an independent republican government," and provides that when the new government is ready to function, the President shall recognize and proclaim the independence of the Philippines.

The resolution requires the President to withdraw United States military forces from the islands six months after his proclamation of recognition.

The resolution further provides that the new government shall assume responsibility for all debts and liabilities of the government that it succeeds, and that if it defaults on any of them, the United States shall take over all revenue departments of the island government until the obligations have been discharged.

It is understood that both sides in the controversy will be given full opportunity to present their views to the Senate committee. It was at the request of the Senior Resident Commissioner of the Philippines that the committee hearings were postponed until January.

GIVES KILMER MEMORIAL.

A fireplace in memory of Joyce Kilmer, American poet killed in action in France, was presented yesterday afternoon to Columbia Chapter, Delta Upsilon, at 556 West 113th Street, by Mrs. Kilburn Kilmer, the poet's mother. Kilmer was a member of the class of '08 at Columbia and a member of Columbia Chapter of Delta Upsilon. He was a sergeant in the old Sixty-ninth Regiment when he was killed.

Across the top of the fireplace is inscribed: "Sit by the fire and let the world spin by," taken from one of Kilmer's poems. His mother read his poem "Trees," and at the conclusion of the ceremony touched a match to logs in the fireplace.

Professor John Erskine, a member of the chapter, praised Kilmer's work, declaring that "if still alive he would be the greatest poet in the world." The Rev. Thomas A. Sparks, rector of St. Clement's Protestant Episcopal Church in West Forty-sixth Street, presided.

MEIKELJOHN PLAN PUT TO UNIVERSITY

President Frank of Wisconsin Asks Legislators to Adopt It for All Students.

STIMULANT TO EDUCATION

He Says Success of Experimental College Means Advancing Studies Five to Fifteen Years.

MADISON, Wis., Dec. 8 (AP).—A stimulant for college education, with student interest as the principal ingredient, was placed before the people of Wisconsin today for their analysis.

Through a legislative committee, plans by President Glenn Frank of the University of Wisconsin to apply new methods worked out in the university's Experimental College to the entire institution, were announced.

The result of the carefully-formulated program, Dr. Frank explained, would be to hasten the students' "intellectual awakening." Under his program, to go into effect within the next few years, 40 per cent of the time now devoted to set classes would be replaced by the informal methods of the Experimental College, a new departure in American education.

"This would mean generally optional class attendance and a concentrated study of all phases of some specific subject," he stated.

While devoting 60 per cent of their time to a varied course, students would use the remainder on the broad topics specified, such as, for example, some phase of Athenian civilization. There would be no checks on the rate of their advancement through examinations or "quiz questions"; progress would be left to individual initiative.

The Experimental College, a special section of the university, is headed by Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, one-time president of Amherst College. Its students live in dormitories and have their own special instructors.

Dr. Frank yesterday told the legislators that the college has "proved itself with amazing success," during its three years of existence, "in awakening its student members intellectually."

"The Experimental College is the outstanding liberal educational movement in the country," Dr. Frank said. "An attempt is being made to bring college procedure into line with procedure of after-college life. If it can be successfully applied to the entire student body system, it will mean a gain of five to fifteen years in the intellectual life of the average student."

REFORMS IN QUEENS AN ISSUE IN CLUB

Democratic Insurgent Group to Clash With Amerind "Old Guards" at Election Tonight.

DOUBLE VOTING LIKELY

Regulars Hold Only Ballots Are Legal, While Rivals Plan to Use Machines.

The method of reorganization of the Democratic party in Queens is involved in the annual election of the Amerind Democratic Club of Elmhurst to be held tonight in its clubhouse from 9 o'clock to midnight. Patrick J. Horan, who has been vice president of the club for four years, and Robert H. Hairston, a New York newspaper man, are the rival candidates for president.

Mr. Horan is regarded as representing the conservative or "Old Guard" element in the club, and Mr. Hairston the group which wishes to bring about a genuine party reorganization in Queens by the elimination of all the old factional leaders, particularly those who have been associated at any time with former Borough President Maurice E. Connolly.

The Amerind Club for years has been the largest Democratic club in Queens, and the contest for its presidency was brought about by the refusal of Mason O. Smedley, former County leader, to run for re-election as president. The ticket headed by Mr. Horan was named by a nominating committee, and that headed by Mr. Hairston was nominated by a petition of club members.

The board of governors of the club, a majority of whom favor Mr. Hairston, has directed the use of a voting machine, and one will be used, probably for the first time in a political club election in New York City. A machine has been rented from the Automatic Adding Machine Company, which supplies those used by the city for the general election.

The supporters of Mr. Horan have contended that the club by-laws require the election of officers by ballot. They are reported to have had ballots printed, and it looked last night as though two elections, one by ballot and one by voting machine, might be held unless an agreement was reached before evening.

Mr. Hairston declared that his policy and that of his supporters was to give the younger Democratic voters more of a voice in party affairs to bring about a better Democratic county organization.

"A leader cannot be elected," he said. "He must be evolved out of the present unsettled conditions in the party organization. Therefore we are in this fight to make it possible that the voices of the tens of thousands of new voters, including young men and young women, may be heard and that they may have an active part in the final selection of the leaders of the Democratic party in Queens."

INTRUDES AT ISELIN PARTY.

Man Who Has Delusion That Banker's Wife Is His Mother Is Held.

Suffering from a delusion that Mrs. Pauline Iselin of 144 East Sixty-fifth Street, wife of Ernest Iselin, the banker, is his "long lost mother," William White, 30 years old, who has no home, was convicted of disorderly conduct in Harlem court yesterday. White was accused of disrupting a bridge party at the Iselin home early yesterday morning when he insisted on seeing Mrs. Iselin. Magistrate Goodman remanded him to jail pending investigation and sentence tomorrow.

White is said to have visited the Iselin home on several occasions, but each time the maid ordered him away. Shortly after Saturday midnight, while Mr. Iselin was giving the dog an airing in the park, White visited the house and got past the maid into the room, where he threw the card party into turmoil. He was finally quieted pending the arrival of a patrolman.

WIDER AID IS ASKED IN CHARITY DRIVE

Jewish Federation Will Start Appeal Today for Support From All Ranks and Groups.

RESOLUTIONS PLEDGE HELP

500 Representatives of Fraternal and Industrial Organizations Attend Meeting.

A campaign to interest members of fraternal organizations and office and factory employes in the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies will be launched today, following resolutions passed at a conference on philanthropy of 500 representatives of fraternal and industrial groups held yesterday afternoon in the chapel of Congregation Emanu-El, 1 East Sixty-fifth Street.

The meeting was the first in the history of the New York Federation at which plans were laid for mass participation of all elements in the promotion of Jewish social service. Men prominent in labor organizations, fraternal societies, "Landsmanschaften," or clubs for groups coming from the same home in foreign countries, and representatives of local Jewish charities attended the meeting. Sol M. Stroock, former president of the federation, presided.

A resolution on fraternal and industrial cooperation, presented by Morris Finestone, secretary of the United Hebrew Trades, was unanimously adopted. In it those present pledged themselves "as representatives of the fraternal and industrial organizations to which we belong to bring the federation's message and the federation's needs to the attention of our lodge brothers and fellow-workers."

Another resolution was adopted whereby the delegates said that they would devote themselves "arduously to the task of strengthening, at the same time as widening, the base of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies, including those who can give little as well as those who can give much, thus making the federation as democratic in its support as it always has been in its services."

Mr. Stroock, in his opening address, said the conference had been called so that the message of philanthropy might be carried into every kind of Jewish organization.

He said that, if the Jews had earned a reputation for themselves in present-day America "because of their leadership in child-caring work and in the splendid humanitarianism and efficiency of their hospitals," it was because their leaders had sensed the responsibility that rested upon them in a republic to promote social reform and communal justice.

"This is more than a duty to all of us," he said. "It is a privilege of which the man on the bench, whether it be the carpenter's bench or the judge's bench, will avail himself."

Dr. Nathan Krass, rabbi of Congregation Emanu-El, expressed his satisfaction over the fact that the speakers represented all shades of political and religious opinion among the Jews.

"It is a pleasure," he said, "to find capital and labor, Orthodox and Reform, all speaking from the same pulpit in behalf of the Jewish charities which belong to all of us."

Among the other speakers were Judge Otto A. Rosalsky, chairman of the Jewish Communal Survey; Jonah J. Goldstein, chairman of the New York district of the Zionist Organization of America and trustee of the federation; Henry Hyman, Grand Master of the Independent Order Free Sons of Israel; Judge Jacob Panken, former Representative Nathan D. Perlman, Grand Master of the Independent Order B'rith Abraham; Judge Gustave Hartman, former Grand Master of the same organization; Joel Krone and Harold A. Lebair.

Loney Haskell of the Jewish Theatrical Guild paid tribute to Maurice Bloch, minority leader in the Assembly, whose funeral was held yesterday, for his services to Jewish causes. The late Mr. Bloch was to have addressed the meeting.

Government Plans Station Near Albany to Guide Fliers.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 8 (AP).—The Federal Government is planning construction of a radio beacon and broadcasting station near the airport here. An expenditure of $80,000 is involved. Twenty-five acres of land three-quarters of a mile from the Albany air field has been taken under option by the Airways Division of the Commerce Department, and materials for the construction work are on the spot.

The new centre is expected, according to an announcement made yesterday, to be a control point for the guidance of fliers on the Albany-Buffalo-Cleveland airway and on the New York-Bellefonte-Cleveland airway.

Establishment of the broadcast station was said to be largely credited to the activity of Senator J. Griswold Webb of Hyde Park, chairman of the legislative committee on aviation.

AMAZING OFFER

A NEW SOHMER GRAND PIANO—delivered in your home for Christmas

ONLY $50 DOWN

No further payments 'til February 15th

THIS timely offer has no parallel in the history of piano selling! Your selection of any Sohmer Cupid Grand—conventional or period model—will be delivered in your home for Christmas for a cash payment of only $50. And—you have three years to pay the balance.

HERE'S WHY WE MAKE THIS OFFER

The reason for this marvelous offer is sincere and straightforward. We want everyone to have the privilege of a new Sohmer for this Christmas, rather than to have to take a piano of mediocre quality, such as is usually offered for a small down-payment and easy terms.

EVEN THE PERIOD MODEL SOHMER GRANDS WILL BE DELIVERED FOR $50 DOWN

Included in this amazing opportunity is the Cupid Grand in Period Model Cases, too, and at no advance in your down-payment!

The piano, as a lovely piece of furniture—contributing to the beauty of your home—was a creative idea with the House of Sohmer. Thus the Sohmer brings you not only rich tonal volume and rare evenness in its scale, but that added charm—a fine period design which makes your Piano the central motif in your home decorative scheme.

No Further Payments Until February 15th

This, too, is an exceptional concession to convenience for all who would love to have the beautiful Sohmer—finest of fine pianos—in their homes for Christmas Day.

Three Years to Pay the Balance

The Sohmer Cupid Grand will be delivered to your home for a cash payment of only $50 with no further payments until the middle of February; and—you may spread the balance over three years. Your "piano money" goes so much further at Sohmer.

$5,000 LOOT TAKEN AT VITALE DINNER

DETECTIVE GAVE UP PISTOL

Gun Seized After Death Threat—One of 60 Guests Saved $1,200 by Throwing It Under Table.

The police were without a direct clue last night to seven men who invaded the Roman Gardens restaurant at Southern Boulevard and East 187th Street, the Bronx, at 1:30 A. M. yesterday and, as told in late editions of THE NEW YORK TIMES, robbed sixty men who were guests at a welcome-home dinner to City Magistrate Albert H. Vitale.

The hold-up men, who worked leisurely and as they thought thoroughly, were led by a soft-spoken young man, whose sartorial splendor impressed the guests even as they were handing over $2,000 in cash and more than $3,000 in jewelry. The leader and five of the band scorned masks. The seventh man, however, had a handkerchief over the lower half of his face. Detectives were working on the theory that this man was known to some of the victims.

In addition to robbing the magistrate, the gang went through the pockets of former City Magistrate Michael Delagi. They took the cash and service revolver of a city detective and took two pistols and all their available cash from two court attendants who were among the guests.

Intruders Interrupt Speech.

The guest of honor, who was active in the Bronx campaign of Mayor Walker, was delivering a speech of appreciation for the dinner when the gang walked in. Magistrate Vitale had been on vacation in Virginia and upon his return a group of admirers thought up the dinner as a tribute.

The magistrate said that as three men came in from the rear of the restaurant, which is on the second floor, and four others strolled up the stairs of the front entrance, he thought they were entertainers. The carefully dressed leader walked over to the dais and ordered Magistrate Vitale to sit down and keep his hands on the table.

The magistrate smiled, although a trifle nettled that his speech had been interrupted, and eyed the weapons of the seven with unconcern.

"Come on, now, judge," said the leader, "this is no joke. Sit down."

The judge sat down. As he did so he slipped a four and a half carat diamond from the little finger on his left hand. Pretending to fix his belt, he put the ring inside the waistband of his trousers with a brief prayer that it would stay there.

Delagi Puts Ring in Shoe.

Mr. Delagi managed to get a ring, with a three and a half carat diamond, into one of his shoes. He switched $62 in cash from a side pocket to a hip pocket, but the thorough-searching thieves got the money. The ring was overlooked, although the former magistrate later said that for a time he expected that to go, too.

One guest, a wealthy Italian-American contractor, saved a roll of $1,200 by throwing it under the horseshoe table. As he was engaged in this, one of the hold-up men noticed the watch chain across Mr. Delagi's vest. He reached over and fished the watch out of the pocket.

"Don't take that," said Mr. Delagi. "That was a gift to me by the Elks."

"That's all right," said the robber as he put the gold watch in his own pocket. "That don't make no difference to us. We can use it."

When the robbers reached Detective Arthur Johnson, who had made a move to pull out his revolver and had been threatened with death, one of the gang put a revolver against Johnson's abdomen and another held a weapon against the detective's back. As the men took away his revolver and holster, one said:

"Oh, so you're a cop, eh? Sit right down, Mr. Cop, and don't make a move, or you'll be a dead cop."

Masked Man Covers Escape.

The revolvers of the court attendants, John Onico and Dominick La Claire, were taken next. After having obtained, as they thought, all valuables belonging to the guests, the gang hurried to the street. The masked man was left behind to cover the escape. He stood at the head of the stairs, with two pistols trained on the diners.

"Stay right where you are for three minutes," he said.

The sound of two automobile motors came from the street. The masked robber started down the stairs. He heard a movement by some of the guests.

A moment later the sixty men in the restaurant heard the two machines speeding away. A telephone call to the Bathgate Avenue station brought Captain Charles Nelson and a score of detectives. They found the diners comparing notes on how much they had lost; the robbers took $41 from Magistrate Vitale, he told the captain.

Armed with excellent descriptions of all of the gang, except the masked member, the detectives set out to attempt to trace the hold-up men.

Feared Gang Would Fire.

"I am glad that Detectives Johnson did not manage to reach his gun," said Magistrate Vitale, "because if he had pulled it out the chances are that the gang would have opened fire without delay. In the comparatively small room some one might have been killed or wounded. I don't see how we could have escaped wounding, at least, with all those guns.

"I told the guests to obey the orders of the men. 'Let them take what we have,' I said. I felt that any resistance might end in murder."

After the escape of the gang it developed that more than seven men had participated in the hold-up. The proprietor of the Roman Gardens, the chef and several waiters were cornered in the kitchen and held there by an armed man. One waiter said he could see another man on guard in the street outside near the two automobiles.

Detectives expressed the opinion that James Nannery, desperado who escaped from Sing Sing a year ago, may have had a hand in the hold-up. They admitted, however, that they had no information to that effect.

GARMENT WORKERS DISCUSS ELECTIONS

Cleveland Convention May Decide on Referendum for Some National Officers.

TO REDUCE JOINT BOARD

Schlesinger, International President, Sure of Re-election—Abraham Baroff, Secretary-Treasurer, to Retire.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 8.—Electoral reforms affecting the administration of the international and its local organizations will be considered by the convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union when it resumes sessions tomorrow.

The adoption of the referendum method in choosing at least some of the national officers and the application of the principle of proportional representation for locals in joint boards will, it is expected, be recommended by the resolutions committee.

It was considered likely today that the convention will approve the proposal for the election of the international president and secretary-treasurer by referendum, but will retain the present method of having the convention name the general executive board.

Members of the joint board will be reduced, however, from nineteen to seventeen, if present plans hold. Larger locals which have been clamoring for proportional representation on joint boards will be permitted to send a larger number of representatives.

That Benjamin Schlesinger, the present incumbent, will have no opposition in his candidacy for the international presidency appears certain. Abraham Baroff, the veteran secretary-treasurer, probably will decline to run for re-election. He has been in his present position more than fifteen years, and his refusal to stand for re-election is due to ill-health. It is expected that his successor will be David Dubinsky, vice president of the international.

Mr. Schlesinger today made public the following telegram from Mayor Walker, replying to a message of thanks sent him by the convention in appreciation of his efforts in the settlement of the recent cloak strikn in New York.

"It is with deep gratification that I received the message of thanks from the convention of the I. L. G. W. U. I personally have had a real interest in the welfare of the I. L. G. W. U. and in its struggle for the elimination of the sweatshop and the obnoxious practices which its existence causes, not only in our own city, but wherever men and women labor for their livelihood. I send my heartiest congratulations and good wishes for the success of your convention."

Among other items on the convention agenda tomorrow and Tuesday will be the imposition of a special $5 tax on the membership for the liquidation of the international's debts, and ways and means of raising a fund of $500,000 for charitable and relief purposes. Among those who will benefit by this fund will be the Federation of Jewish Philanthropic Societies, the joint distribution committee, sufferers in the recent riots in Palestine and political prisoners in Russia.

'TUB' FURNITURE LOST, MR. ZERO DECLARES

Pieces Disappear From Street in Front of New Home—Needy to Eat Outdoors Today.

Urbain Ledoux, known as Mr. Zero, who was dispossessed last Thursday from his "tub" at 12 St. Mark's Place, where for two years he had fed the city's derelicts, charged last night that when he got up from his rick bed yesterday to make preparations for opening a new "tub" at 33 St. Mark's Place, he found that much of his furniture had either been stolen or carted away by the Street Cleaning Department.

Officials of the department, when informed of the matter, asserted that their men had not been responsible. Unless boys in the neighborhood broke up the furniture and scattered it in the streets, officials said, the Street Cleaning Department would not touch it. They said that if any furniture had been removed by a city department it probably had been taken by the Bureau of Highways in which case it would be stored and Mr. Ledoux could claim it.

The usual procedure when furniture of a dispossessed person has been left on the sidewalks for a number of days, they said, is for the Bureau of Highways to remove it as an obstruction to traffic. Mr. Ledoux said he has 500 loaves of bread and 500 pies to distribute this morning and as a result of the disappearance of his furniture hungry derelicts who appear at the new "tub" will have to eat their fare on the sidewalk.

STUDENT FACES EXPULSION.

Principal to Drop High School Boy Who Took Test Papers.

Dr. Elias Lieberman, principal of Thomas Jefferson High School, Brooklyn, said yesterday that he had decided to expel the student who took copies of midterm examination papers from the school vault so that certain members of the basketball team would be certain of passing and remaining on the team. Dr. Lieberman had already suspended the student and disqualified four members of the team. He refused to make public the names of any of the students involved.

He said that no further action would be taken against the members of the team except that the diploma of one, who is a senior, would be withheld until it was determined that he had no basic weakness of character.

JEWISH CONGRESS ASSAILS SOVIETS

Authorizes Committee to Make Protest Against Suppression of Religion in Russia.

FISH DENOUNCES POLICY

Representative Says Communists Sow Seeds of Atheism—Rabbi Wise Would End Silence.

Suppression of Judaism and persecution of Zionists in Russia by the Soviet Union were vigorously denounced by speakers yesterday at a conference of the American Jewish Congress in the Hotel Pennsylvania. The delegates represented sixty affiliated organizations, and at the conclusion of the conference adopted resolutions authorizing the appointment of a committee to call the facts to the attention of the Soviet Government and of all peoples and to take such action as it may deem necessary.

Speakers included Representative Hamilton Fish Jr., Nathan D. Perlman, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise and others. All condemned "the hostile policy of the Communists toward every faith, especially the persecution of Jews and the relentless prosecution of Zionists."

Fish Assails Soviets.

Mr. Fish, who is a member of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, declared he would never vote in Congress for the recognition of Russia "as long as the Third International is merely a torch in the hands of the Russian Communist party, which uses it to sow seeds of class hatred and atheism and to work destruction throughout the world." He said he did not believe reports coming out of Russia that Jews there have recanted in great numbers.

"The Jewish people have for centuries withstood religious persecution and oppression, and have always remained steadfast to their faith in Jehovah," he said. "It seems incredible that after almost 2,000 years the Jews in Russia should have recanted wholesale. I am convinced that the future will prove that the Jewish people of Russia are just as loyal and faithful to Judaism as those in other parts of the world."

Rabbi Wise said the policy of silence concerning the treatment of Jews in Russia should be ended.

"Against no religious group in Russia is there the merciless ferocity of attitude that there is against the Jews," he said. He added that the 3,000,000 Jews in Russia constituted a great reservoir of Jewish life and tradition and should be protected against persecution. He declared that if half the Jews in Russia were to prosper under the colonization plan, he would oppose it if the other 1,500,000 were to have their culture, their language, their homes and hopes destroyed.

Jewish Congress to Fight Policy.

"We must promptly and unremittingly proceed to bring to an end methods and practices calculated to make spiritual orphans of the Jewish children in Russia. There must be no further converting of synagogues and religious schools into warehouses and clubs. We can no longer tolerate the profane uprooting of Jewish cemeteries, the hounding of rabbis and scholars and the exile and imprisonment of Zionists. The horror of all this is not mitigated by its perpetration in the name of freedom and of high humanity. And the one way that lies open to us is the way to the court of public opinion. The facts must be made available to the larger masses of our people and must be circulated beyond the mere confines of the Jewish community, so that all right thinking men and women of every race and faith may join hands with us."

Leo M. Glassman, Jewish journalist, characterized the Jewish colonization scheme in Russia as a failure. He said the scheme in principle was laudable.

8 FIRMS SUSPECTED IN BUCKETING FRAUDS

Washburn Announces Places Are Closed and Many of the Officials Missing.

Eight brokerage firms suspected of perpetrating "bucket shop" or "tipster sheet" frauds have closed their offices in New York in the last two months, Assistant Attorney General Watson Washburn, in charge of the Bureau of Frauds, disclosed yesterday. In most cases, Mr. Washburn said, these firms already had closed their doors before their victims complained to the State Bureau of Securities. Officials of the firms, he said, had idsappeared in most instances and were still being sought.

One of the firms named was Barton, Ballard & Co., of 545 Fifth Avenue. When Deputy Attorney Nicholas Selvaggi and two State troopers visited that address, they learned, it was said, that the brokerage offices had been closed and all equipment removed ten days before. Mr. Washburn said that investigation disclosed that the lease had been signed by Charles Jackson, whose description tallied with that of a man the Bureau of Securities had had under surveillance on numerous occasions.

Other disappearances were reported at the offices of Lang & Co., 122 Nassau Street; Chapman & Co., at 154 Nassau Street; Leach & Co., at 30 Broad Stleet, and Moore & Co., at 1,860 Broadway. Officials of Leach & Co. are alleged to have sold stock of the Petroleum Corporation of America, and officials of Moore & Co. are wanted for the sale of United States Aircraft stock.

Bullard Recovering Slowly.

Major Gen. Robert Lee Bullard, retired, was making "slow but steady recovery," it was said, at his home, 2 East Eighty-sixth Street, yesterday. He had a slight heart attack a few days ago. Miss Rose Bullard, his daughter said "he has not had a relapse and is feeling very much encouraged."

What a Christmas!

This week the banks will release six hundred million dollars in Christmas savings funds. One little news item that you will probably read here and there in the daily press.

One street of retail stores—and a street that is not over eight blocks long, at that—is estimating its Christmas business at sixty million dollars for the month.

My, what a busy time a handful of rich people would have running up and down that street, trying to buy sixty million dollars' worth of Christmas presents.

Or, what a time a few millionaires would have running around to all the banks in the country, trying to withdraw six hundred million dollars in Christmas savings funds. The average Christmas fund is around one hundred dollars, so they would have to make six million trips to the banks, wouldn't they? And that would be just to get out their Christmas savings funds. If the regular savings funds were in the hands of a few rich people, and they wanted to get those savings out for their Christmas shopping, they would have to withdraw a total of TWENTY-EIGHT BILLION DOLLARS, which at present are the total savings deposits of the United States in the hands of some fifty-three million depositors.

All of which gets us back to where we started on this series of pages, many months ago: namely, that a millionaire cannot wear a hundred thousand pairs of shoes; and by the same token, he cannot buy a hundred million Christmas presents, nor do sixty million dollars' worth of shopping in a month, even when it happens to be conveniently located on a single street.

But a hundred million other people can do the Christmas shopping that America expects, if they have the money.

And, goodness knows! they have the money this year as never before.

America's great experiment is working better than anyone ever dreamed it could. Less than ten years ago we began that experiment of more money and more leisure for labor in order that it might be able to buy the things that it helped to make.

Today it is buying over 65 per cent in dollar volume of the things it helps to make. Today America could no longer get along without the buying-power of labor than it could without the production-power of capital. Which is just another way of saying that America cannot get along without -- America.

But it isn't even how much that great mass of American people are buying this Christmas that makes the story so thrilling. It is the freedom from care with which they are buying it, the freedom from worry in their eyes, the freedom from fear at their shoulder blades.

That's the story.

That's the big news.

Here at True Story Magazine we get the reflection of this situation so beautifully. For we are at the receiving end of these tens of thousands of manuscripts of personal experiences.

Ten years ago the stories of those savings accounts made an epic of struggle and privation. They were the little bulwarks that kept out the tide of fear. And when the necessity came, a man would draw on those savings very much as he would open a vein to give up some of his blood.

It was all here in thousands of these manuscripts ten years ago. Every story marked it for its theme. No money, no money, no time, no money. Overwork and under-pay, and every meager dollar carefully put away against the day when no more would be coming in.

Today, in these same true stories—what a different spirit is inspired! It isn't merely that those same bank accounts have multiplied by millions—savings and Christmas savings and checking accounts until the banks are bulging.

It's the attitude now with which they are looked upon.

"Bank account?" says Labor. "Of course, I have. A man's got to be substantial, hasn't he?"

And substantial is the word.

The grocery store, the drug store, the big department store, and even the credit-acceptance corporations are beginning to tell us how substantial labor is.

But we don't even need to go that far to get our basis for substantiality.

Every story in True Story Magazine tells that same tale.

Here in our editorial offices we can tell you now, as we could have told you a month ago, that there is going to be a great Christmas this year, but that it is not going to be a wild orgy of crazy expenditure.

The days of near-silk shirts and big glass diamonds are over.

There will be an enormous Christmas expenditure this year. But that is only as it should be, for America has had the most enormous business year that this or any other country has ever seen in the history of time. But even so, it will be a Christmas well within the range of what it ought to be.

In fact, our millions of True Story readers are telling us just what kind of a Christmas it is going to be. For they, you know, are the ones who are making it.

What a Christmas!

ASKS HAITIAN STUDY TO DECIDE COURSE

Foreign Policy Association Reviews Situation on Island Before Our Rule.

BACKS HOOVER PROPOSAL

Says Observers Differ on Benefits of Occupation, but Sees Less Democracy Than in Porto Rico.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The intricacies of the issues involved in the present American occupation of Haiti are emphasized in an elaborate special report on the problem prepared by Raymond Leslie Buell, with the aid of the research staff of the Foreign Policy Association and made public by that organization tonight. The report recommends that President Hoover appoint a special commission to investigate the situation and make recommendations as to future policy. Such a commission was recommended by the President himself in his message to Congress on Dec. 3.

"It is suggested," says the report in its conclusions, "that the members of such a commission should consist of men having a knowledge of international policy and of the relationship of advanced to less advanced peoples. In view of the fact that Haiti is inhabited by a black population, it has also been suggested that any such commission should include in its membership an American negro.

"Some critics of the present American policy in Haiti oppose the appointment of a commission on the ground that this means delay and that the commission would be 'packed.'

"It is argued by others that the appointment of a Haiti commission would be in line with President Hoover's policy of appointing commissions of inquiry, as in the case of law enforcement and public lands."

Surveys Haiti Before Occupation.

The report presents an elaborate picture of Haiti before the American occupation, the establishment of American control in 1915-22 and the achievements of the American occupation between 1922 and 1929. It discusses foreign interests in Haiti, the motives and alleged illegality of occupation and the political controversy over American control over expenditures, veto power in legislation and the ignoring of Haitian courts.

"The first reason given for American intervention in 1915 was humanitarian," says the report, discussing motives of American occupation. "The second motive of the United States was to protect and promote American economic interests. The third motive back of the occupation was strategic. A glance at the map shows that Haiti, Cuba, Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands form a screen shielding the Panama Canal from the outside world. The policy of the United States has been to prevent foreign powers from occupying upon these islands any position which would strategically threaten the Panama Canal."

Pointing out that Santo Domingo and Haiti, as parts of this screen, were seized and governed by the Navy Department during the World War, the report says "the United States feared that because of the internal turmoil on Haiti foreign States would intervene unless the United States did so and that such intervention would be harmful to the position of the United States at the Panama Canal."

It declares that "the State Department feared a French as well as a German attempt to occupy Haiti," and that "American fears were increased by the outbreak of the World War when it was believed Haiti might easily be made a base for German submarines."

"The United States," the report declares, "did not, however, invite the cooperation of other powers in intervening in Haiti in July, 1915. * * * Any proposal for joint intervention might have involved the United States immediately in the quarrels of Europe."

Cites Continued Conflicts.

Critics of the American policy, the report continues, "allege that if there had been a real danger of European intervention in Haiti, it could have been guarded against by much less drastic means than those actually employed, as, for instance, by neutralization, rather than occupation."

After discussing the terms of the 1915 convention, Haiti's reservation, the dissolution of the Assembly and the division of authority between civil and military control, the report declares that "despite the suppression of the Haitian Legislature, conflicts between the American authorities and the Haitian executive continue to arise," mostly over the interpretation of the 1915 convention.

The achievements of the American occupation are discussed in a separate section of the report, which declares "one of the most obvious accomplishments of the American occupation has been the establishment and maintenance of order and security in Haiti."

Other achievements are listed as the construction of a system of roads, communications and public works, the improvement of public health. The other objectives of the American occupation are given as the establishment of a system of agricultural and industrial education, the financial and economic reorganization of the country and "to establish a stable government and to train the Haitians to govern themselves."

"The present system of administration in Haiti," says the report, is marked by two features, "the concentration of administrative responsibility in the hands of the American High Official," and "the suspension of popular control over the Haitian President."

Sees Less Democratic System.

Discussing the arguments against this system, which the report says Dr. A. C. Millspaugh, former financial adviser, describes as having the appearance of "dictatorship by collusion," the report says:

"Although Haiti is nominally an independent country and although the American occupation will presumably come to an end in May, 1936, the United States today is responsible for the maintenance of a less democratic system of government in that country than it has adopted in the American dependencies of Porto Rico and the Philippines, where native legislatures have existed for years."

Discussing an American policy, the report says, in part:

"Some hold the view that the occupation of Haiti is based on force and that while it has brought about material improvements, it has demoralized the Haitian educated class. They believe that the sooner the Americans terminate the treaty and withdraw, the better.

"Others hold the view that the present American policy is a sound one, and that it should be continued until the expiration of the convention.

"A third view is that if the present policy is continued, the Haitians will be less able in 1936 than they were in 1914 to maintain a stable government unaided.

"Persons holding this view believed that in order to begin to train the Haitians to stand upon their own feet, drastic changes of policy should be made immediately. They recommend (1) that the present military officers should be replaced by civilians, on the theory that civilians would be less dictatorial in their attitude and better trained for administrative tasks than military officials; (2) that the Marine brigade should be withdrawn; (3) that greater responsibilities should be imposed on the members of the Haitian cabinet; (4) that elections should be held for the legislature and that the council of state should be abolished.

"When these changes are made, they say, the United States should announce its intention to terminate the occupation by 1936 or even earlier. Proponents of this view admit that the Haitians will not be able to maintain an administration as efficient as Americans, but assert that the United States has no right to expect standards of efficiency from Haitians, which the Haitians do not desire to maintain, and which are not maintained by many other countries in the world. They do not believe that revolutions will occur after American withdrawal, provided the United States leaves in Haiti a government which rests upon a legal basis and enjoys popular support."

"The fourth view," according to the report, "assumes that the Haitian people will be incompetent to govern themselves until after a long period of education. It is the opinion of the supporters of this view that if the occupation is terminated in 1936, the reconstruction work inaugurated by the United States will come to an end.

"The government would be turned over to the Haitian politicians, who would again exploit the Haitian peasants; economic stagnation would set in; the gendarmerie would fall into the hands of a clique, who would use it for revolutionary purposes. * * * Consequently, the supporters of this view advocate the indefinite occupation of Haiti by the United States and the authorization of such occupation by the negotiation of a new treaty in 1936."

PROTESTS TO PRESIDENT IN KILLING OF HAITIANS

Committee of United American Countries Society Backs Plan for Inquiry.

A telegram to President Hoover, signed by Albert Martinez as president of the society, protesting against the killing and wounding of natives of Haiti on Saturday, was made public yesterday by the permanent committee on International Cooperation of the Society of the United American Countries. The telegram contained the text of five resolutions adopted by the society.

The first two resolutions voice approval of President Hoover's proposal for the appointment of an investigating commission and urge that the commission's investigation will be thorough and impartial. Part of the text of the telegram follows:

"Deploring the heartless slaughter today, apparently by order of the High Commissioner, by a merciless Gatling-gun fire, of those five poor Haitians and the severe wounding of a score or more, who were armed, according to The Associated Press, only with machetes, clubs and stones.

"Appealing to your sense of humanity, your Quaker love of peace, and the divine right of your fellowman to live, to give immediate imperative orders to those in power in Haiti, representing you and your country, that not another drop of Haitian blood is to be spilled by your men and in your name, and under your command.

"Sympathizing with the horror, profound regret and shame we and all Latin-Americans believe you and your countrymen felt today when that easily avoidable tragedy was brought to your and their attention."

HAITI AIR SERVICE GOES ON.

Pan American Airways Keeps Its Schedules to Port au Prince.

J. M. Eaton, general traffic manager of Pan-American Airways, in a letter to President Hoover yesterday revealed that in spite of conditions in Haiti the planes of his company were maintaining their regular schedules in and out of Port au Prince.

"In the event of any acute local situation," Mr. Eaton wrote, "requiring the immediate departure from the city of American or other citizens, our equipment of transportation planes in the West Indies is at your disposal and that of the High Commissioner of Haiti."

HAITI AGAIN QUIET AS CRUISER ARRIVES

afternoon and received shortly before 10 o'clock tonight, read:

"All quiet throughout Haiti."

American women and children at Aux Cayes, Haiti, have been embarked on the steamer Martinique of the Columbian Line for Port-au-Prince, General Russell informed the State Department in a dispatch sent last night and made public by the department this evening. The same steamer, he added, was to call at Jeremie and pick up American women and children at that port.

General Russell at that time reported two small outposts at Chantel and Torbek had been ordered withdrawn to Aux Cayes in order to prevent their being rushed at night and their rifles and ammunition captured. Directions for calling in the small contingents of the Garde at these outposts were issued after crowds yesterday had surrounded both in a menacing manner. At Torbek the crowd threatened to kill the corporal, who was alleged to have warned Aux Cayes of the approach of the mob that made its descent on that place Friday afternoon.

Crowds Yell "Down With Borno."

General Russell's report of yesterday was not made public textually but was issued by the State Department this evening in paraphrase in the following official statement:

"Commissioner John H. Russell, at Port au Prince, reported at 6 P. M. Dec. 7, substantially as follows:

"'On the morning of Dec. 7 a crowd of about 2,000 surrounded the outpost building at Chantel yelling, "Down with Borno, down with Freeman." The Garde, assisted by the French priest, held the crowd off. Chantel is in the Aux Cayes district and has a Garde outpost of three men.

"'At Torbek, near Aux Cayes, where there is another outpost, a crowd estimated at 1,000 gathered on the morning of Dec. 7 and threatened to kill the corporal of the Garde, who was alleged to have telephoned into Aux Cayes the approach of the mob that descended on Aux Cayes on the afternoon of Dec. 6. The crowd had been shouting "Down with Borno, down with Freeman" but had not attacked the Garde.

"'Directions have been issued to call in the above two small outposts to Aux Cayes in order to prevent rushing the outpost at night and the capture of rifles and ammunition.

"'The telephone line between Aux Cayes and Port-a-Piment was being destroyed.

"'American women and children at Aux Cayes embarked on the steamer Martinique of the Columbian Line for Port au Prince. The Martinique was to stop at Jeremie and pick up about five American women and children at that port.'"

Cruiser Reaches Jacmel.

The cruiser Galveston arrived at 8 o'clock this morning at Jacmel, about twenty miles from Port au Prince, the capital, to receive American women and children. This cruiser, which is attached to the scouting fleet, made a quick run from the American naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba, in response to a request from General Russell.

The High Commissioner acted when he learned that the country people around Jacmel had been armed with automatic pistols, reported to have been received from Guatemala. The Galveston's complement is 300 officers and men.

The aircraft tender Wright, which is en route from Norfolk to Haiti with a contingent of 500 marines from Quantico and Parris Island to reinforce the 700 marines now there, is expected to reach Port au Prince tomorrow.

People's Lobby Scores Situation.

Characterizing the dispatch of more marines to Haiti as "superfluous evidence of the complete breakdown of our protracted policy of financial economic imperialism in the Caribbean area and elsewhere," the People's Lobby, of which Professor John Dewey is president, in a statement tonight suggests that "as we have made a flat failure of lying to the Haitians, and have demonstrated that failure for nearly half a generation despite the sending of commissions to exonerate our crimes there—a decent sense of modesty dictates that we request the League of Nations, or at least a conference of leading nations of the Western Hemisphere, to join with us in attempting to devise a way out of the mess we have created in that country."

The statement continues:

"The ghastly hypocrisy of our State Department piously protesting Russian action in Manchuria, while we send more marines to Haiti, should be obvious. The Secretary of the Navy in his report for 1929 states that 1,861 Haitians were killed by American Marines in 1919 alone. The natives estimated they killed one out of every 1,000 inhabitants.

"The American financiers have ruthlessly exploited the Haitian people, and the State Department under Democratic and Republican Administrations alike has ruthlessly suppressed Haiti's right to self-determination and deprived Haitians of training in self-government. Force having failed we are now sending more forces, while solemnly celebrating the beneficence and success of the Kellogg peace pact."

MAKE STOP IN HAITI FLIGHT

Two Marine Planes at Jacksonville on Way to Island.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 8 (AP).—Two marine amphibian planes en route to Port au Prince, Haiti, to reinforce the aerial squadron there, landed here late today.

In command of Lieutenant William O. Brice and Peter P. Schrider of Quantico, Va., the planes will remain here over night before resuming the flight, via Miami, to Haiti.

The aviators will deliver the planes to the marine force now in Haiti and return to their base on the U. S. S. Wright, which left Norfolk, Va., Saturday, with a contingent of 469 marines to reinforce the detachment now in Haiti.

TRADE BOARD ASKS POWER OF SUBPOENA

Commission, in Annual Report, Cites the Difficulties Met in Power Investigation.

BUSINESS ETHICS IMPROVED

Thirty-one Conferences Were Sponsored in Year to Outlaw Unfair Methods of Competition.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—In an effort to put more teeth into the law, the Federal Trade Commission in its report to Congress, made public today, suggests an amendment to the Federal Trade Commission act, designed to clarify the compulsory power of the commission in carrying on investigations at the direction of either branch of Congress.

Strengthening of the commission's power to subpoena witnesses and compel the production of books and papers, would greatly facilitate the work of the general inquiries into business and industrial conditions frequently directed by Congress, the commission believes.

"The present investigation of electric power and gas utilities is cited, in some of its phases, as being such an inquiry.

"Several of the public hearings," the report says, "were devoted to laying the foundation for an application to the Federal Court for the Southern District of New York to require the Electric Bond and Share Company (one of the largest holding companies) to submit its operating expense ledgers for inspection by the commission's examiners and to require its officers and employes to give testimony on various subjects.

Company Resisted Application.

"The application was resisted by the Electric Bond and Share Company. It was argued before Judge Knox Feb. 15, 1929.

"Shortly after the close of the fiscal year Judge Knox handed down his decision. The court held that the commission has the power to subpoena in a general investigation as distinguished from an adversary proceeding.

"The court held further that the witnesses must appear and answer pertinent inquiries as to the third ground of the company's opposition. However, the court was of the opinion that the commission had not yet established probable cause to believe that the books and papers called for contained evidence relevant and material to the inquiry.

"A suitable amendment of the commission's organic act would remove much of the difficulty the commission has encountered in carrying on investigations at the direction of either House of Congress. Both Houses of Congress have long held and exercised with judicial sanction the auxiliary power of investigation in aid of legislation, including the power to subpoena witnesses and compel the production of books and papers.

"A specific delegation of such power, limited to the general scope of matters now committed to the commission by its organic act, and to be exercised only upon the direction of either House or Congress, would greatly facilitate the work of the commission in conducting the general business inquiries which have frequently been directed by either the Senate or House of Representatives."

The commission reports the completion, in large part, of the inquiry into utility publicity methods.

The commission reported that it had sponsored during the year thirty-one conferences for the abolition of unethical business methods.

REPORT SAYS BRITISH FIGHT INDIAN TRIBE

London Paper Hears "Important Developments" Occur at Wana, Near Afghanistan.

LONDON, Monday, Dec. 9 (AP).—The Daily Mail today prints a dispatch from Rawalpindi, Punjab, reporting that British troops had engaged in fierce fighting at Wana, in Southern Waziristan. Beyond saying that "very important developments had suddenly occurred," the dispatch did not explain what the fighting was about.

Wana is only about twenty-five miles from the border of Afghanistan and is about 200 miles southwest of Peshawur, Northwest provinces. British troops in that section of India have long had to contend with incursions of Afghan tribesmen from their mountain strongholds across the border. These at times have reached serious proportions, but there has been none of any consequence for several years.

SAYS NEAR EAST NEEDS AID.

Medical Director Reports Medical Help Is Still Wanted.

Medical instruction and physical aid still are needed by large areas of population affected by the war in the Near East, according to a report by Dr. Wilfred M. Post, medical director for the Near East Relief, whose report of a recent visit to Transcaucasia, Syria and Greece was made public yesterday.

Disease has lowered materially the vitality of persons in this area, he said, and this has created further poverty that breeds more disease in a continuous "vicious circle."

The Armenian training school for nurses, which has graduated 176 students, will be moved from Leninakan to Erivan, the country's capital, where it will be operated jointly by the American organization and the Armenian Red Cross, the report said.

Dr. Post also brought back a request from the League of Nations that an itinerant health service be set up for the benefit of 80,000 Armenian refugees from Turkey who still remain to be established in rural communities in their homeland.

FISHER TO APPOINT GRUNDY AS SENATOR

an interparty fight, but this is not the belief of the Governor's advisers. Governor Fisher is reported to have received assurances that the Senate will honor the certificate of appointment. Senators Norris and Borah, the insurgent leaders, according to the information received here, will present no objections to seating Mr. Grundy upon appointment by the Governor.

Indications are that the old Penrose machine, now directed by Grundy and W. L. Mellon, will act without making any concessions to Mr. Vare unless he retires from the race for the Senatorship. In that case his recommendation for Governor will be carefully considered and probably acted upon. Should he not acquiesce, the view here is that a fight will be made against him and his machine as was the case in 1926.

Upon the return of W. L. Mellon from his cruise in the Caribbean, conferences will be held on the Senatorial situation and the State ticket. The conferences are not expected to change the present plans of appointing Mr. Grundy, but will deal with the other offices. The conclusion is said to have been reached that with Grundy as the candidate for the Senate and a popular candidate for Governor, the old machine can brave the threatened storm.

In other quarters, however, the belief prevails that if Mr. Vare should command his normal strength in Philadelphia, and with ex-Governor Pinchot dividing the country vote, Mr. Grundy would have difficulty in obtaining a plurality, and Vare might win again.

Should ex-Governor Pinchot be a candidate for the Senate, he may have as his running mate, Major Gen. Smedley D. Butler, Secretary of Labor Davis also is in the field for Governor.

Should Mr. Grundy refuse the appointment, with the backing of the State machine, it is believed here that either Owen J. Roberts of Philadelphia or George S. Graham will be named by the Governor.

The funeral of Representative W. W. Griest on next Tuesday will be attended by many political leaders.

Vare Followers Pledge Him Support.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 8.—While Governor Fisher at Harrisburg was receiving messages from all parts of the State urging the appointment of Joseph R. Grundy to the Senate, William S. Vare at Atlantic City was hearing pledges of full support from his Philadelphia ward leaders in his campaign for vindication against the Senate, which rejected him on the ground that his credentials were tainted. Mr. Vare announced yesterday his decision to run for the Senatorial nomination in the May primary.

Communications reaching the Governor emphasized that conditions at Washington made it almost imperative that he should either name Mr. Grundy or subscribe to the dictation of a group of Senators, of whom Senator Nye of North Dakota, was mentioned as a leading figure.

Promises of a battle "to the finish" next May came in the afternoon from Mr. Vare's ville in Atlantic City, where James M. Haslett, chairman of the Republican City Committee, Sheriff Thomas W. Cunningham and a large group of other leaders had assembled to congratulate their chief upon his decision to seek the election again.

Asks Group to Stand.

Mr. Vare, speaking with the vigor that characterized his relations with his lieutenants before a stroke of paralysis laid him low last year, asked his visitors point blank whether they were with him 100 per cent. with their friendship and their resources.

"We are, chief, we are," was the substance of their reply. "We'll see you through a successful campaign in the primary and the general elections and send you back to Washington with new credentials."

At the conclusion of the conference Harry C. Davis, executive secretary of the Republican City Committee, issued the following statement:

"James M. Haslett, chairman of the Philadelphia Republican City Central Committee, said that after having interviewed nearly all of the members of the city committee, including Sheriff Thomas W. Cunningham, treasurer of the State Republican Committee, and Charles B. Hall, Republican floor leader of City Council, it had been definitely assured that the entire organization will support Mr. Vare in his candidacy.

"The Republican City Committee also will stand with Mr. Vare in any program that he may formulate during the course of the campaign for the coming primary election.

"Mr. Vare has received assurances of support from hundreds of active Republican men and women throughout the entire State of Pennsylvania. He has received a great number of telegrams and telephone messages and other communications.

"It is his intention to make an aggressive canvass of the State and the organization in Philadelphia will be found with him to the finish."

As far as could be ascertained, Mr. Vare avoided discussion concerning the temporary appointment of a Senator, and there were indications that he had made no overtures toward obtaining the appointment for himself.

It was announced that the campaign to re-elect him would begin immediately, with formulation of plans for a State-wide organization to be effected within the next week or two. Thus was promised a hot battle for Mr. Grundy or anybody else who might be appointed by Governor Fisher with a view of going before the people at the next election.

How much personal campaigning Mr. Vare can stand was problematical to his associates. His sole idea in exposing himself to the rigors of another campaign, he said, was to prove that he won his 1928 election fairly.

Even politicians who felt that the Vare sentiment might begin to ebb a month or two hence agreed that the Philadelphia Republican leader played a "trump card" in issuing his unexpected announcement yesterday. It made it certain, they pointed out, that he would have to be considered in the writing of a State-wide primary slate.

Incidentally, one result of the statement is said to be the removal of Mrs. Flora M. Vare, his sister-in-law, from the field of possible candidates for the State Senate.

GIFTS Janet Gray SAW AT LEWIS & CONGER

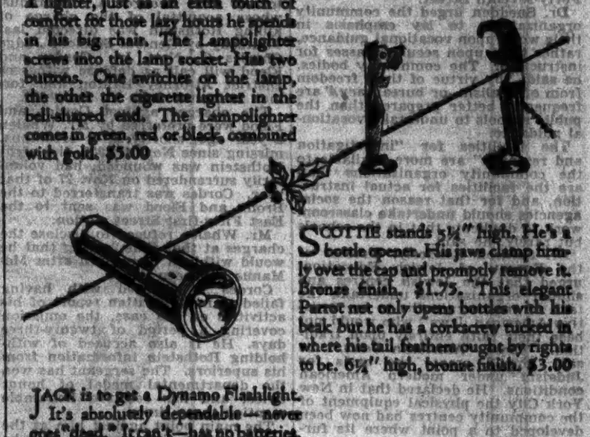
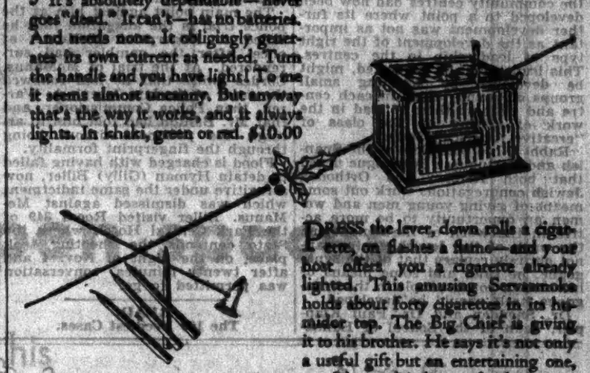
MARY will like the Onelegged Table, I know. She can set it across the arms of her chair (or hold it on her lap). On the smooth, hard side she can sew or write. Or she can play solitaire on the soft, padded side. The top, 18" x 30", can also be adjusted for height. These tables come lacquered in coral red, jade green, and in plain mahogany finish. $7.50

I'M giving the Big Chief a Lampolighter, just as an extra touch of comfort for those lazy hours he spends in his big chair. The Lampolighter screws into the lamp socket. Has two buttons. One switches on the lamp, the other the cigarette lighter in the bell-shaped end. The Lampolighter comes in green, red or black, combined with gold. $5.00



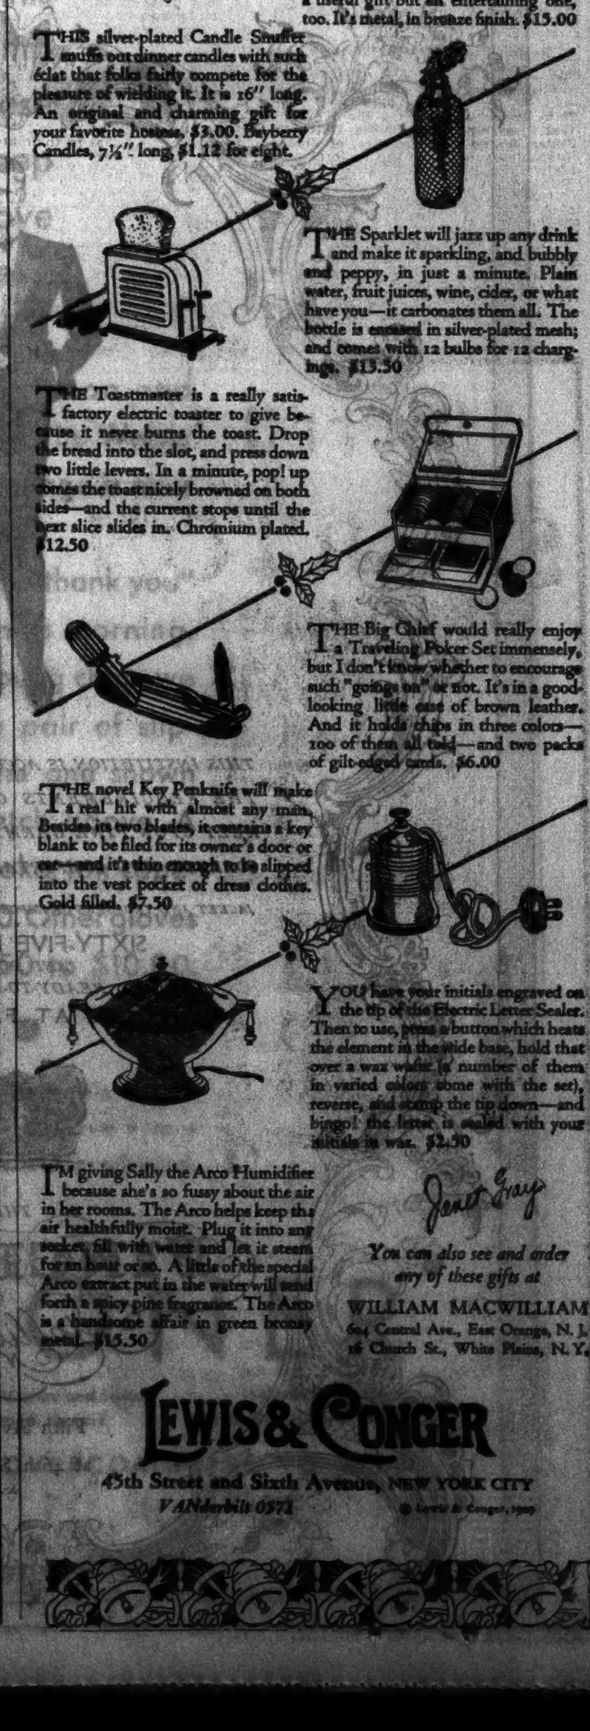
SCOTTIE stands 5¼" high. He's a bottle opener. His jaws clamp firmly over the cap and promptly remove it. Bronze finish. $1.75. This elegant Parrot not only opens bottles with his beak but he has a corkscrew tucked in where his tail feathers ought by rights to be. 6½" high, bronze finish. $3.00

JACK is to get a Dynamo Flashlight. It's absolutely dependable—never goes "dead." It can't—has no batteries. And needs none. It obligingly generates its own current as needed. Turn the handle and you have light! To me it seems almost uncanny. But anyway that's the way it works, and it always lights. In khaki, green or red. $10.00



PRESS the lever, down rolls a cigarette, on flashes a flame—and your host offers you a cigarette already lighted. This amusing Servasmoke holds about forty cigarettes in its humidor top. The Big Chief is giving it to his brother. He says it's not only a useful gift but an entertaining one, too. It's metal, in bronze finish. $15.00

THIS silver-plated Candle Snuffer snuffs out dinner candles with such éclat that folks fairly compete for the pleasure of wielding it. It is 16" long. An original and charming gift for your favorite hostess. $3.00. Bayberry Candles, 7½" long, $1.12 for eight.



THE Sparklet will jazz up any drink and make it sparkling, and bubbly and peppy, in just a minute. Plain water, fruit juices, wine, cider, or what have you—it carbonates them all. The bottle is encased in silver-plated mesh; and comes with 12 bulbs for 12 charges. $13.50

THE Toastmaster is a really satisfactory electric toaster to give because it never burns the toast. Drop the bread into the slot, and press down two little levers. In a minute, pop! up comes the toast nicely browned on both sides—and the current stops until the next slice slides in. Chromium plated. $12.50

THE Big Chief would really enjoy a Traveling Poker Set immensely, but I don't know whether to encourage such "goings on" or not. It's in a good-looking little case of brown leather. And it holds chips in three colors—100 of them all told—and two packs of gilt-edged cards. $6.00

THE novel Key Penknife will make a real hit with almost any man. Besides its two blades, it contains a key blank to be filed for its owner's door or car—and it's thin enough to be slipped into the vest pocket of dress clothes. Gold filled. $7.50

YOU have your initials engraved on the tip of the Electric Letter-Sealer. Then to use, press a button which heats the element in the wide base, hold that over a wax wafer (a number of them in varied colors come with the set), reverse, and stamp the tip down—and bingo! the letter is sealed with your initials in wax. $2.50

I'M giving Sally the Arco Humidifier because she's so fussy about the air in her rooms. The Arco helps keep the air healthfully moist. Plug it into any socket, fill with water and let it steam for an hour or so. A little of the special Arco extract put in the water will send forth a spicy pine fragrance. The Arco is a handsome affair in green bronze metal. $15.50

FOR VOCATIONAL AID BY SOCIAL AGENCIES

Dr. Snedden Urges Convention of Jewish Organizations to Stress Guidance of Youth.

NEW BASIS FOR FAITH SEEN

Dr. Benderly Proposes Training for "Creative American Jews" to Adapt Religion to Modern Life.

Discussion of plans for the extension of Jewish Centre, Y. M. H. A. and Y. W. H. A. work, which included incidentally a condemnation by Dr. David Snedden of Teachers College, Columbia University, of the junior high school system of vocational guidance, occupied the attention of the convention of the Metropolitan League of Jewish Community Associations yesterday at 71 West Forty-seventh Street.

Dr. Snedden urged the community organizations to lay emphasis in their work upon vocational guidance, rather than upon secular classes for instruction. The community bodies, he said, "by virtue of their freedom from officialism, or bureaucracy," are frequently better prepared than the public schools to undertake vocational guidance.

The facilities for "investigation and research" are more available to the community organizations than are the facilities for actual instruction, and for that reason the social agencies should undertake classroom work to duplicate that in the schools but rarely, he said.

Dr. Samson Benderly, director of the Bureau of Jewish Education, urged that the Jewish centres and similar organizations undertake the task of training youths to be "creative American Jews" who would not base their faith entirely upon tradition. These "American Jews," he said, should create the basis for Judaism under modern American conditions. He declared that in New York City the physical equipment of the community centres had now been developed to a point where its further development was not as important as the development of the right type of leadership in the centres. This leadership, he suggested, might be developed by selecting small groups of young people in each centre and training them to lead in the work of setting up the class of "creative American Jews."

Rabbi D. de Sola Pool of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue urged that both Reform and Orthodox Jewish congregations work out some means of giving young men and women an opportunity to be more active in the work of the synagogue, the work of the Jewish centre cannot entirely replace that of the synagogue, he said, and some means of interesting young people in the synagogue itself should be developed.

Dr. Snedden and Dr. Paul Klapper, dean of the School of Education of the College of the City of New York, who spoke on secular education, stressed the importance of leading youths to educate themselves. Dr. Snedden said that American youths were inclined to enter courses of instruction with an attitude expressed by the phrase "educate me if you can."

More than 100 persons representing twenty-eight groups attended the convention.

Sol M. Stroock, president of the league, and the other officers were re-elected.

WHALEN TRIES 2 TODAY IN ROTHSTEIN CASE

Detectives Cordes and Flood Are Accused of Laxity in Investigating Murder.

Detective Sergeant John Cordes and Detective Patrick Flood will go on trial today at Police Headquarters on charges that they were lax in the investigation of the murder of Arnold Rothstein. Police Commissioner Whalen will preside at the trial.

The detectives will be defended by James D. C. Murray, who was attorney for George A. McManus, whose acquittal of the charge of killing Rothstein was directed last Thursday by General Sessions Judge Charles C. Nott Jr. Cordes and Flood will call as defense witnesses District Attorney Banton and former Inspector John D. Coughlin.

The charges against Cordes and Flood were preferred by Mr. Whalen a year ago, shortly after McManus, missing since Nov. 4, 1928, the night Rothstein was wounded, had voluntarily surrendered on Nov. 27 of that year. Cordes was transferred to the Bronx and Flood was sent to the East Fifty-first Street station.

Mr. Whalen refused to disclose the charges at that time, saying that he would withhold them until after McManus had been tried.

Cordes is charged with having failed to make written report of his activities on the case, the omission covering a period of twenty-three days. He is also accused of withholding Rothstein information from his superiors. The sergeant has won the departmental medal of honor twice, and has received honorable mention three times.

The main point against him at the police trial is the allegation that he failed to fingerprint McManus at once, after the gambler had surrendered. At the trial of McManus, Cordes swore that he had followed the order of the late Joseph A. Warren, then Police Commissioner, and that Mr. Banton had told him to arraign the prisoner without going through the fingerprint formality.

Flood is charged with having failed to detain Hyman (Gilly) Biller, now a fugitive under the same indictment which was dismissed against McManus. Biller visited Room 349 of the Park Central Hotel, where the State contends the shooting took place, on the night of Nov. 4 and after twenty minutes' conversation was permitted to go.

NEW CITY SCHOOLS COSTING $42,000,000

Contracts Soon to Be Let Will Make Total About $50,000,000, Building Head Reports.

PLANS ARE MADE FOR 1930

Ryan Puts Sum at $30,000,000—About Third of Present Construction Is for Brooklyn.

More than $42,000,000 is being spent in school construction throughout New York City and the expenditure of almost as great a sum is in prospect for the near future and the coming year, according to a report issued yesterday by Walter C. Martin, Superintendent of School Buildings, and Dr. George J. Ryan, president of the Board of Education.

Forty-seven new schools, with 88,000 seats, besides three athletic fields and seven playgrounds, are now being erected, Mr. Martin reports, and the awarding of contracts for six other schools for which bids either have been received or are being advertised will raise the total to nearly $50,000,000.

A building program being outlined for 1930 by the Board of Education involves an expenditure of about $30,000,000. Dr. Ryan added, although details of this program were not contained in Mr. Martin's report.

About one-third of the money is being spent in Brooklyn, Mr. Martin shows, the Bronx and Queens coming next, while Manhattan is third and Richmond fourth.

Eighteen of the new schools, with 24,896 seats, will be in Brooklyn, as will one of the athletic fields, and these, all under construction, entail an expenditure of $17,274,000. Besides this work, Mr. Martin says, there will be three schools seating 5,000 pupils and costing about $2,085,000, for which contracts are to be awarded soon.

The Bronx program calls for nine elementary schools and one high school, supplying a total of about 16,300 seats, at an approximate cost of $8,520,000, and construction will begin as soon as bids are accepted on two other schools, which will cost about $3,230,000 and provide more than 5,500 additional seats.

Queens, with $8,000,000 worth of construction in progress, will gain 15,869 seats, divided between ten elementary schools and two high schools. It also has one athletic field now being constructed and a contract for another school will be awarded soon.

Under construction in Manhattan, the report shows, are two elementary schools, two high schools and a large athletic field, to cost $6,854,000 and adding 9,000 seats. Richmond has three new schools, seating 2,000 pupils, which will cost more than $1,000,000 when completed.

Hoover League, which was organized in the Presidential campaign of 1928. Most of these Hoover supporters took little interest in the recent municipal election and it is Mr. Steinbrink's idea that they can be brought back into the party to take an active part in the State campaign next year and in the Presidential campaign in 1932.

The change of leadership in Brooklyn is the first tangible move made since the defeat of the Republican city ticket headed by Representative F. H. La Guardia and was made possible by the recognition at Washington of Mr. Steinbrink as the dispenser of Brooklyn patronage instead of Mr. Livingston, which was interpreted by Mr. Livingston as indicating that President Hoover desired his removal.

Livingston Is Silent.

Mr. Livingston said that he had not been asked to call a meeting of the executive committee and that he had nothing further to say. His statement releasing Federal office holders from their allegiance to him was believed to indicate his intention of attempting to come back later if conditions should be favorable. Mr. Livingston once before had been shorn of his leadership by Mr. Calder, only to get it back after the party suffered a disastrous defeat in the 1921 Mayoralty campaign.

Belief was expressed by Brooklyn Republicans that Mr. Steinbrink had made a tactical error in talking with Mr. Livingston and enabling the latter to charge that his removal was brought about by Under-Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills and Mrs. Ruth B. Pratt, Representative in Congress. Brooklyn Republicans are opposed to anything that looks like interference in party matters from the outside, particularly from Manhattan, and the injection of Mr. Mills and Mrs. Pratt into the situation has caused some feeling even among members of the executive committee, who will vote to confer the leadership upon Mr. Steinbrink as a matter of expediency.

Although United States Marshal Jesse D. Moore, leader of the Twelfth Assembly District, is among those who have agreed to vote for Mr. Steinbrink, the members of the anti-Livingston group were said to continue to oppose his reappointment. The five census enumerators recommended by Mr. Livingston and endorsed by State Chairman William J. Maier will not be appointed, it was said, but the five persons recommended by Mr. Steinbrink will be named instead.

In Queens the tentative agreement for a division of the census enumerators reached at a conference between Borough President George U. Harvey and Mr. Maier is said to have been broken by the refusal of Mr. De Bragga to consent to it. As a result, it was said, the appointment of the three Queens census supervisors submitted by Representative Robert L. Bacon on recommendation of Mr. De Bragga have been held up again.

So far no definite move has been made by the Mills-Pratt group against Samuel S. Koenig, New York County chairman, although both Mr. Mills and Mrs. Pratt are reported to believe that Mr. Koenig should be ousted or made to retire. United States Marshal William C. Hecht, a prominent member of the Koenig organization, is up for reappointment and so far, it was said, no opposition to him had appeared.

Neither has any opposition developed, so far as could be learned, to the retention of Collector of Internal Revenue Frank K. Bowers, another leading member of the Koenig organization. Seven New York County Republican district leaders hold places in the internal revenue office and two in the office of the marshal. The difficulty confronting those who wish to oust Mr. Koenig is that he holds his leadership by occupancy of two offices recognized by law, the chairman of the county committee and the chairman of the executive committee, to which he has been elected for terms which will not end until 1931, and that it is not possible to take away his leadership by resolution, as will be done in Brooklyn.

DECLINES OFFSET GAINS IN STATE EMPLOYMENT

Drop Occurred in November, Usually a Month of Reduction From the Fall Peak.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 8.—Gains in employment made in New York State factories in September and early November were wiped out by losses in the latter month, Frances Perkins, State Industrial Commissioner, reported today.

November usually marks the first seasonal reduction after the peak of Fall employment in October. The information obtained by the Industrial Commissioner came from reports of more than 1,500 factories in the State, employing about one-third of its factory working population.

Two per cent more factory workers were employed this year than in either 1927 or 1928. The improvement over the last two years resulted from gains made in the Spring, sustained employment during the Summer and widespread advances in September.

This downward trend affected nearly every industry and locality, Commissioner Perkins reported. Food, clothing and leather groups, which make the greater seasonal changes, suffered the heaviest reductions. Losses in the metal group caused a greater drop than usual.

Automobile and parts factories made severe cuts. General losses also were recorded in silverware and jewelry, brass, copper and aluminum. Gains in a few plants sent employment in the railroad equipment and repair shops upward.

To Exhibit Blue Bird Camp Work.

An exhibition of the work done by the youths of the arts and crafts classes of the Blue Bird Camp at Palisades Interstate Park, Central Valley, N. Y., will be held on the afternoons and evenings of Wednesday and Thursday at the Temple Emanu-El Community House, 1 East Sixty-fifth Street. George Jessel, screen and stage star, will preside at the afternoon sessions.

RHODES SCHOLARS CHOSEN FOR 1930

One From Each of 32 States Is Elected From a Field of 367 Applicants.

SIX QUALIFY AT ANNAPOLIS

Two Win the Honor at West Point —Swarthmore Student Is the Only Eastern Representative.

Special to The New York Times.

SWARTHMORE, Pa., Dec. 8.—Dr. Frank Aydelotte, president of Swarthmore College and American secretary to the Rhodes Trustees, made public today the names of thirty-two men, six of them from Annapolis and two from West Point, who were successful yesterday in the Rhodes scholarship examinations conducted in thirty-two States.

The new scholars will take up their studies at Oxford University next October. Under the will of Cecil Rhodes, each will receive an annual stipend of £400 (about $2,000) for three years.

The Naval Academy, entering the competition for the first time, offered seventeen candidates. The Military Academy was the only other institution having more than one candidate accepted.

Delaware, represented by William Poole of Swarthmore College, was the only Eastern State participating in this year's election, in which there were 367 applicants.

For the first time the scholars will have a choice as to whether they will take three years of work successively at Oxford or postpone the third year until after a period of years spent at home. The third year may be taken at Oxford or at any other university in any country except their own, depending upon their further plan of study.

Dr. Aydelotte Reviews Year.

"The past year has been of great significance in Rhodes scholarship organization in America," President Aydelotte said today. "It has marked the establishment, through the Association of American Rhodes Scholars, and the generosity of Mr. George Eastman, of an Eastman visiting professorship at Oxford.

"This chair, which is attached to Balliol College, will be held by Americans of intellectual distinction. The first incumbent will be Professor John Livingston Lowes of Harvard, who will go into residence next October.

"The year has also been marked by the reunion of old Rhodes scholars at Oxford last July, for the opening ceremonies of Rhodes House, a magnificent new building erected by the Rhodes Trust. About one hundred American Rhodes scholars, in most cases with their families, attended this reunion."

Academic and Athletic Honors Won.

He pointed out that American Rhodes scholars, at present or recently at Oxford, had achieved distinction in scholarship and athletics. In academic work seven won first class honors for the Bachelor of Arts degree and ten received advanced degrees. The American scholars usually receive their degrees at the end of the second year.

Among the recent scholars prominent in Oxford athletics was W. E. Lingelbach, elected from Pennsylvania in 1926, captain of the Oxford lawn tennis team and a star on the varsity soccer team. He was the first American to win his Blue in that sport.

R. H. Baugh, elected from Alabama in 1927, was captain of the varsity golf team and reached the fifth round in the British amateur championship last Spring before his elimination by Cyril Tolley. The varsity track and relay team includes four American scholars and the varsity lacrosse team had five Americans out of its twelve members.

Thirty-two scholars are elected from this country annually, and a slightly larger number from the British dominions and colonies. By a resolution of the Rhodes trustees, passed this year, two scholarships a year are again available for German students.

American Scholars-Elect.

TAILOR GUILD SUITS FIFTY DOLLARS AND UPWARDS — TAILOR GUILD OVERCOATS $50 TO $125

2 BURGLARS SEIZED WITH $10,000 LOOT

One Is Captured by Owner as Pair Are Surprised in Mount Vernon Home.

SECOND IS FOUND HERE

Detectives Find Cash and Jewels on Thief When He Appears at a Restaurant in City.

Two men were captured yesterday after they had been surprised in the home of August Johnson at 38 South Fourteenth Avenue, Mount Vernon. Mr. Johnson overpowered one of the pair in the house; the other, who escaped with $10,000 in money and jewelry, was trailed to New York, where he was arrested later in the evening.

Mr. Johnson, who is the owner of a storage warehouse, returned with his wife to his home late yesterday afternoon and was surprised to find the lights on. He entered just as a strange man came down the stairs from the second floor. Mr. Johnson grappled with him and held him while Mrs. Johnson telephoned the Mount Vernon police station.

Captain Silverstein of the Mount Vernon police questioned Mr. Johnson's prisoner, who said he was Jack White, 28 years old, of 165 Bowery. Meanwhile Mr. and Mrs. Johnson had checked up on the house and its contents and found that $10,000 worth of valuables had disappeared. They were not to be found on Clark, indicating that an accomplice had escaped. An open kitchen window showed how the pair had entered.

White vehemently denied having had a companion at first, but after continued questioning he admitted that he and his pal were to meet at Third Avenue and Twelfth Street, New York, later in the evening. Captain Silverstein immediately called New York Police Headquarters and Detectives Myers and Cowley of the Fifth Street Police Station were assigned to keep White's rendezvous for him.

They waited for some time in the restaurant set for the meeting until they noticed a man peering in suspiciously through the window. He slipped away as they started out, but they caught him at Third Avenue and Seventh Street. In one pocket he had a woman's handbag containing between $1,500 and $2,000 in cash; in another there was a small jewel box containing the stolen jewelry. The prisoner was taken to Police Headquarters, where he said he was Joseph Clark, 32 years old, of Pittstown, Pa.

Charges of burglary were placed against both men. The Mount Vernon police said they believed the pair had stolen between $50,000 and $100,000 worth of property in numerous burglaries in Westchester in the last six months. Both admitted having criminal records, according to the police.

CARDINAL O'CONNELL IS 70.

Boston Prelate Congratulated by the Members of His Diocese.

BOSTON, Dec. 8 (AP).—Cardinal O'Connell of Boston today observed his seventieth birthday. He received the felicitations of many friends and others attending masses in the diocese offered their communion for his benefit.

The Cardinal tonight was the guest of honor at a dinner at St. Johns's Seminary attended by more than 300 priests. He opened the day by celebrating a solemn high mass at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. In his sermon he expressed his thanks for the manifestations of affection from the people of the archdiocese and lauded them for their spirit of cooperation

AUTOPSY PERFORMED ON RADIUM VICTIM

Tumors Found in Body of Mrs. McDonald Similar to Those in Four Other Cases.

A further study of the results of radium poisoning was carried out by a small group of physicians at the morgue here yesterday when an autopsy was performed on the body of Mrs. Quinta McDonald of 286 Highland Avenue, Orange, N. J., one of several women who contracted a strange malady after pointing with their teeth the brushes with which they applied a radium solution to watch dials.

Mrs. McDonald died on Saturday at Memorial Hospital, where she had been a patient for several months. Her weight had dropped from a normal of 144 pounds to 77 pounds. At least four of her former coworkers in the Jersey factory of the United States Radium Corporation had died.

The autopsy was performed by Dr. Harrison S. Martland, chief medical examiner of Essex County, N. J., who is credited with having discovered the disease. He performed the autopsies on the other victims. Calling radium poisoning the contributory cause of Mrs. McDonald's death, he noted that similar tumors had been found in all cases. He pronounced death due to the following condition:

"Sarcoma of the pelvis with tumor metastases [shifting or translation of a disease from one part of the body or from one organ to another] in lungs—liver and typical mesothrium or radium ostitis of femur and spinal column."

The tumors were said to have resulted from irritation caused by the ingestion of radium. Among the physicians at the autopsy were:

Dr. CHARLES A. NORRIS, Chief Medical Examiner.
Dr. ARMAND V. ST. GEORGE, assistant director of laboratories of the Department of Hospitals.
Dr. THOMAS A. GONZALES, Deputy Chief Medical Examiner.

It was noted that Mrs. McDonald's maiden name had been Maggia and that an Amelia Maggia, thought to be her sister, who also was employed at the same plant, had died of ulcerated stomatitis on Sept. 22, 1922.

PRIZES ARE AWARDED FOR AIRPORT DESIGN

Los Angeles Architects Win First Place and $5,000 in Nation-Wide Competition.

Winners in the competition for airport design sponsored by the Lehigh Portland Cement Company were announced yesterday by Raymond Hood, architect and chairman of the jury of awards.

A first prize of $5,000 went to A. C. Zimmerman and William H. Harrison, architects, of Los Angeles. C. Clifford Rich, architectural designer, of Chicago, won the second award of $2,500. A third prize of $1,000 was won jointly by Odd Nansen of East Orange, N. J., and Latham C. Squire of New York, and a fourth prize went to Will Rice Amon of New York. Twelve who got honorable mention received $100 each.

The design of the winners concentrates all of the buildings in one corner of a rectangular field, leaving a quadrant-shaped area for the runways and the flying. A passenger terminal building with underground passages to the loading and unloading points is flanked by hangars at the edge of the flying area. The design provides for parking spaces for automobiles, a hotel, a recreation building, shops and amusement concessions arranged in a triangular park.

ST. ANN'S CHURCH BECOMES A SHRINE

Archconfraternity Is Set Up as Bishop Dunn Celebrates Solemn Pontifical Mass.

GILLIS READS PAPAL BRIEF

Designation Made by Pope at Request of Cardinal Hayes—Ex-Governor Smith Present.

The Right Rev. John J. Dunn, Auxiliary Bishop of the Archdiocese of New York, representing Cardinal Hayes, celebrated a solemn pontifical mass at St. Ann's Church, Twelfth Street, between Third and Fourth Avenues, yesterday morning at which the Archconfraternity of the Motherhood of St. Ann was inaugurated.

The service followed the receipt by Mgr. George J. Waring, pastor of St. Ann's, a few days ago of a papal brief which announced that Pope Pius XI, at the request of Cardinal Hayes, had designated St. Ann's as "the American National Shrine of the Motherhood of St. Ann and the Primary Church in the United States for the Archconfraternity of the Motherhood of St. Ann." The Cardinal, who is on a Mediterranean cruise, recently spent a week in Rome.

The local church has a relic of St. Ann, who was the mother of the Virgin Mary, and semi-annual novenas held in the edifice have for years brought thousands of pilgrims to the church's altar.

Mgr. Waring has from the time of the entrance of the United States into the World War served as vicar general of the United States Army and Navy chaplains of which Cardinal Hayes is bishop-ordinary. The Monsignor is also a close friend of the Cardinal.

Former Governor Alfred E. Smith, now a parishioner of St. Ann's, accompanied by his wife and other members of his family, attended the 10:15 o'clock mass and heard an announcement of the honor the Pope had bestowed upon the church.

The Rev. James A. Gillis, Paulist missionary and editor of The Catholic World, who preached at the pontifical mass, read the brief, which is signed by Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State.

The brief grants a plenary indulgence to all on the first day of their enrollment in the Archconfraternity if the conditions of confession or of the taking of hold communion are fulfilled and when they are in danger of death. The brief also carries an indulgence of seven years and seven quarantines to all members observing the prescribed conditions of worship on certain feasts and who have made prayers for the "peace of the Christian princes, the destruction of heresies, for the conversion of sinners and for the exaltation of the Holy Mother Church, or pray according to the intention of the Holy Father."

An indulgence of 300 days is granted during the novens in honor of St. Ann, which will take place twice a year, if it is devoutly attended. Finally, every time that members visit the church in which the Archconfraternity is established and there recite any prayer in honor of St. Ann they will gain an indulgence of 100 days.

Auto Gas Kills Canadian War Hero.

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, Dec. 8.—George Fraser Kerr, V. C., one of Canada's heroes of the World War, was found dead this afternoon sitting in his car in his garage. He had started the engine and while waiting to have it warm up began reading. Death was due to carbon monoxide gas. He returned three days ago from London, where he attended the banquet to holders of the Victoria Cross given by the Prince of Wales.

SEEK TO CURB POWER OF SANITATION HEAD

Three Borough Presidents Fight Against Transfer of Disposal Plants.

ALSO STREET EQUIPMENT

Board of Estimate Engineers Study Situation and Will Recommend a Solution.

An effort to prevent transfer to the new Sanitation Commission of a certain number of positions and a certain number of plants and quantity of equipment will be made this week by Borough President George U. Harvey of Queens, James J. Byrne of Brooklyn and John A. Lynch of Richmond, it was learned yesterday. The differences of opinion between the Borough Presidents and Dr. William Schroeder Jr., chairman of the commission, already have been subjects of discussion, and several engineers of the Board of Estimate have been assigned to make an inventory of the property and equipment involved in the dispute and to recommend the disposition.

Mr. Harvey has submitted to Dr. Schroeder a statement of the plants, equipment and working force he believes should be transferred to the commission. Dr. Schroeder directed Michael Fanaro, who has been in charge of street cleaning in Queens, to continue this work under him and it is believed that Mr. Fanaro, a Harvey appointee, will be continued in office.

Mr. Harvey in his report to Dr. Schroeder raised the question of the control of so-called sewage disposal plants in Queens. He has consulted Borough President Byrne, who is said to agree with Mr. Harvey that these plants with their employes should remain under the Borough Presidents.

There are fifteen of these plants in Queens. They are used to screen solid matter from the sewer flow before the flow is permitted to empty into the waters of Long Island Sound and Jamaica Bay. About sixty men are employed in these plants.

It is the contention of the Borough Presidents that these plants do not come under the provisions of the act creating the Sanitation Commission, which gave the commission jurisdiction over disposal plants. In the view of the three Borough Presidents, these are screening and not disposal plants.

Another matter to be settled is the division of the trucks, equipment and workmen, which have been used by the highway and street cleaning bureaus in the boroughs. As these bureaus were formerly under the Borough Presidents, it has been the custom for each bureau to use men and equipment to help each other out in an emergency. At times men and equipment of the highway bureau, particularly in Queens, were used to help the street cleaning bureau in garbage collection in the Rockaways in Summer and in snow removal in Winter. The Borough Presidents wish to retain as many employes and as much equipment for their highway bureaus, which will remain under their jurisdiction.

READING, PA.

Reading Ranks Third in Manufacturing Among Pennsylvania Cities

In Reading and Berks County, 1000 manufacturing establishments produce 175 different lines of commodities. The output of these commodities is valued at more than $200,000,000. Upwards of 51,000 persons, whose pay envelopes total $60,000,000 a year, are employed in these industries.

Textile manufacturing alone in the Reading area has an annual production value of more than $96,000,000. Reading and Berks County rank importantly in the United States in this industry.

Reading is the home of full-fashioned hosiery, machinery, single-thread lace machinery, high grade alloy steel, gloves, silk underwear, Holland window shades, small steel castings, menthol cough drops, heat-treated auto frames, butcher blocks, wrought iron pipe, goggles, children's shoes, narrow fabrics and optical goods.

Reading's annual turnover in retail merchandise for 1929 exceeds $60,000,000.

Reading has neither slums nor tenements. One-family houses and high grade apartment houses form the residential features of this city.

A splendid market for every national advertiser.

LARGEST CIRCULATION

The Reading Times has the largest net paid A.B.C. audited circulation ever attained in Reading and Berks County.

ADVERTISING GAINING LIKE A HOUSE AFIRE

In November, 1929, compared with November, 1928, the Reading Times gained 55,101 lines in national advertising and the evening Eagle gained 10,834 lines.

In local display the Times gained 60,421 lines and the evening Eagle lost 29,983 lines.

RECORD FOR ELEVEN MONTHS

In total display the Times gained 658,239 lines and the Eagle gained 156,450 lines.

SEND FOR COMPLETE MEDIA RECORDS REPORT

In 1926 the Reading Times advertising gains beat every other 6-day paper, morning or evening, and with only one exception, every 7-day paper in the United States.

In 1927 the Times increase was excelled only by one other 6-day paper (evening) and among ALL newspapers was excelled only by two combination newspapers (morning, evening and Sunday).

3 CHILDREN KILLED BY BOMB SET IN HOME

power. The bomb evidently had consisted of an iron pipe about ten inches long, loaded with a high explosive and containing a dozen iron slugs. A small time clock was attached to a spring, and a small six-volt battery. The bomb had blown large holes in the table and the floor and wrecked the furnishings, but a canary, hanging in a cage, was unharmed. The money in Mary's hand was blown to shreds.

The detectives within a few hours had turned up three facts.

One was that Falzone had received threatening letters within the past few weeks demanding money and warning him to get out of the country.

Another was that there had been difficulty between Falzone and his wife over a woman who, the police said, had told Mrs. Falzone that Falzone was the father of a 3-year-old boy.

A third was that the relations between Falzone and his wife became so strained last June that Mrs. Falzone had him taken to the Wilson Avenue station on a charge that he had threatened her life. She complained taht he had a pistol. The police established that Falzone had a license to carry a pistol, and Mrs. Falzone withdrew the charge.

Falzone is one of the more prosperous residents of the Italian section in which his family had lived for the past few years. He owns the Columbia Marble Works at Humboldt Avenue and Scholes Street, Brooklyn, in partnership with a man named Simone.

Letter Demanded $6,000.

Detective Thomas Carroll of the Stagg Street station re called that Falzone had gone to the station with a printed letter which he said he had received on Oct. 5. It was on white paper, enclosed in a pink envelope and was decorated with a heart pierced by a stiletto. It read:

"We want $6,000, and after that you are not finished. You get out of this country and go back to Italy."

For signature it had a skull and cross-bones.

A second letter instructed Falzone to leave the money in a certain place on one of the night boats to Boston. Detective Carroll arranged to accompany Falzone. Carroll made the trip, but did not see Falzone until he got to Boston, where Falzone explained that he had not been clear as to which boat to take.

On Oct. 23 Falzone received another letter telling him that the sender knew that he had told the police and warning him:

"It won't be well for you now. We are going to kill you."

Again the police investigated, but without result. Detectives began a new attempt last night to trace the history of the notes.

When Mrs. Falzone had recovered sufficiently to be questioned she told the police of her husband's departure last Thursday. Meanwhile a taxicab driver, Joseph Perricone, of 648 Hart Street, Brooklyn, told the police that at 5 o'clock that morning he had seen two men dressed in hunting clothes eating in a Coffee Pot restaurant at Myrtle and De Kalb Avenues. A tin-type photograph of Falzone was shown Perricone and, according to Commissioner Whalen, he said it resembled one of the men he had seen. Efforts were begun at once to trace the two men.

Mrs. Falzone also told detectives of her disagreements with her husband and said that they had considered a separation, but that she had not brought suit. She told them, too, of another woman, to whom she said her husband had been attentive for several years. Acting on this information the police caled on a woman living in Buffalo Avenue and conducted her to an undisclosed place for questioning.

This woman, they said, had long been separated from her husband.

At Mrs. Falzone's direction the police looked under the linoleum floor-covering of the kitchen, the room in which the children were killed, and found several letters which Mrs. Falzone said the woman had written about her husband and about the woman's 3-year-old son. She had hidden the letters there and had not told her husband, Mrs. Falzone said.

In one of the letters, according to the police, was the following sentence:

"I'm sure you can have no objection to my calling my son Joseph Falzone, after his father."

The woman, the police said, readily admitted her relationship with Falzone and told them that Falzone was the father of the child.

Falzone's re-entry to his home last night was dramatic. The police had been hunting for him all day, spurred by the report that he was one of the two men who had been seen near the Falzone home early in the morning.

He was met at his house by detectives, who took him at once to the police station, accompanied by four of the hunting party of seven. Falzone was thrust through the door and caught sight of his wife. He shouted something at her in Italian. She responded in Italian. And then he was taken into a private office and subjected to a long examination by District Attorney Dodd, Commissioner Whalen and other high officials. They questioned him acutely as to when he had last been at home, and he told them it was at 6 o'clock Thursday morning.

Falzone's hunting companions who were questioned by police were Philip Goebel, Benjamin Neuman and Philip Goldman, all of Mineola, and Edward Frieda of 126 Irving Avenue, Brooklyn.

There had been eight in the party, they said, and they had stopped in a boarding house in Kimble's, Pike County, Pennsylvania. Falzone shared a room with others in the party, they told the police, and was awakened with them yesterday morning. They returned to Brooklyn late yesterday morning, they told the police, happy in having bagged a couple of deer, and were about to sit down to dinner when Falzone telephoned his home.

A detective waiting at the house answered the telephone, told Falzone there had been an accident and urged him to hurry home. Falzone did so and was taken to the station house.

Mrs. Falzone, who was near collapse through much of the questioning by the police, was taken last night to Wyckoff Heights Hospital. Her two young children were lodged with a neighbor.

NAVAL FLIERS AWAIT SELECTION OF STATION

Several Cities Offer Airports to Reservists Who Used Rockaway Point Field.

Members of the two naval reserve squadrons to which the city has refused further use of Jacob Riis Park at Rockaway Point as a naval air station are awaiting the outcome of recommendations sent to the chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics in Washington.

On these recommendations, it was said yesterday, the bureau will decide whither the air station will be moved. Meanwhile the reserve fliers are getting in all the time they can on the eight planes furnished to them by the navy and Marine Corps.

Newark Metropolitan Airport and the new Bridgeport municipal airport have offered the air station a permanent home. Philadelphia and Miami have besought the Navy Department to place the station at their own aeronautical centres. New York, so far as could be learned, has offered the reserve no substitute for the Rockaway reservation.

Peter J. O'Toole, commissioner in charge of the Newark field, said yesterday that the naval reserve air squadrons would be welcome in Newark and declared that until they could have their own hangar built the city would provide them hangar space free of charge. Bridgeport, it is understood, has made even more generous offers. Meanwhile the reservists are wondering how they will be able to keep up enough flying to maintain their status as naval reserve air officers.

Lieut. Commander Harry Baugh, general inspector for aircraft in this naval district; Lieutenant L. A. Moobus and Lieutenant Richard F. Whitehead, who recently succeeded Lieutenant Moobus as commanding officer at Rockaway, were members of the commission reporting to Washington on the matter of a new site.

THAT'S A LOAD OFF MY MIND!

I KNOW how finicky men are. But last year I found a present that took a load off my mind . . . Bayuk Phillie Cigars. The men who got them gave me some pretty broad hints that they'd like to have Phillies again this year. So . . . it's all settled. Every man on my list is getting Phillies this Christmas. And I don't have to worry!

* * *

Nor will you have to worry about wrapping Phillies. They're all done up with Christmas covers. You have a choice of packages. Some show a colorful, Colonial Christmas scene—"Christmas Eve in Old Philadelphia." The Phillie Longfellos also come in a natural-wood box, rich with cedar scent . . . specially wrapped in green, red, or amber glassine. Packages of ten are fixed "Christmassy" too. Fine for the children to put in Daddy's stocking or for a small remembrance. At all cigar stores. Get them today! Bayuk Phillies take a load off men-shoppers' minds, too.

STUDENTS ARE RATED AS SOUND LOAN RISKS

The Harmon Foundation Reports Losses of Less Than 2 Per Cent in Credits of $538,220.

Funds advanced to needy college students for educational purposes are now considered an investment, rather than a form of philanthropy, so far as the Harmon Foundation is concerned, according to a review of the foundation's seven years of experience in the field, which was made public yesterday.

When the foundation entered the field of student loans it was the purpose of the late William E. Harmon, the founder, to demonstrate that the students were potentially a sound business risk. His purpose was both to pave the way for the transfer of such enterprises from the field of philanthropy to that of business and to give the student himself training in financial responsibility. The experience of seven years is set forth in the review as proof of the accomplishment of this objective.

The basis of credit in the work of the foundation has been character. Losses in collections have averaged less than 2 per cent in the administration of the fund, and even this loss is covered by a mutual guarantee fund, which is made a part of the expense to the student. The total advanced during the seven years has been $538,220. While but $208,882 of this has as yet come due under the contracts, $228,756 has already been repaid. Only $4,500 of the total delinquent money is considered doubtful of collection without legal action.

"As a result of this experience," the foreword to the review concludes, "it would appear that banking institutions would be quite justified in making properly administered educational loans to rigorously qualified students in selected colleges and universities.

"It is interesting to note that the experience of the Harmon Foundation goes further than a mere demonstration of the economic soundness of student loan paper, thus opening up a new field of marked interest to banking institutions. In addition, the foundation feels that it has amply demonstrated the value to the student personally of establishing a sound credit rating early in life, and of budgeting his expenses so that he operates his affairs on a strictly business basis. Such personal training is invaluable to the student himself; it is almost equally valuable to those business institutions in whose service the student will later seek a career."

Mr. Brisbane commends the New OLYMPIAN

On his recent trip from Chicago to Seattle, Mr. Arthur Brisbane, eminent journalist, rode the new Olympian, the only transcontinental roller-bearing train—electrified for 656 smokeless, sootless, mountain miles. And as he rode, he wrote for the Chicago Herald-Examiner:

"On roller bearings, the Olympian runs as smoothly as a baby carriage. One engine starts and pulls smoothly a train of twenty cars. It could pull only thirteen cars without roller bearings. Just now, the train with one engine goes 30 miles an hour up a steep grade where two heavy engines formerly puffed slowly pulling a shorter train.

"The Olympian climbs a hill 2000 feet high, twenty miles long, in one hour, hauling a load of eight million pounds. Think that over. Two copper wires, each smaller than your little finger, feed the power to lift the eight million pounds. That makes you respect electricity."

The new Olympian, queen of all de luxe trains, travels the shortest route between Chicago and Seattle and Tacoma. Leaves Chicago Union Station daily at 9:00 p.m. NO EXTRA FARE.

POLICE LEGION PAYS HONOR TO 22 DEAD

Service in Broadhurst Theatre Commemorates Those Who Died in Last Year.

8 KILLED IN LINE OF DUTY

Crain Says He Will Keep in Close Touch With Force When He Becomes Prosecutor.

Services in commemoration of twenty-two policemen who died in the past year were held yesterday afternoon at the Broadhurst Theatre by the Honor Legion of the Police Department, which consists of policemen who have been decorated for valiant service. Eight gold stars in memory of those killed in the performance of duty were pinned to the service flag of the legion by Deputy Police Commissioner Felix A. Muldoon, who expressed Commissioner Whalen's regret at being unable to attend because of a personal investigation of the explosion in Brooklyn yesterday.

Eight hundred men of the Honor Legion assembled at the Arsenal police station, Fifth Avenue at Sixty-sixth Street, at 1:30 P. M. and marched down Fifth Avenue to the theatre to music played by the Police Band. "Onward, Christian Soldiers," was played by the band as members took their seats. Inspector Thomas McDonald, chairman of the board of trustees of the legion, presided at the services for Charles C. Steinert, president of the legion, who has been ill for several months.

The Rev. John A. Wade, chaplain of the legion, delivered the invocation and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. G. Caleb Moor. The Rev. William G. Ivie read from the Scriptures. Addresses were delivered by the Rev. James A. Dunnigan, honorary chaplain of the legion; former Justice Thomas C. T. Crain, who was recently elected District Attorney; the Rev. Edward H. Hughes and former Representative William W. Cohen.

There were songs by Miss Mary Allen, Joseph Wetzel, William D. Begley and Mme. Du Marquise of the San Carlos Opera Company. The Police Glee Club sang "Abide With Me" and the band played several selections.

During the roll-call the lights were lowered, revealing twenty-two candles on the stage, representing the men who had died. The names were called and at the answer of "Absent" a candle was extinguished. After the last name had been called there was a brief silence, followed by the sounding of taps by Arthur Weingarten and Franklin Hussaker.

Mr. Dunnigan spoke in his address of the appropriateness of the memorial service just before Christmas, when the grief of those who were left behind would be most poignant.

"We ask Almighty God to give them eternal rest and may perpetual light shine upon them," he said.

Mr. Crain said that he expected to be in close contact with members of the police force as their next District Attorney. He said that the outstanding characteristic of the police was fidelity and that they had proved faithful in the performances of the most difficult public duties.

"Fidelity is something we look for everywhere," he said. "All public men are expected to do their duty. But there are few callings that require a braver heart than the upholding of the law. The policeman takes his life in his hands in the discharge of his duty and their daily tasks are a recollection of their fidelity."

Mr. Hughes said that he hoped the services would preserve the memories of those who had died in the minds of those who were living.

Mr. Cohen, who is Honorary Fire Commissioner, urged an amendment to the charter to provide free hospital service and compensation to policemen injured in duty, such as he said was already provided for firemen.

The policemen killed in performance of duty were:

ALBERT BRUDER, Jan. 11.
ANDREW W. WOOD, April 12.
WILLIAM SCHMELTER, April 14.
WILLIAM L. McCAFFREY, Aug. 3.
CHARLES A. BAUER, Oct. 28.

Changes Mid-Year Commencement Date.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Dec. 8.—A change of the mid-year commencement date at the Pennsylvania State College from Feb. 11 to Jan. 31 has been approved by President Ralph D. Hetzel. The change was advocated by the college senate to place the convocation at the beginning of the mid-year vacation, which extends from Feb. 1 to 11, rather than at the end. The new date will advance the graduation to Friday of the final examination week for the first semester.

CAPTURES ARMED ROBBER.

Victim, Held Up by Three on West 38th St., Holds One Till Aid Comes.

Kaluno Yalis of 384 Fifty-third Street, Brooklyn, grappled with armed robbers when he was held up while walking in West Thirty-eighth Street early yesterday. He clung to one of the trio until police aid arrived and the man was arrested. The other two, however, made their escape with $25 which they had taken from Yalis.

The arrested man, who was held in $5,000 bail in Jefferson Market court yesterday, described himself as Joseph McGrath, 26 years old, of 36 Willow Street, Brooklyn. Yalis said McGrath accosted him on the pretext of borrowing a match. Two other men appeared and one stuck a gun into Yalis's ribs while the other took his money. Yalis struck McGrath and then held him until Patrolman Lohmeyer arrived.

American Business Declares War ..... against X

Last week's conference at Washington turned the spotlight upon . . . and furnished the background for this fifth NATION'S BUSINESS advertisement about . . . the powerful external forces, personified by X, that control modern business!

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 5th, 400 business leaders, representing more than thirty industries, met at Washington and literally signed a "Declaration of *Inter*dependence!"

This Conference, called at the request of President Hoover . . . and held under the auspices of the United States Chamber of Commerce . . . is a significant step forward in industry's organized effort to combat the powerful external forces that control American business today.

Modern business is so complex that each industry depends upon all others. Conditions in industries outside your own are the dominant external forces that retard or accelerate your business today! They are infinitely more powerful than the internal factors you control!

★ ★ ★

Consider this case . . . which has a thousand actual counterparts!

Suppose the business of a grocer in Globe, Arizona, suddenly falls off. He investigates and finds that his customers . . . men in the mines . . . are working in shorter shifts.

"Why?" he asks. And the mine operators reply that they are slowing up copper production because orders aren't coming in from the electrical manufacturing industry.

"Why?" he repeats. And electrical manufacturers point to delay in orders for equipping new power plants.

"Why?" And the power company operators say that blue prints are drawn, contracts are ready, money is in the bank . . . but they must wait for governmental action.

So, while the grocer in Globe, Arizona . . . and all industries down the line are wondering "What's wrong with business?" . . . their continued well-being awaits the stroke of a pen in a distant city! A powerful external force they can't control!

That's only one example. Consider ship building . . . and the literally hundreds of industries dependent. And American ship building at the moment awaits a decision regarding mail contracts! Another instance of external forces at work!

★ ★ ★

Today, the problem of interrelated industry is greater than the problem of any single group. Indeed, it is the real problem of every industrial unit!

Through chambers of commerce and trade associations . . . through such conferences as last week's at Washington . . . American business is solving this problem. By cooperation!

More than 310,000 alert executives depend upon NATION'S BUSINESS to give them a clear picture of the whole industrial movement. It is . . . and always has been . . . edited to give you constant contact with these powerful external forces . . . forces that American industry, by its "Declaration of Interdependence" at Washington last week, officially recognized!

You can pick up the December NATION'S BUSINESS at leading newsstands, twenty-five cents . . . or you can have it come to your office or home every month, $7.50 for three years.

CANADA AND NEWSPRINT.

The Provinces of Ontario and Quebec produce about 52 per cent of the newsprint paper made on this Continent. The industry in Canada found itself in a depressed condition and a year ago the good offices of the Premier of Quebec and the Prime Minister of Ontario were invoked. Naturally, the two Provincial Governments feared the effect of the overproduction which had been brought about under the stimulus of higher prices and large profits, and in order to prevent shutting down mills and throwing work people out of employment brought about an agreement whereby the mills undertook to restrict their output to some 75 per cent of their capacity. That may probably have been a justified measure, bringing about a partial relief of the industrial situation. But now, before that method has had time to work itself out fully, it is proposed, with the sanction of both the Quebec and Ontario Governments, to raise the price of print paper $5 a ton.

Certainly the two things do not go together. To cure overproduction by raising the price of the article produced seems a fantastic way to go about it. It leads to a whole series of contradictions. If production were reduced steadily and long enough, demand might in time be counted upon to lift prices. But a price suddenly and arbitrarily raised cannot fail to decrease demand. Thus the Canadian mills would run round the circle and find themselves suffering again from overproduction. The two remedies for the trouble cannot be applied at the same time in this way without making the trouble worse. The Canadian paper manufacturers might have it either way, but it is plain that they cannot have it both ways.

There is a prevailing opinion that the present established price is adequate. On the basis of it new capital has been invested, new mills have been built and are being built. It may well be true that some misplaced mills, or with outworn or obsolete machinery, and with too much water in their capitalization, have not been able to make a profit. But it would be absurd to fix a price for the whole trade in accordance with the assumed necessity of enabling such mills to make money. The mills recognize the difficulty which a higher price might cause some of their American customers, on account of the financial disturbances in this country, and so offer them a rebate of $5 a ton for the first six months of 1930. When they speak confidently of the effect of the financial collapse on the American demand for print paper as being only "temporary," how do they know that their prophecy will be verified? One thing which they do know and virtually confess is that their plan to increase the price of newsprint by more than 8 per cent is certain to cause a good deal of friction and ill feeling on the part of the publishers of American newspapers.

This is the larger aspect of the matter which the Canadians cannot afford to ignore. It is more than a question of trade. It rises to the importance of an international relation. The Canadian Dominion Government is not yet directly interested in this matter, but can it view without concern the possibility that exactions by a combination of Canadian mill owners, with the sanction if not encouragement of the Governments of Quebec and Ontario, may stir sentiment on this side of the border? The whole situation in the commercial relation of the two countries is still delicate. Last Summer Canadians were excited and even alarmed at the prospect that the new American tariff would discriminate against their products and interfere with their American trade. For the time being, at least, those fears have been removed. The duties aimed at such Canadian exports as lumber and shingles and cattle have been stricken out of the bill before the Senate. But must it not occur to Ottawa that if American purchasers of Canadian newsprint come to feel that an advantage has been taken of them by a virtual monopoly there will be a clamor at Washington for retaliation?

It seems to THE NEW YORK TIMES that this whole matter ought to be taken into most serious consideration by the Canadian Government, whether of the Dominion or of the Provinces. To increase without notice, and in many cases without an alternative recourse, the price of a necessity in the American publishing business is unmistakably to give offense and provoke ill feeling. This Canadians, we are sure, cannot and do not desire. They are wholly within their rights and are discharging their duty when they look after a great Canadian industry and attend to the needs of those who work in it. But that can be done without doing a manifest injury to the citizens of another country. Good-will between Americans and Canadians is of too great value to both to be impaired by any rash or ill-judged action affecting international trade by either.

A HAITIAN INQUIRY.

Congress should act quickly upon President HOOVER'S request for authority to appoint a commission to investigate conditions in Haiti. Such an official inquiry, by competent men, holding sessions in public, should go a long way toward appeasing sentiment in Haiti hostile to the United States, and also in pointing out to Congress and the Administration what should be done there. It is plainly a case of conscience with Mr. HOOVER. Even before the recent shooting into a mob of Haitians by American marines, bent on maintaining public order, as was their duty, the President had asked Congress to direct an inquiry. This has been made even more urgent by recent unhappy events. They affect our policy not merely toward Haiti but toward all of Central and South America.

The good fruits of Mr. HOOVER'S journey in those regions will be imperiled by what has happened in Haiti. Every anti-American newspaper in Latin America will exclaim over the killings in Haiti as one proof more of the imperialistic and ruthless designs of the United States. The cynical question will be asked why this country does not live up to the Kellogg Pact, which it is demanding that other nations respect, when it is itself engaged in controversy with a weak people. Such insinuations are, of course, without foundation, and overlook entirely the obligations which this country has by treaty assumed in Haiti. But the assertions will be none the less mischievous. The best way to dispose of them is, as the President suggests, to send a strong commission to Haiti, where the grievances of the natives may freely be aired, and where the conduct of our military administration may be fearlessly inquired into. Too much is at stake for Congress to hesitate in doing what Mr. HOOVER asks it to do.

THE NULLIFIERS.

Among the patriots who voted to exclude Mr. VARE from the Senate are some who have waxed hot over the "nullification" of the Eighteenth Amendment by certain States. Those fifty-eight Senators who voted for that exclusion are guilty not of an imaginary but of an actual nullification of the Constitution:

> No person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the age of thirty years, and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that State for which he shall be chosen.

Each house shall be the judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members.

In the Convention of 1787 the Committee of Detail reported that "the Legislature of the United States shall have authority to establish such uniform qualifications of the members of each house, with regard to property, as to the said Legislature shall seem expedient." At that time most State Constitutions required a property qualification of members of the Legislature. GOUVERNEUR MORRIS made a motion to strike out the words "with regard to property." Had that amendment carried, Congress could have prescribed whatever qualifications it chose. Mr. MADISON objected strongly to this "improper and dangerous power." Qualifications must be "fixed by the Constitution." Otherwise the Legislature "can by degrees subvert the Constitution."

With unconscious prophecy he saw that "qualifications founded on artificial distinctions may be devised by the stronger, in order to keep out partisans of the weaker faction." The Convention voted down both MORRIS'S amendment and the recommendation for a property qualification. How can the Convention have intended to grant to one branch of Congress a power it denied to the whole body? The constitutional qualifications are explicit. They were meant to exclude all others. The direction that each house shall be the judge of its own members must be interpreted in the light of its origin.

It is first found in the Pennsylvania Charter of 1701, and was repeated in the Constitutions of a number of States. In each the qualifications to be judged are those set down in the Constitution of that State. Certain States have tried vainly to add to the constitutional requirements of Representatives in Congress. The same is true of State enlargement of the constitutional qualifications of a Senator. It has remained for the Senate arbitrarily to extend those qualifications, to refuse the oath of office to Mr. VARE as to Colonel SMITH, not for want of constitutional qualifications, but for having spent more money in the primary elections than the Senatorial props of virtue approve. The particular disqualification of Mr. VARE is that he spent fifty-four cents a head on each voter.

This sin against "the dignity and honor of the Senate" is so punished. How far will concern for the dignity and honor of the Senate carry its champions? The ingenuous Mr. NYE has already devised a new qualification. The Governor of Pennsylvania will have to appoint as Senator "one far removed from affiliation with the Mellon-Grundy-Fish-er machine" or Mr. NYE will try to bar the appointee from the Senate doors. The arrogance of the Senate is not surfeited with another victory over the Constitution.

SIGNING THE PROTOCOL.

Today by direction of the President the Chargé d'Affaires of the United States at Berne will officially sign for this country the three protocols of the World Court. One of them is the statute of the Court, another the revision of the statute, and the third is the one signifying the accession of the United States of America to the World Court. This action by the President was taken upon the recommendation of the Secretary of State. In a long communication to Mr. HOOVER, Secretary STIMSON set forth the whole history of the case, reciting the difficulties and objections raised by the Senate when it voted to adhere to the Court with reservations, and explaining how the revised statute of the Court, especially in the matter of advisory opinions, has fully met the views and safeguarded all the interests of this country. As a final argument for ratification by the Senate, Mr. STIMSON permits himself to say:

> The influence of the United States is so great, the effect of its mere suggestion of withdrawal would be so embarrassing to the other nations, that there is far more likelihood of their submitting to an ill-founded objection on our part than of their forcing us to withdraw when we really had a legitimate reason for opposition to a question.

This is well meant, but sounds like an unhappy echo of what was said in the United States Senate when the Covenant of the League of Nations was under debate. The late Senator LODGE arrogantly asserted that the Senate could make any changes it pleased in that document, confident that European nations would crawl to our feet and gratefully accept whatever we saw fit to offer them. That is hardly the tone or temper to carry into the establishment of an international court of justice. However, the great thing is that President HOOVER has put his hand and seal to this promise of the United States to take part in this agency for the judicial settlement of disputes between nations. The Senate is bound to ratify his action, unless it is willing to convict itself of hypocrisy in having ratified a frenzy undertaking never to go to war without having first sought to decide any pending controversies by peaceful means, including a judicial decision on the rights and wrongs of the case.

BATTLE OF LONG ISLAND.

A leader who cannot take his followers anywhere may yet keep his title for a time. The stability of the Manhattan Republican organization has proved that. But a leader who is ignored in patronage matters by the head of his party sits under the sword of DAMOCLES. The present uneasy plight of Mr. JACOB A. LIVINGSTON, Republican leader of Brooklyn, illustrates the point. The free and growing predictions that Mr. LIVINGSTON will be ousted by the committee in favor of Mr. MEIER STEINBRINK seem certain to have their test soon. Even the "very interesting reading matter" about his foes which Mr. LIVINGSTON has generously promised the public may not be able to save him. For Brooklyn, under his leadership, has become the largest and surest Democratic borough; and now the White House patronage axe is shearing the official heads of his friends and supporters.

In Mr. STEINBRINK the titular leader faces an opponent well qualified to challenge him. This successful lawyer, head of the pre-convention Hoover movement on the Left Bank, is aggressive, highly intelligent and knows his way around. His endorsements carry weight with the Republican State organization and with the President. He is respected by the opposition and feared by the ward heelers. He is not at all afraid of Mr. MCCOOEY, dread chieftain of Brooklyn Democrats. His idea of erecting a fighting organization which will go on the theory that in a new deal there is hope for the Republicans of New York City has won independent support. He is accounted consequential by Mr. MAIER, consulted by Mr. HILLES, confers with OGDEN MILLS, and his head has been bent in conference many times with Dr. BUTLER. He wears well-made clothes and represents corporations at times, but comes as directly "from the people" as does Mr. LIVINGSTON.

The local political world, along with the State and national, will await the joining of the issue in Brooklyn with unaffected interest. Perhaps it will be the testing ground for "titular" vested rights. For that reason Mr. KOENIG himself is probably one of the most absorbed spectators. If Mr. LIVINGSTON is ousted, the insurrectos may move even against the other entrenched position. Treason is in the air over Brooklyn, and the cloud—now considerably larger than a man's hand—may move across the East River.

BRITISH UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE.

In the British Labor Party the "Clydesiders" have been the militant advocates of a program looking beyond the immediate interest of the working class. The trade-union representatives, in the mass, have been the conservatives, concentrating on the non-revolutionary subjects of wages, hours and working conditions. If Clydesiders have been joined by trade-unionists against the Labor Government's new insurance bill, it is because the issues involved are those of concrete advantages. The outstanding feature of the new bill was not the increased allowances, which are estimated just to double the government's present annual contribution of $60,000,000, but the proposal to repeal the provision of the present law which stipulates that a claimant to unemployment benefit must prove that he has made a genuine effort to obtain employment; the burden of proof was transferred from the claimant to the authorities. It is this repeal clause which was withdrawn from the new bill under Liberal pressure, and this retreat in turn brought about the revolt among Mr. MACDONALD'S followers and the possible abandonment of the bill in its present form.

The insurance schedules under the present law allow 18 shillings a week for men and 15 shillings a week for women. These basic rates remained in the new measure. The proposed changes provide for adult dependents of an unemployed worker an increase of 2 shillings over the present 7 shillings a week, increases for men and women workers under 20, and new allowances of 6 shillings a week for boys of 15 and 5 shillings for girls of 15. The last provision is to tie-in with the projected extension of the present school age by a year, a measure intended to produce a perceptible reduction in the number of unemployed. The Left Wing proposals for an increase to 20 shillings a week for the unemployed man, 10 shillings for his wife and 5 shillings for each dependent child would have meant a new expenditure twice that contemplated in the government bill. But there can be no question that the "genuinely seeking work" provision came closer home than benefit allowances.

From 1918 to the beginning of the present year the expenditure on unemployment insurance was recently estimated by J. H. THOMAS at £650,000,000, of which about one-fourth roughly would be the government's contribution and the rest made up of payments by workers and employers.

BYRD'S MAP-MAKING FLIGHTS.

Commander BYRD is not only discovering in Antarctica new land masses of great extent but is setting an example to geographers that will surely result in expeditions to map other parts of the continent or archipelago. The term archipelago is used advisedly, because it has been contended that Antarctica will be found to consist of formations similar to those in the Arctic north of the Dominion of Canada. During his flight of Dec. 4 and 5 Commander BYRD discovered a mountain range east of King Edward VII Land and running north and south for 150 miles. It extended far into Marie Byrd Land, which the Commander found and mapped in his first flying season. The new range was photographed by "the aerial surveyor of the expedition," Captain ASHLEY C. MCKINLEY. Pictures were also taken of a considerable coast line before the plane was turned inland, for the scientists must be able to study both coast and interior to determine where land meets ice shelf.

At the limit of outward flight, Commander BYRD was 350 miles northeast of Little America, and from the plane what looked like the open sea, running eastward and then south, was observed at a great distance. This suggests the opportunity he will have to survey the coast in the direction of Graham Land, where Sir HUBERT WILKINS has his base. What has been published about it is more speculation than proved fact, explorers having touched points on the coast at long intervals and reported it to be difficult and hazardous for surveys from shipboard. It is now indicated that a good deal of exploration by BYRD and his successors will have to be done to test the theory of an archipelago in the Antarctic. In a valley between the newly discovered mountain range and the eastern end of the Alexandra peaks, large pools of water were seen at a considerable distance from the sea. An inlet flowing in, and in places under the ice surface, seems to explain them.

Speculations of Sir DOUGLAS MAWSON in an article, "Unsolved Problems of Antarctic Exploration and Research," contributed to a special publication of the American Geographical Society, are of great interest in connection with Commander BYRD'S latest discoveries. "The unknown region lying north and northeast of King Edward VII Land," says Dr. MAWSON, "is likely to be an area either of land or of heavy pack or shelf ice held together by scattered islands or bergs aground in shoal water." He goes on to say that "the question has been long before us whether or not an arm of the sea separates East Antarctica from West Antarctica." He believes in the existence of a channel. The flight of Sir HUBERT WILKINS from Deception Island into Graham Land put on the map an arm of the sea which warranted the opinion that it consisted of two or more islands. Dr. MAWSON was in doubt concerning the great area extending from Graham Land to King Edward VII Land and south to the Queen Maud Mountains. He thought there might be "quite elevated ice-capped land" in that region. Commander BYRD'S survey proves that high land masses do exist.

Weeks must elapse before Professor GOULD'S geological expedition to the Queen Maud Mountains returns to Little America. What meteorological records we have indicate a fair amount of flying weather in December and January. Never did a polar explorer have such an opportunity as has come to Commander BYRD to make valuable geographical discoveries in Antarctica.

"ON ITS OWN AGAIN."

Yesterday THE TIMES printed the hundred tragic stories of the neediest cases in the city this holiday time. Many among them strike straight to the hearts of the compassionate. They cannot hear of a terrified, mistreated child without instinctively reaching in their pockets. They read of the helpless and ailing, and instantly open their purses. Misery and want among the very young and the very old is an intolerable thought, and our generous readers will undoubtedly spring to the aid of these needy ones as they have done before.

While such cases make a special appeal, it should not be forgotten that there is another kind of misfortune, making perhaps a less touching outcry, but none the less tragic, which brings to those who help it the most satisfying kind of reward. Last year there were several of these cases. One was recalled yesterday. Through illness, a family which had been getting along comfortably had been reduced to desperate circumstances. With the help of TIMES readers, health was restored, work was found, and a few weeks ago the father reported proudly that the family is "completely on its own again." The rehabilitation of this family is a triumph which contributors may happily share with the father and mother and two little girls.

This year we have the Van D.'s. They are fine people, with that strong family affection which every one likes to see. Four generations of them have lived in New York, handing the trade of cabinet-maker down from fathers to sons. They have had large families, and the men have cared for them well. The present family had been carrying on according to tradition when suddenly disaster overtook them. Illness stopped the father's work, and poverty drove them into cheap rooms, where the dampness has affected the health of all of them. The mother has gone to work, but she cannot make enough to feed six youngsters with hearty appetites. The eldest, age 14, can add very little to the family income, and the father needs medical attention for some months before he can go to work again. All the children have lost weight, and must take turns wearing each other's shoes in order to go to school. Despite their misfortunes, they have kept up their spirit, and the neighbors call them "a fine bunch of kids." Nine hundred dollars will put this family on its feet again. For more fortunate fathers and mothers it should be a pleasure to have a hand in restoring to these boys and girls the opportunities which their own parents will continue to give them as soon as they are on their own again.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Perjury Made Easy.

District Attorney BANTON, in explaining his bill to define "false swearing" and to make it a misdemeanor, did not refer to the evidence given in the Rothstein case. He might have done so, since in it false swearing was so obvious in the case of some witnesses that Judge NOTT, who presided at the trial, made direct and severe comments upon it. He stated from the bench that some of those who gave testimony in court were not in the least bound by the sanctity of their oath.

A conviction for perjury under the existing law is notoriously difficult. Being by definition an "infamous crime," any one charged with it is entitled to a trial by jury. And juries are reluctant to convict unless the evidence is overwhelming. Moreover, except when perjury is open and flagrant, it is hard to induce any one to prosecute the offender. Yet it is the belief of the District Attorney and of many judges that the crime of perjury is increasing in this State.

Mr. BANTON'S bill, which has the approval of the State Crime Commission and of many lawyers, would make the penalties for false swearing less drastic than they are for perjury, and so, it is believed, would result in more prosecutions and convictions. If not this measure, then some other more effective should be pressed upon the attention of the Legislature in order to reduce the number of perjurious witnesses in New York.

Much Worse Than Manchuria.

War as an instrument of policy seems to have firmly established itself in the cigarette trade. The second conflict within a year has been started in a supposed effort to bring about a condition where cigarettes may be sold at a fair price and with a fair margin of profit. Why the same object cannot be attained by getting together around a table and talking it over is not made clear. There are so many cigarettes on the market certified to soothe the nerves and clear the brain!

Who started the war and who is fighting whom are questions outside the competence of the plain citizen. He has been too busy earning the family's bread to follow the wondrous system of mergers, combinations, majority controls, buyings-in, manufacturers, jobbers, retailers, chains, and what not. He has only a vague impression that United Cigars, which is controlled by Schulte, Inc., is fighting Schulte, Inc., which is controlled partly by United Cigars and partly by Liggett's, of whom the latter is buying into the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, which is reputed to be buying into United Cigars—or is it into the Baltimore & Ohio?

The public, wisely refusing to bother about who now gives them their 15-cent cigarette for 12 cents, will rejoice in the fact. The only exception may be persons who, by power of will or force of circumstance, have given up cigarettes. They experience a pang at the thought of failing to save 3 cents every time they omit to buy a pack.

Tending Lights on Eiffel Tower.

Visitors to Paris sometimes decide, after one glance at the fragile structure of the Eiffel Tower, that they will dispense with the magnificent view to be had from its top and be content with the panorama of the city to be seen from the Sacré Coeur. Such timidity has no part in the make-up of the crew of electricians who tend the 70,000 lights in the huge electric sign on the tower which advertises a popular French automobile.

Three workmen are kept busy all day long, swinging, climbing and sliding about the great sign, removing burnt-out lamps and replacing them with good ones. The lights are varicolored.

Sight-seers watching the men at their work have remarked that they are as agile as monkeys. But M. DOUANEL and his two assistants resent the comparison. It does not do them justice. A monkey has four hands, while they have only two. Furthermore, the agile workmen not only clamber about in nimble monkey fashion but carry tools and baskets of bulbs, and work as they hang suspended in midair.

One of the hardest tasks they ever had was to repair the damage done by a violent hailstorm. It took several days and nights to replace the 5,000 lamps which were shattered. Crowds gathered to watch the unusual activity, and not one lamp fell on an eager spectator.

The Maker of a Famous School.

Almost overlooked during the spectacular events of the last few weeks was the news that Dr. WILLIAM G. THAYER is resigning as headmaster of St. Mark's School at Southboro, Mass. Although primarily of interest to the hundreds of its graduates and their families, the event is of significance in the educational world because of the extraordinary place which Dr. THAYER made for himself and his school.

Like Groton—at which Dr. THAYER was a master for eight years—St. Mark's has had the distinction of being at the same time one of the most "fashionable" private schools in New England and of maintaining a high standard of scholarship while turning out many athletes and leaders in college and after life. Its boys have come mostly from a small group of wealthy and socially prominent families in the East, but its influence on the educational system of New England has been marked.

As was the case with Dr. PEABODY, the famous "rector" of Groton, the headmaster of St. Mark's placed the stamp of his own high character on his school. Able to hold the loyal devotion of his assistants for years, he has also won the respect and affection of his "boys"—and even of their children and grandchildren. The high position of St. Mark's today is the best tribute to his life work.

Commander Byrd's Selflessness.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

One feels after reading Commander Byrd's story of his flight to the South Pole that there is at least one person who will not quibble over rights to the territory at the bottom of the world. Byrd is not only a great explorer; he is a selfless one. His work was not done for one country, but for the world. He dropped not one flag, or two, or three, on the frozen wastes, but a bouquet of them.

BRANCH BANKING.

Congress Should Act to Prevent Inroads on National Bank System.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is a source of much gratification that the President has seen fit to embody a word on branch banking in his annual message. Although the President avoids committing himself in favor of branch banking, and, in fact, almost leans over backward in his cautiousness, it will nevertheless lend impetus to the movement. The joint commission of investigation has been suggested before; it may be formed more quickly now, and the desired results obtained. Mr. Hoover has not antagonized the unit bankers, for he asks whether the development of "group" or "chain" banking would not "dangerously concentrate control of credit," and "whether they would not seriously threaten one of the fundamentals of the American credit system." Although the President has not come out flat-footed in favor of branch banking, he has still set his seal of cognizance upon the matter. The work should now go forward more expeditiously and with renewed vigor.

The suggestion of the President "to create a joint commission embracing members of the Congress and other appropriate Federal officials for subsequent report" is similar to Controller of the Currency Pole's suggestion made at the recent convention of the American Bankers' Association, and indicates that there may have been an understanding between them. Mr. Pole's idea was to have Congress instruct the Secretary of the Treasury, the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board and the Controller of the Currency to study and report on the situation to Congress.

Later on, Mr. McFadden, it will be remembered, wrote a letter to Mr. Pole in which he pointed out that his own committee had given years of study to the subject and suggested that instead of a commission being appointed a bill should be presented, which, coming to his House committee, would receive much quicker action through the regular legislative channels. Mr. McFadden is still opposed to the creation of a commission and intends after the first of the year to proceed with his plans, i. e., to have the members of the House Committee on Banking and Currency frame a revision bill. Senator Glass, who is also in favor of the movement, intends to do likewise in the Senate.

It is to be hoped that the Western insurgent Republican Senators will not force an investigation of the Federal Reserve Board, the Stock Exchange, &c., into the discussion of the revision of the national banking act. There exists some apprehension that this may arise and delay the more vital point of issue. As it is, a good length of time will no doubt elapse before the changes are sanctioned. It will be, of course, necessary to summon experts to testify before the various committees, and to hear different interests who may wish to register their objections to branch banking. The bill must be framed so as not to injure strongly entrenched unit banks, and so as not to give too much power to large groups that might abuse it. But at the same time certain branching privileges must be granted that will check the alarming withdrawals from the national banking system. Public opinion must be created, and all in all it is thought by those familiar with legislative procedure that several sessions will elapse before the required legislation will be passed, as was the experience with the McFadden act.

"Ninety Miles an Hour."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Anent your "Topics of the Times," you must have had access to the court records of the claims of the gentleman to whom you refer. There you will find that the defendant denies his alleged claims respecting the speed of the car for use on an open highway. Also, there you will find that the gentleman says that he drove another car at a speed of eighty-eight miles an hour, but not upon his "private track, or a beach of his own in Florida," suggested by you as places for such speeds.

Neither is he a "reformer in disguise" nor has he "chosen this means [his lawsuit] to stop the advertising of reckless speeds," as you suggest is possible.

His lawsuit follows an attempt to make him pay past due instalments on the purchase price of the car, which has been driven over 4,000 miles, and which he says he cannot drive on the "open highway" at the speed of from 95 to 100 miles an hour. And that is the only fault he finds with the car.

Amundsen's Ink Mountain.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I attended Roald Amundsen's lecture on the North Pole while he was here, and he also gave us incidents and experiences of his South Pole expedition. The mountain mentioned by Commander Byrd is the mountain which Roald Amundsen called Ink Mountain, as it reminded him of the black top of an ink bottle stopper set in a white surrounding, and I thing that, in memory of Amundsen, his name of the mountain should be allowed to stand.

Safety Zone Perils.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Eighteen passengers got off the street car at Eighty-eighth Street. The red lights had just changed and immediately they were hemmed in on both sides by rushing autos. There was no escape; a step in either direction would have put them under the cars. The street was slushy and the whirring wheels spelled lots of clothes. Comment on the inconsideration and injustice of the treatment of those who do not block the streets with autos is not necessary.

THE CONSUMER PAYS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The penal law of the State of New York prohibits the giving to an agent, employe or servant any gift or gratuity without the consent of his principal, with intent to influence his action in relation to the principal's, employer's or master's business.

In addition, it has been held that where an agreement is made between a seller and the purchaser's agent, by which the agent is to receive a gratuity, the seller will not be permitted to recover the purchase price of the goods, even though the purchaser has received the goods.

In spite of all this, it is known that buyers or purchasing agents of mercantile establishments are given gratuities to influence them in the purchase of goods. These gratuities do not always take the form of cash, but include gifts of merchandise and entertainment. Sometimes the gratuity is based upon the actual purchase price of goods.

There is no doubt that the merchant must take this into account in fixing the price of his goods. In the end it is passed on to the consumer.

How can employers of buyers be ignorant of what is going on? Yet practically nothing is done about it. There are few, if any, convictions under the penal law and there are few cases of merchants refusing to pay for goods purchased by buyers under such circumstances.

What can be done to end this abuse? Merchants and trade associations can help by taking a firm stand and refusing to pay this graft. Stores can demand that their buyers refuse to accept gratuities under penalty of being discharged. When this is done, the seller's overhead will be reduced and perhaps the savings will inure to the benefit of the public.

The American Rights League.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the appreciative article in THE TIMES of this morning in memory of my friend Lawrence Godkin, Godkin is referred to as the founder of the American Rights League. There is an error in this reference. Godkin was made a member of our executive committee, but he would have been the last man to be satisfied to have connected with his name any responsibility that did not belong to him.

The league was organized in my office by Professor Goddings, Professor Douglas W. Johnson, Everett V. Abbot, myself and one or two others immediately after the sinking of the Lusitania. I was made president and, after an interval of fourteen years, am still president.

The purpose of the league was to bring the United States into the World War at the earliest possible moment. We were all peace men, but we held that this was a war against war, and that unless the non-aggressive nations held together in the task of smashing the bullies, the bullies would come to control the nations of the earth.

After the armistice the American Rights League was reorganized into a league for bringing the United States at the earliest date possible into the League of Nations, and its speakers have during the years since 1918 done what they could to emphasize with the citizens throughout the country the importance of having the United States accept membership in the World Court and in the League of Nations, and in so doing take its part with the other English-speaking peoples in securing representative government and peace and justice throughout the world.

The Fieldston School.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A misleading impression has been given by a dispatch from Philadelphia, which appeared in THE TIMES of Nov. 30. By a confusion of two quite distinct matters the Fieldston School of the Society for Ethical Culture was represented as about to be transformed into a school for the training of leaders of the society. This is an error. The Fieldston School is absolutely non-sectarian. Clergymen of different denominations have entrusted their children to it, and there has never been any complaint of interference with the religious beliefs of the students. The scholarship plan is intended to emphasize the national character of the institution. The school desires to draw students from all parts of the country and therefore plans to build dormitories.

Outstanding college and university presidents have expressed recognition of the importance of the experiment which the Fieldston School is conducting—its endeavor to combine vocational and cultural training. This is an experiment, not merely for the benefit of New York but for the advancement of education everywhere.

ROYAL J. DAVIS,
Secretary of the Society for Ethical Culture.

IN REVERSE.

Returning to the mauve decade,
We will not stop, I am afraid,
At sweeping skirt, and pompadour,
And picture hat that mother wore.
But back still further we will fare
To periwigs, and powdered hair,
Then the Elizabethan ruff,
The farthingale, and box of snuff,
And while the years are in reverse,
Continuing from bad to worse,
Will reach the ancient Age of Stone
And gnaw an ichthyosaur bone,
A dinosaur the family pet,
And home a cave; descending yet,
We'll don the fig-leaf apron worn
By Mother Eve both night and morn,
And even that at last unpin
To leave us nothing but the skin,
Until in slimy ocean chasms
We end, alas! as protoplasms.

HONOR THE MEMORY OF MRS. PANKHURST

Woman's Party Holds Services in Capitol Crypt for Militant Suffrage Leader.

MISS CRISTABEL RESPONDS

Members of Congress and the Diplomatic Corps Among Those Attending Ceremony.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Members of Congress and the diplomatic corps joined with the delegates of forty organizations of women this afternoon in honoring the memory of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, founder and leader of the militant suffrage movement in Great Britain. The service was held in the crypt of the Capitol under the auspices of the National Woman's party, in convention here.

Mrs. Donald Hooker of Maryland, presented by Mrs. William Kent, widow of the California Representative, spoke in moving terms of the life and work of Mrs. Pankhurst and their meaning and inspiration to women throughout the world.

Miss Cristabel Pankhurst, who throughout the suffrage campaign in England had been her mother's constant companion, spoke of her constant and affectionate interest in the suffrage movement in this country, and of the "fine spirit of cooperation it had been their happiness to have from the women of America."

"It is one of the beautiful things we have in common to remember," said Miss Pankhurst, "how the suffragists of our two countries, with never a cloud between them, worked together for equal suffrage and equal rights for women."

The statues of the American pioneer suffragists, Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott, looked down upon the ceremony.

Great Britain was represented at the ceremony by T. A. Shone, First Secretary of the embassy, and Mrs. Shone. Herr O. C. Kelp, Counselor of the German Embassy, and Mrs. Kelp sat with Miss Adelaide Johnson, sculptor of the statue of the pioneers and of the bust of Susan B. Anthony, which is in the Metropolitan Museum in New York.

Others in the diplomatic contingent were the Venezuelan Minister and Mme. Grisante, Dr. Enrique Olaya, Minister of Colombia; Count Alberta Marchetti, counselor of the Italian Embassy; the naval attaché and Senora Iglesias of the Spanish Embassy, and Señor Don Juan B. Chevalier, secretary of the legation of Panama.

In the Congressional group were Senator and Mrs. Guy D. Goff of West Virginia, Representative and Mrs. Finis J. Garrett of Tennessee, Representative and Mrs. Clarence F. Lea of California, Representative and Mrs. John W. Palmer of Missouri, Representative and Mrs. Herbert J. Drane, Representative and Mrs. Thomas A. Yon of Florida, Representative Johnson of Indiana and others.

Near the statue of the Pioneers was a banner of the English suffragettes, which will be returned at once for use at the unveiling of a statue of Mrs. Pankhurst in London within the next few weeks. On it, against a delicate tracery of green leaves on a purple ground, was lettered in gold:

Behold, the Spring comes,
Though we must pass who made,
The promise of its birth.

As the ceremony opened to music from a section of the marine band, a procession entered, led by Mrs. Victor du Pont Jr. of Wilmington, Del., bearing the American flag, followed closely by Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles, daughter of America's first Ambassador at London, who carried one of the few remaining purple, white and green banners which figured in the suffrage demonstrations conducted in England by the Women's Social and Political Union, founded by Mrs. Pankhurst.

Behind them marched flower girls, and a guard of honor composed of fifty members of the Young Women's Council of the Woman's party, led by Miss Mabel Vandyke.

PUTS CHINESE TALES INTO CHILD'S BOOK

Columbia Student Translates Ancient Folklore to Correct False Impressions of Nation.

Disturbed by the comic strip and cinema versions of Chinese life on which American children build their impressions of his countrymen, Chung I Shang, Chinese research student at Teachers College, Columbia University, has translated fifty specimens of Chinese folklore into the bedtime-story language of Little Red Riding Hood and Three Bears.

With the assistance of several of his professors, Mr. Shang succeeded in bridging sixteen centuries and 12,000 miles in his effort to correct the "unfortunate representations" which he has found in the United States. His research has been credited toward his degree, and the collection is to be published shortly, it was learned yesterday.

The young Chinaman is particularly incensed at the lotus flower literature produced by authors who, he said, "have never been in China, and whose own views on Chinese life are distorted and exaggerated." The discovery in this country that Chinese mothers have as complete and charming a mythology to tell their children as American and English mothers will, he hopes, break down many barriers of ignorance and misunderstanding.

Among the typical stories prepared for American youngsters are "The Beautiful Monkey King," "The Honorable Horse-Man," "The Crippled God," "Little Poppy the Third: His Troubles With the Vegetable Man," "The Husky Bride," "The Trial of the Stone," "When the King Was a Cowboy" and "The Picnic of the Dwarfs."

Many of them are legends handed down from father to son from the Yuan Dynasty in the thirteenth century, and there are others from the year 1500. Twenty-six of the stories date from 90 B. C., and thirty-eight "biographies" of ancient Chinese deities, dating from 317 A. D., were scrutinized for the collection.

One group of the tales is representative of a favorite theme in Oriental mythology—that of the foolish bridegroom who is extricated from embarrassing and sometimes dangerous situations by his clever bride.

SMUTS TO SPEAK HERE ON LEAGUE OF NATIONS

General Who Helped to Frame Covenant to Take Part in Tenth Anniversary Celebration.

General Jan Christian Smuts, British soldier and statesman and an aide in framing the covenant of the League of Nations, will speak at two affairs here in January in connection with the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the League, it was announced yesterday.

The local arrangements, which coincide with observances said to be international in scope, were made public by the Committee for the Tenth Anniversary of the League of Nations, of which George W. Wickersham is chairman. The committee represents thirty participating national organizations.

Mass meetings to be held throughout the country and a pageant, "The March of the Nations," prepared by Esse V. Hathaway, for production in the larger cities, will culminate in a mass meeting at the Metropolitan Opera House on the evening of Sunday, Jan. 5, according to the announcement.

Mr. Wickersham will preside at the mass meeting, and speakers besides General Smuts will include Newton D. Baker and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler. The General also was announced as the principal speaker at the League of Nations anniversary dinner, at which John W. Davis will preside, in the Commodore Hotel on Jan. 10.

The participating organizations represented by the committee, with offices at 6 East Thirty-ninth Street, were announced as follows:

American Association of University Women.
American Federation of Labor.
American Friends Service Committee.
American School Citizenship League.
Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.
Central Conference of American Rabbis.
Church Peace Union.
Commission on International Justice and Good-Will.

GLIDER TOWED ALOFT SPILLS PILOT TO DEATH

Army Flier Hits Cross-Current Over San Francisco—His Wife in the Throng Below.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8 (AP).—Charles J. Ferguson, army warrant officer, whose ambition has been to span the Golden Gate in a motorless glider, was hurled to his death late today when the machine, towed by a private airplane from Crissy Field, nosed up into a cross-current. Ferguson's safety strap broke and he was hurled head first from his contrivance.

Thousands of persons watching the attempt gasped as his body shot downward. Ferguson twisted in the air and struck the ground feet first with terrific force.

An ambulance, ready in case of an accident, took Ferguson to a hospital, where he was pronounced dead. His wife was on the field. She collapsed and was taken to a hospital.

Every movement of the accident was recorded by newsreel photographers as well as sound pictures. The airplane towing the glider made a safe landing.

Ferguson was president of the California Glider Club, and the members of that organization on May 30, 1929, prevented him by court action from taking off a high hill in Marion County in an attempt to glide over the Golden Gate.

Graham Alumnae to Meet.

The first in a series of gatherings in the interest of the Graham School will be held in the ballroom of the Colony Club on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Hermann M. Biggs, representing the Graham Alumnae Association, is sending out the invitations. Dr. William Lyon Phelps of Yale will speak on "Whittier, the Soul of New England." Mrs. Rutherford Trowbridge will preside. Among the patronesses are Mrs. Frederick W. Whiting, Mrs. Charles Lane Poor, Mrs. Junius Spencer Morgan, Mrs. D. S. D. Jessup, Mrs. John Grier Hibben, Mrs. George W. Downs, Mrs. Lewis Mercer Borden, Mrs. Charles F. Darlington, Mrs. William Walter Brainard and Miss Harriet C. Abbe.

To Honor Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, wife of the late President, will be the guest of honor at the first in a series of three members' teas given by the president and board of directors of the Woman's Roosevelt Memorial Association at Roosevelt House, 28 East Twentieth Street, this afternoon. Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr. is arriving today from Porto Rico and is expected to receive. Others receiving with Mrs. Roosevelt will be Mrs. Richard Derby, Mrs. John Henry Hammond, Mrs. William Curtis Demorest and Mrs. Henry A. Alexander.

Subway Union Delays Strike Vote.

Because of sparse attendance, a meeting of the "left wing" group of subway construction workers, held last night in Stuyvesant Casino, 142 Second Avenue, adjourned without action on the proposed vote to call a general strike of all workers on the city's new subway system. Marcel Scherer, organizer, presided. The "left wing" group started its own organization a week ago after a mass meeting of the International Subway, Tunnel and Compressed Air Workers' Union broke up in a row.

Portuguese Ex-Premier Seriously Ill.

LISBON, Portugal, Dec. 8 (AP).—Field Marshal Gomes da Costa, former Premier, has developed pulmonary congestion. Small hope was held today for his recovery.

THOUSANDS MOURN AT BLOCH FUNERAL

Roosevelt and Walker Among Many Notables Paying Last Tribute to Assembly Leader.

SMITH AND WAGNER ATTEND

Free Synagogue Is Filled and Huge Throng Stands in Street During Services.

The funeral of Maurice Bloch, leader of the Democratic minority in the Assembly and prominent young lawyer of this city, who died in his sleep last Thursday morning after an operation for appendicitis at Roosevelt Hospital, was held yesterday afternoon at the Park Avenue Synagogue, 50 East Eighty-seventh Street.

While about 2,000 persons, including men and women prominent in public life, representatives of numerous religious and philanthropic organizations and a delegation of members of the State Senate and Assembly, filled the sanctuary of the Free Synagogue, Rabbi Stephen Wise delivered a eulogy over the rose-blanketed coffin of the young man who had been his close friend. Dr. Gabriel Schulman, rabbi of the Park Avenue Synagogue, officiated at the services and also delivered a short eulogy.

Thousands Stand in Street.

Before and during the services in the temple a crowd of several thousand persons stood in the street outside, completely filling Eighty-seventh Street from Madison to Park Avenue. A detail of 120 patrolmen, besides the regular motorcycle escort, was necessary to marshal the throng.

Led by the honorary pallbearers, among whom were Governor Roosevelt, former Governor Alfred E. Smith, Mayor Walker and Senator Robert F. Wagner, the funeral cortège proceeded to the temple from the Universal Funeral Chapel, 597 Lexington Avenue, where the body of Mr. Bloch had lain in state on Friday and Saturday.

"How feeble words seem and how vain," said Rabbi Wise. "Every one of us here could say things that are in the heart of this country. I like to think of my young friend as a public servant who had ability, earnestness, genius of industry, but something more precious than all of these—character."

Speaking of Mr. Bloch's public career, Rabbi Wise referred to him as a man of utmost promise and superlative integrity. He recalled that only six years ago he had performed the ceremony of marriage for the dead leader.

Rabbi Schulman spoke of the work Mr. Bloch had done as a trustee of the synagogue in obtaining the new home in Eighty-seventh Street three years ago. He then pronounced the farewell and benediction.

Governor Praises Leader.

Governor Roosevelt, who had come from Warm Springs, Ga., yesterday to attend the funeral, said in a brief statement upon his arrival:

"Maurice Bloch was a close friend of mine before I was elected Governor and since then he had been of the greatest assistance. The State has lost an able legislator in his passing."

Mayor Walker rose from a sickbed to attend the funeral.

Other honorary pallbearers were Acting Governor Herbert H. Lehman, John F. Curry, leader of Tammany Hall; Supreme Court Justice Victor Dowling, Speaker Joseph A. McGinnies, Surrogate James A. Foley, State Senator Bernard Downing, State Senator John Knight, Controller Morris S. Tremaine, Judge John J. Walsh, Assemblyman Russell G. Dunmore, John A. Bell, chief clerk of the New York County Sheriff's office; Dock Commissioner Michael Cosgrove and John A. Mullen, law partner of Mr. Bloch.

Others attending the funeral included Borough President Julius Miller, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Police Commissioner Whalen, Senator Philip Kleinfeld, Norman E. Mack, James J. Hoey, State Tax Commissioner Thomas Lynch, William Brady, Samuel Koenig, New York County Republican leader; Corporation Counsel Arthur J. Hilly, Judge John McAvoy, Assistant District Attorney William Maloney, former Mayor John F. Hylan, Commissioner George VanNamee, Justice James O'Malley of the Appellate Division, and Dr. William Schroeder Jr., head of the Sanitation Commission.

S. Leith Moffat.

Special to The New York Times.

MONROE, N. Y., Dec. 8.—Funeral services were held today at his home in Washingtonville for S. Leith Moffat, retired real estate man, who died on Friday in his eighty-ninth year. He was a cousin of the late David H. Moffat, who built the famous Moffat railroad tunnel in Colorado. When David endowed a library for his native town of Bloomingdale Grove at Washingtonville, Leith was made chairman of the board of trustees. Leith died in the home where he was born.

Tunnel Caves In as Rescuer Brings Out 3 Entombed Miners

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 8 (AP).—Three miners, entombed for thirty-four hours in a small space behind a huge fall of coal and slate in a Continental Coal Company mine at Cassville, were rescued early today by men who tunneled through 175 feet of coal. The miners were in a hospital tonight, but it was said they are little the worse for their experience.

The rescue was completed by Charles Davis, assistant superintendent, who penetrated the last few feet of the two and a half foot square tunnel by scraping earth and coal away with his hands. He then dragged the miners out feet first and passed them out to freedom.

The assistant superintendent had hardly pulled the last man out and crawled to safety himself when the part of the tunnel cleared by him and the point where the workers were trapped caved in.

BROOKHART DEMANDS REMOVAL OF MELLON

Iowa Senator Says the Secretary's Dry Law Record Should Be Investigated.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8 (AP).—Senator Brookhart of Iowa, charged today that the Federal courts are lax in enforcing the prohibition laws, an said that if no one else does so, he will call upon the Attorney General to make a survey of the way they handle liquor cases.

Speaking at the Georgetown Presbyterian Church, the Iowa Senator said that when a Federal court's docket is overloaded with liquor cases, it is evident the court is failing to do its duty.

"If a court will impose the proper penalties," he said, "its docket will soon be unburdened."

Mr. Brookhart also directed his criticism to Secretary Mellon, who, he said, should be removed from office. He advocated an investigation into the issuance of domestic liquor permits and border patrol work.

In regard to the latter, the Senator also said he had found the border patrolled largely by immigration and customs officials, and that the force is entirely inadequate.

"Yet," he declared, "when we gave Secretary Mellon $50,000,000 for patrol work on the borders, he said he didn't need it.

W. B. REYNOLDS DIES; STANDARD OIL OFFICIAL

General Manager of the Albany District—Began as Salesman.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 8.—Warren B. Reynolds, general manager of the Albany district for the Standard Oil Company of New York, died today at his home here. He had been in ill health since February. His age was 51.

Mr. Reynolds had been with the company for twenty-seven years. At his death his district comprised New York State east of Auburn and the State of Vermont.

He was born in Chicago. After attending schools in Poughkeepsie, he began work at Middletown in 1902. He was made division manager at Utica in 1910, transferred to Syracuse as division manager in 1914 and appointed manager of the Albany district last March.

Mr. Reynolds was a Mason. He is survived by a widow, the former Susan Mott, and a son, Robert, who is a junior at Colgate University.

Wanamaker Gifts from All Over the World

More than 90 per cent of the Wanamaker purchases of merchandise are made in the markets of the United States.

But here are some of the novelties and exclusivities from other lands.

FROM THE FOUNDER'S WRITINGS

As a General Thing It Is the Quiet People who do the best thinking and perform the most good work.

Idle people who have the least to do overtalk, while those who are constantly occupied have little time or opportunity to devise and exploit upsetting affairs.

Any gun that goes off half-cocked is dangerous.

Almost every day there is an account in the newspapers of careless things said and done without proper consideration.

GIFTS COME UNASKED FOR CITY'S NEEDIEST

Many Who Gave in Previous Years Among Those Who Send $4,389 Before Appeal Opens.

DONORS VOICE JOY IN GIVING

Letters With Contributions Tell of Eagerness to Insure Success of Fund.

2 DONATIONS FROM ABROAD

Three Come From Estates, Others From Groups — First Avenue Boys Contribute $250.

When New York's One Hundred Neediest Cases were published yesterday by THE NEW YORK TIMES in the eighteenth annual appeal since the Neediest Fund was instituted, 112 contributions were already in hand, totaling $4,389.06. This opening of the 1929 fund, compared with last year's advance total of $4,352 from eighty-four contributors, is an encouraging indication that the yearly increase may continue.

Last year 12,006 contributors gave $338,111.01 and provided for 460 cases, representing the greatest human need in the city. This year the need is as great. Nine charity organizations have submitted their cases to THE NEW YORK TIMES for selection after investigating the facts and budgeting the amount necessary to carry the neediest through their period of distress and restore their ability to help themselves. The one hundred cases published yesterday represent need which has come upon people, as it might come upon any one, through circumstances beyond their control. Part of this first group is reprinted in adjoining columns.

Old Friends Remember Needy.

The 112 contributors whose assistance is acknowledged today, however, did not wait to read the Neediest Cases of 1929, but mailed their contributions because of their recollection of need reported and relieved in the past. Some explained that they were going away and wished to leave their contributions behind. Others whose names are found in the advance roll of contributors each year took express satisfaction in anticipating yesterday's opening appeal and in saying: "This is my annual contribution." Three contributions were received from the estates of persons who thought so highly of the fund that they provided for a continuation of their contributions after their death. Two contributions came from abroad. Some of the typical letters follow:

Vienna, Nov. 21, 1929.

NEW YORK TIMES — Enclosed please find my annual contribution ($100) to the fund for the One Hundred Neediest Cases, which I send you again. One of your oldest, in every sense, contributors.

ANNA WOERISHOFFER.

Mrs. Woerishoffer is the widow of Charles Woerishoffer, a banker and broker who was an important influence in Wall Street operations thirty-five years ago.

An advance contribution of $250 was received from the First Avenue Boys, an association existing for the purpose, expressed in its articles of incorporation and quoted in its letterhead, "of perpetuating the name, traditions and ideals of First Avenue and promoting the social, moral and civic welfare of its members." The letter read:

It is with pleasure that we forward the enclosed check for $250 as a donation to your wonderful charity, and trust it will aid a little to alleviate the suffering of those whom your fund cares for annually. Trusting your efforts this year will far exceed those of the past, I am,

Yours very truly,
MICHAEL J. DELEHANTY, President, First Avenue Boys, Inc.

Three Gifts From Estates.

The three contributions bequeathed to the Neediest Fund and already transmitted by the trustees responsible for the annual payment are the following:

"In memory of Mrs. Emily Atkinson, the dearly beloved wife of W. H. Atkinson," $271.50. Mr. Atkinson was a dry goods merchant in Toronto, Canada, who once lived in New York. He died in 1926.

"Estate of Edward A. Bradford of the editorial staff of THE NEW YORK TIMES, died, May 4, 1926." $108. Mr. Bradford, who was for fifty-five years a member of the staff of THE NEW YORK TIMES and author of a notable series of articles and editorials on economics and finance, left several shares of stock which he owned in this newspaper to provide an annual contribution to the Neediest Fund.

"Estate of Mrs. B. F. Isaacs, in memory of her husband, Benjamin F. Isaacs," $50. This contribution is one of ten annual contributions for which Mrs. Isaacs provided by bequeathing a lump sum of $500 with instructions that $50 be applied each year.

Among the 112 advance contributions in hand yesterday, the following letters illustrate the manner of giving:

Elizabeth Glover—I am glad to enclose this $5 because I am now so happy in memory of a time when I was friendless and poor.

Edele Liberman, secretary of the Seventh Group of the Jewish Community Centre, White Plains—I am sending this check of $6 from the Seventh Group. At our last meeting in Sunday school we decided to send the above amount to the One Hundred Neediest Cases. We hope this amount will benefit some unfortunate person.

Anonymous—Merry Christmas. No receipt necessary.

Mrs. George Thacher—Enclosing annual Christmas donation to you for the Hundred Neediest Cases Fund, $25, which you are kind enough to distribute. Please place it as you see best, and accept my thanks for doing so.

Miss Lambert—Again sending to THE TIMES Hundred Neediest Cases the enclosed check for $10 from Barbara, Eleanor and Louise Lambert.

Mrs. William H. Rosenstein—In advance of the public appeal which you are going to make, I want to send you my small contribution to assist one of the Hundred Neediest Cases. I trust that this will help to bring a small measure of comfort to some needy family. I greatly appreciate the wonderful work you have done in the past, and know that the fund this year will be greater than ever.

Madeline P. Stone—My donation for the next Christmas Fund, as I am going away. Hope it will be even a greater success than ever before.

Gift Sent From West Indies.

One contribution came from Aruba in the Dutch West Indies off the coast of Venezuela, from Giles Heilprin, who wrote that "dates here make little difference and there are no neediest cases because life, at least for the natives, is so simple." He enclosed $5, "In memory of my wife, Irma Heilprin."

Twenty-two of the advance contributions were for $100 each. Mrs. Ellen Shaw Barlow asked that her $100 contribution be used for the neediest cases provided by the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor. An anonymous contribution of $100 was designated similarly for the cases of the New York Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies.

Seven of the $100 contributions were in memory, respectively, of Bertha Ochs, Burns Durbin Caldwell, Dr. Isaac M. Wise, Julius Ochs, Leopold Wallach, Nanette Myers and Therese Bloch Wise.

With a check for $100, Mrs. Max Dansinger sent "wishes for the largest contributions since your first appeal." Another letter received was as follows:

Anthony F. Adelman—The season of the year approaches when the minds of thousands will, once again, turn to the Hundred Neediest Cases. The ever-growing number of contributors has, through the years, come to regard THE TIMES Neediest Fund as a noble institution with the motivating tenet of unselfish service. Behind this vanguard of social service we visualize the charitable organizations which function with amazing efficiency and results. May I have the privilege of starting the 1929 fund with the attached check for $100?"

When Mr. Adelman's letter was received on Nov. 20, however contributions dating back to June were already on file.

Other friends of the Neediest Fund who made advance contributions of $100 each were Albert N. Halligarten, Jacob & Schey, Edward J. Kilburtis, David B. Mills, William T. Morris, Olivia J. Norris, Salomon Brothers & Hutzler, Sloan, Benson & Bennett, Leonel Weil and Louis Wiley.

The Needy Receive All Gifts.

Every cent contributed to the Neediest Fund goes to the cases published. THE NEW YORK TIMES conducts this annual appeal without cost. The nine charity organizations that certify to the need and prepare the budget of relief also administer the funds resulting from the appeal without any "overhead charge" whatsoever. Contributions received each day are transmitted daily to the charity organizations and relief begins immediately. The advance contributions acknowledged today are already being applied.

Further contributions received will be acknowledged daily in THE NEW YORK TIMES. During the past seventeen years of the fund's existence almost 100,000 contributions have been received in amounts ranging from less than a dollar to checks for $5,000. Prominent and obscure share their interest in charity and take a position in the daily list of contributions determined only by the alphabet.

No solicitation for the Neediest Cases Fund is authorized. The only appeal is the publication of the cases. Since 1912, when it was instituted, the annual appeal has never departed from the principle that contributions should be voluntary, resulting simply from the encounter of the greatest need with the charitable spirit of a great city. The cases, first published yesterday and reprinted today in part are presented so that readers may learn from them, at least, about distress in New York, and may, if they choose, relieve some of it.

CASE 19.

Her Brother Died in Her Arms.

Mary is 5, a pretty girl with blue eyes that look bewildered when she talks of her "baby brother," who was the only person who ever loved her. One day when her mother was out with the two men roomers (the neighbors explain that the roomers and the mother went on bootlegging expeditions together), the baby, who was hungry, found a bottle the mother had left on the floor. He drank what was in it. In a moment he toppled over. Mary remembers it all vividly. She held him in her arms. She did not know what else to do for him. First he moaned a little, and then he was quiet. She thought he was asleep. After a while she noticed he was growing cold, and she held him closer. Then she cried, because she could not get him warm. A neighbor heard her and came in at last. She was still clinging to her baby brother, who had been dead for more than two hours. Her mother has since abandoned her, but Mary never mentions them. She talks of her baby brother often, and hopes there will be enough for him to eat when he comes back. There seldom was before. Mary needs nourishing food, shelter and warm clothing until a home can be found for her where she may, in time, forget. She is a responsive, affectionate little girl.

Amount needed, $200.

Case attested and administered free of cost by the State Charities Aid Association, 105 East Twenty-second Street. (Telephone, Gramercy 1454).

CASE 4.

They Were Living on Tea and Bread.

Once Mr. B. was a baker, and his wife and children all had plenty of good food. Then three years of an illness known as "Bright's disease" used up his savings, and finally cost him his last. While he was in the hospital his furniture was sold, piece by piece. His children—there are four, including a baby—were wearing rags. Their shoes could no longer be patched. In the house, the three who could walk found it more comfortable to go barefoot. When Mr. B. came home on crutches, he hobbled right out again and found work at 45 a week, so that he could help his wife, who had done the best she could. The baby alone was content. No matter what hardships the rest of the family endured, they always provided milk for him, so that he would be well nourished, as they had been when they were babies. His robust body and plump cheeks were in contrast to the appearance of the half-starved family about him. The rent ran overdue. At last all except the baby were living on tea and bread. They knew they were at the end when the oldest child, Shirley, who is 12, returned from the grocery store weeping. She said the man behind the counter had shouted in front of other people that she was asking for food without money. They must have help to tide them over.

Her Age Works Against Her.

Minnie L. is not much more than 50. For ten years the $15 a week that she earned in good weeks behind a department store counter supported her and her 82-year-old mother. Because she was so often hungry that it made her feel sick, she could not move around and wait on people fast and she looked older than her age. So, when business gets slack, she is the first to be laid off. When she walks into a new store she is clean and neat, but not smart, because she has not had a new black dress in five years. The employment manager shakes his head. "Your age is against you, lady." She has grown so frightened of that, as she waits for it, that she cannot answer quickly when the employment manager asks questions. So he sends her away for being stupid. Mothers who let her care for their children do not ask her to come again, because she always looks worried and that is bad for the children. A little assistance will help her to regain her belief in herself and to provide again for her mother.

CASE 1.

Another Child Is Always Chosen.

Persons looking for a little girl to adopt want Carol at once when they see her. Then they must be told about her heart, which may stop abruptly, some day. They hesitate. Just seeing Carol and hearing her talk, they know she is the sort of child who would get a hold on their affections. Her death would be dreadful. Invariably they decide they could not bear to live in constant fear of it. They want a child to make them happy, not miserable. They turn away from her and take some other little girl instead. It seems unlikely that Carol can ever in this world find a home and some one whom she can call father or mother. As her tenth Christmas approaches, she is beginning to lose hope. There is still one chance: Special medical care may make things right.

Only the Helpless Remain.

All of Mrs. S.'s children have married and left her except Alex, 19, who is childish and requires her constant care. Her husband struggled to the age of 66 with a bad heart; and now a cancer, which keeps him in constant pain, has made him helpless in her care. Mrs. S. is as old as her husband and looks as tired, but she refuses to part with him or with her son. To provide for them she denies herself rest and care. Her married children are struggling for themselves and unable to help her. Funds are asked in order that her burden may be lighter.

CASE 6.

An Old Music Teacher.

Miss Hilda K. was educated in a music school that is internationally famous; but now that she is 69 music students find her methods old-fashioned. She has offered her services to "problem" schools if they would only give her board and a room in exchange for teaching. She has no relatives living. Even the opportunity to play occasionally for hire at parties has been diminished by the radio. The only place where her services are now accepted is in her local church, where, as she has done all her life, she offers them as her contribution to charity. The few pupils she now finds no longer pay enough to meet even her meager needs. She can no longer read the music she sets before them, but she has memorized it. She hopes only that they will not notice how stiff her fingers have grown, for she is too old to undertake other work now. She is not only left behind by the present but also cut off from the past; she has sold the old family possessions and bits of jewelry that kept alive memories of her mother and sister. Help is needed to tide her over the Winter.

CASE 12.

A Girl, 15, Is the Support of Eight.

When the doctors sent Mr. F. home from the hospital, they said he would never be able to work again. His employer, who had held his job open because F. had a wife and six children, filled it. The family crowded into a sunless flat in a dilapidated tenement. White paint there was gray and peeling. Most of the wall paper was hanging in soiled tatters from the walls. When they first moved into the place, the children whispered instead of talking. Mr. F., tall, gaunt, with deep hollows under his eyes and hair prematurely white—he was only 45—had nothing further to say. Mrs. F., his wife, a slim woman of 37, took command of their family. Judith, the oldest child, who is like her mother, left school to work as a clerk at $12 a week, although she was barely 15. Esther, who was 12, helped with the housework after school and was able to mother the rest of the children. Herbert was 10, John 7, Edward 3, and Sara 2. Mrs. F. attempted so much immediately that her health was impaired. The support of a sick mother, a dying father and their six children now depends entirely on a 15-year-old girl. She needs help in keeping the family together.

"Help Wanted."

If Mrs. F. had not injured her hand, no one would have known how badly she needed help. She refused to enter an institution fifteen years ago when her husband deserted her at the age of 50. Until then she had never had to earn her living, but she said she "knew how to keep a nice home." Since then she has helped to keep many nice homes—working as a mother's helper, housekeeper and family seamstress. Sometimes, when her strength gave out, she had to take a little rest. As soon as she could, she pored again through the "Help Wanted" advertisements. She walked miles to answer them sometimes. Often she was told, "Oh, no, you're too old"; but she walked on until she found another job. She plans to find another "right away, as soon as I can move my hand just a bit"; but the doctor knows it will be months before her hand will be well enough. She is 65 now, and undernourished. To help her to the next job, funds are required.

"A Boy of 15 Might Mind Dying."

Thomas, 15, watches his mother anxiously from the bed where the doctor told him he must lie quiet if he wants to get well. He knows his mother is struggling alone to provide food for him; and he knows that her smiles have become rarer. He does not know that she cannot get the special food that she needs for herself because she has diabetes. And he does not know the doctor told her his heart has not long to go. As he lies in bed and talks of the future in which he will, he thinks, run again in the streets and grow up to earn plenty of food for both—his mother tries to smile at him. "I wouldn't want him to suspect," she explained. "For me to die doesn't mean much, but a boy of 15 might mind dying."

He Failed When He Was 70.

Mr. D. was a man of means until he was 70. Then his business failed. He walked the streets willing to take any kind of work, as he did when he started out in life. Day after day, as he walked, he ate less; his hands trembled more, and prospective employers more promptly decided he was too old. At last he came to talk it over with the charity organization. Its investigators say he is the kind of man who would die swiftly and unhappily in an institution. He has maintained his independence for more than half a century. Prompt aid will provide a room and food for him.

A Mother Making a Last Stand.

G. was a skilled mechanic, but he preferred a white-collar job. He failed to get and keep one and finally left his family. For five years Mrs. G. has been cleaning offices from 3:30 A. M. until 8 and then rushing home to give her six children breakfast and send them to school. She has had another cleaning job in the afternoon, from which she returned at night to prepare supper and put the children to bed. The oldest, Dorothy, 15, is suffering from heart trouble and she also has to wear a brace, but says she will soon be able to help her mother. The rent is overdue again, but the furniture, which was moved into a poorer home at each successive crisis in her father's jobs, is too old and broken to be moved further. It is the last stand, Mrs. G. says. Poor as their home is, they could still be happy in it, and she asks for help in keeping it.

Their Father Is Dying.

Stanley W. was determined to give his three bright little girls an American education because neither he nor Mrs. W. had learned to read or write in the old country. He was one of the best workers in the factory, but he was impatient, after an attack of influenza, to get back to work. He thought he might lose his job. He said a man who has family responsibilities cannot take time to nurse a cold. While he was at work his strength began to fail. There was a second attack of influenza. Then came the doctor's verdict of tuberculosis. He was sent to a hospital, where he should have gone earlier. Mrs. W. found a janitor's position; and, with a few extra days' work and a little help from Mr. W.'s employer and from friends and neighbors, the family kept going. In the hospital Mr. W. did not improve. Now he can scarcely speak. Before he dies there is one thing he wants to know: How are his three little girls to be kept with their mother? Mrs. W., afraid to contract bills, has, when her own work has fallen off, fed the children bread and milk for days at a time. Margaret, who is 10, sees that her little sisters, Casimira, 9, and Irene, 7, attend the clinic regularly, and that they follow the doctor's orders about sleeping with the windows open and going to bed early. But she cannot follow his orders that they eat plenty of nourishing food. She must have help to do that.

CASE 22.

Father and Son Both Invalids.

Mr. B. was an expert cutter of ladies' dresses. At 35, for no reason that he knew, his hand began to lose its steadiness. For four years he worried lest he lose his job. The scissors would slip and ruin garments; but the kindness of his employer spared him. An attack of paralysis finally laid him off. Now he sits at home staring into space. He rouses himself occasionally, as though from sleep, to complain of pain in his legs. The doctor says his spine and brain have been affected. His life is over at 39. Mrs. B., his wife, who is 35, now lives for their only son, Harry, who is 8. In a short time, Harry has had influenza and chicken-pox. He is underweight and pale and requires extra nourishment and convalescent care. Until Harry is improved in health, his mother cannot go out to find work to do at home, where father and son now sit bundled up in chairs opposite each other. "Pa is awful sick," Harry says. "He's sicker than me."

Beatrice—An Unwanted Baby.

Beatrice's father was a high school student when he married, and her mother was as young. Their marriage lasted only seven months after Beatrice was born. When it broke up, they brought Beatrice to the charity association. Neither had wanted a baby and neither would assume any further responsibility for it. Beatrice has shiny down on her head, and bright eyes. Unwanted, she wants little; but even an unwanted baby must eat.

The Task Was Too Great for Her.

Angelina B. found herself penniless with four small children and a sick husband, Tony, 39, who was suffering from chronic rheumatism and a heart condition. She compressed expenses and moved the family into two small rooms; then she considered ways in which she might make money and at the same time care for her family. She found work embroidering and doing fine bead designs on bags at home. She had to do a great number of bags in order to provide shelter and food for four children and a husband; but she was determined not to be separated from them. It was late at night before her package of home work was tied up, to be delivered at the factory next day. She had little time to sleep. Weariness accumulated and she worked more slowly, but she knew how much she must earn to meet expenses. It was later and later each night before her beadwork was finished. Then she had still to do her housework and her sewing and making over of clothes for the children before she slept. Her health finally gave way. Despite her economy and her hard work, the separation which she tried to avert by her own efforts can now be prevented only by help from others.

Lucille and Donald Have Nothing.

Lucille, 6, and Donald, 4, waited alone at night. Their mother had gone away again, but she did that so often that they regarded it as a matter of course. They were waiting for their father, who, when he was sober, cared for them more than their mother did. But the father did not come. He had been taken to the hospital with delirium tremens. When the charity worker came for them, Lucille was comforting her little brother with a motherliness she had never herself experienced. Their mother has not returned. Without even the father, who, in his irresponsible fashion, provided something for them in the past, they now face Christmas in need of everything.

"Crippled Harry," the Newsboy.

Harry F. was a skilled shirt operator, well able to provide for his family. Then he fell on his hip and was crippled for life. His wife, who had just borne the twelfth child, could not recover her strength. His oldest son, Joe, 15, worked almost a year to support the family. He ran away. Morris, 17, who thus became the main support, had a sudden attack of appendicitis and died on the operating table. Annie, 14, now earns $12.a week as a stenographer and contributes all of it to the family. Sam, 13, undernourished, is finishing a commercial course and is about to start work. The six younger children, Jeanette and Ethel (twins, 10; Jack, 8; Mary, 6; David, 4, and the baby, Tessie, stayed on the top floor of a tenement. They were ragged and so starved that they no longer had energy to play among themselves. On the street corner, when it did not rain, "Crippled Harry the Newsboy," at the age of 47, attempted to sell papers. At best he could not compete effectively with the youngsters who darted through the crowd. His fortunes steadily sank. He went without food until he could no longer call out his papers vigorously enough to be noticed. When he was so weak that he could not climb back up the stairs to his top-floor flat, he went to the philanthropic association for help.

Work Strained This Father's Heart.

Peter was proud of his strength. Construction foremen used to take one look at his mighty shoulders and hire him. At 34, his heart is ruined by muscular overstrain and he cannot attempt the slightest task. His wife, looking worn and ill, sews and patches and scrubs all day. Alone at 61, She Makes Flowers.

For twenty years her husband was part owner of a small business. Two years ago it failed. He and his wife, Serena, were destitute in their old age, after a lifetime of self-support in comfort. Within a year he died. Serena, who had no children, had centred her life about her husband and the home, where she is now alone. Her only desire at 61 is to remain in the rooms where they had known so many happy years together. She has never worked outside; and there is very little she can do now, because an accident many years ago left her right arm and hand hanging helpless by her side. She makes artificial flowers, slowly, with her good left hand, and asks, gently, for the first time in her life, for help.

URGES GIFTS THAT KEEP THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

Welfare Council Also Stresses Importance of Preserving Recipient's Pride.

Charity that protects the giver from being duped through ignorance and that preserves the recipient's self-respect is essential for preservation of the true Christmas spirit, says a statement on Christmas giving issued yesterday by the Welfare Council of New York City with the approval of 200 local social agencies.

"We need to remember that Christmas is essentially a family festival," the statement read. "Parents and children look to each other for gifts and the family dinner should be purchased and prepared by the mother as she would do it under normal circumstances. When a family, through poverty or misfortune, is unable to provide its own Christmas, let the generous friend quietly see that money or credit is supplied directly to the family or through relatives or friends.

"The entrance of a stranger into the family circle, particularly when misfortune has overtaken it, may result in hurt pride and loss of self-respect. The giver who remains as far as possible in the background has the satisfaction of knowing that in respecting the privacy of the family his gift is thrice blessed.

"Gifts should neither be confined to necessities or luxuries, the statement continued, but an effort should be made both to supply the essentials of comfort and the toys and delicacies that are associated with the holidays.

"It is unfortunately true," the statement added, "that there are both individuals and organizations that are ready to exploit the city's generosity at Christmas time. Beggars and fakers increase in number and profiteering organizations often spring into existence for the holiday season. It is of the utmost importance to know to whom and through whom you are giving. Indiscriminate generosity tends to pauperize and to encourage habitual begging."

Will Rogers Discusses Three National Problems.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Dec. 8.

With Mr. Hoover pleading with everybody to spend all this money, I wonder what a little gentleman in a rented frame house in Northampton is thinking. The idea of such spending will make him turn over in his bed of magazine manuscripts.

This Ramsay MacDonald on his peace mission visited the wrong country. It was Haiti where he belonged.

There is a tremendous movement on to get lower taxes on earned incomes. Then will come the real problem. "Who among us on salary are earning our income?"

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

TWO PILOTS KILLED IN REFUELING PLANE

Trapped in Burning Cabin at Tampa as Endurance Plane Is Forced Down, Two Injured.

PAIR MEET DEATH IN TEXAS

Aviator and Woman Are Burned at Stamford, the Machine Bursting Into Flames on Crash.

TAMPA, Fla., Dec. 8 (AP).—Two pilots of the refueling ship for the endurance plane Sealdsweet of Florida were killed here this morning when their plane crashed in a take-off with 20 gallons of fuel. The endurance plane was forced down about fifteen minutes later, both occupants receiving minor injuries.

E. A. Dempsey and Stanley Smith of St. Louis were burned to death in the refueling plane, which caught fire as it crashed. E. W. Schrock of St. Louis and Leonard Carrothers of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, pilots of the endurance plane, attempted a forced landing near Kissimmee, Fla., in a fog. Their craft crashed in a wood and took fire, but they were able to crawl to safety. Carrothers sustained a crushed hand and Schrock received slight cuts and bruises. They walked into Kissimmee, and were treated there in a physician's office.

The endurance plane took off yesterday at 10:53:15 A. M. for the tenth time to seek a new refueling endurance mark. After more than twenty-three hours in the air the ship seemed to be flying perfectly.

Took Off in Dense Fog.

Dempsey and Smith took off at 9:30 A. M. in a dense fog. Their heavily loaded plane turned over on its left wing just as it skirted the edge of the field to gain altitude. It burst into flames immediately, and its two pilots were trapped in the cabin.

Dempsey was a former mail and stunt pilot and Smith was a licenced mechanic.

J. R. Puckett, inspector of the Aeronautical Division of the Department of Commerce, started an investigation of both accidents. He blamed the crash here on overloading, dense fog and weather conditions. He said overloading was allowed by the Commerce Department in endurance flights and the crash was "just one of those unfortunate things that can happen."

Dempsey a Friend of Lindbergh.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 8 (AP).—Elmer A. (Boots) Dempsey was a veteran flier and friend of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh. He learned to fly in 1922 and was one of the aviators associated with Lindbergh at Lambert-St. Louis Field here. Recently he was test pilot for the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Company.

Stanley Smith was known here chiefly as an airplane mechanic. He formerly was in the army air service at Scott Field, Ill. He was associated with Dempsey here and at Champaign and about two months ago they made an unsuccessful attempt to set a new endurance record at Granite City, Ill.

R. W. Schrock and Leonard Carrothers were associated with Dempsey and Smith in the Granite City venture. Schrock lived at Taylorville, Ill., where he managed an airport. Neither Smith nor Dempsey was married.

Pilot and Woman Are Killed.

STAMFORD, Texas, Dec. 8 (AP).—Cotton Hansen, pilot, and Miss Winnie Williams, a passenger, were killed in an airplane crash here tonight. The plane burst into flames as it struck the earth and burned the bodies.

The woman was an orphan who lived here.

THREE ARE CONVICTED OF LIQUOR CONSPIRACY

Jury Disagrees on Eight, Acquits Six, in Federal Government Case in Indiana.

HAMMOND, Ind., Dec. 8 (AP).—The first of the Federal Government's liquor conspiracy cases in Northern Indiana resulted today in the conviction of Charles Wampler, a motorcycle policeman, and two bootleggers, Sandro Nocco and Alex Santi. The jury, reporting at 5:30 A. M., after deliberating more than twelve hours, disagreed on eight defendants, seven of them members of the Gary (Ind.) police force. The eight were Thomas Calsalai of Gary, an attorney; Police Lieutenant Frank Galloway and Patrolmen Robert Bock, John Papp, Roy Keele, Henry Prohl, Bud Ingersoll and Oscar Salsas.

Six other defendants, classed by the prosecution as "minor bootleggers," were acquitted. They were John Romano, Frank Klein, Frank White, Frank Marshall, Joe Sannicola and Albert Sandko.

The trial was one of three growing out of a Federal grand jury investigation of law enforcement conditions in Northern Indiana. The three men found guilty were named by the prosecution as the "key men" in the conspiracy.

Judge Slack did not set a date for sentence, but indicated it would probably be next week.

ELECTRON 'PICTURES' RECORDED ON METAL

Dr. H. P. Carr in Cornell Experiments Stumbles on a Photographic Discovery.

ABLE TO DEVELOP "FILMS"

Impressions Can Be Brought Into Visibility From Cold, Untreated Surface.

VERTICAL LINES REVEALED

Some Metals Found as Sensitive to Electron Streams as Photographer's Plates.

ITHACA, N. Y., Dec. 8 (AP).—A fundamental discovery in photography that allows taking "pictures" directly on cold, hard, untreated metal without the usual medium of a sensitized plate, was made public today at Cornell University.

It reveals that seemingly impervious metal records, on its surface, unseen impressions from streams of electrons and that these marks can be brought into visibility by the right kind of a "developer," exactly as photographic images are brought out on sensitized paper.

The discovery opens a new field of scientific experiment, and even commercial film makers have exhibited an interest in it. Although at present there is no reason to suspect that electrons, which the public knows as the invisible streams of power that flow from heated filaments in radio tubes, may displace light for photography, the fact that this hitherto unknown sensitivity of metal was stumbled upon in a Cornell laboratory has aroused much speculation.

Stumbles on Discovery.

While studying the sensitivity of photographic plates to electron rays, it was suddenly realized that polished metal surfaces might be able to pick up impressions of these beams, and when tests were made they showed that not only could such records be made on metals but the amazing fact appeared that some metals were almost as sensitive as photographic film, and for very low velocity electrons much more sensitive.

Dr. P. H. Carr, a graduate student from Gaffney, S. C., made the discovery, working under the direction of Dr. F. K. Richtmyer, professor of physics. Dr. Richtmyer says all the credit belongs to Dr. Carr.

The young physicist was looking one day at the rough spots produced on the metal target of an X-ray tube by electron bombardment. Such spots are commonplace sights to laboratory workers.

It occurred to Dr. Carr that perhaps long before the electrons produced the burned places they made an invisible impression, which might be "developed" in the same manner that the still invisible image on a photograph is brought out by putting it into a developing bath. From then on the story is short, but the work took several years. Dr. Carr shot the electron rays at gold plates and developed them with mercury vapor; at silver, and developed with iodine; used hydrochloric acid to develop zinc plates, and iodine to develop copper.

Develops Marks of Electrons.

In each case he brought out on the metal surfaces the previously invisible mark made by the electron "shot." These marks were vertical lines, the places where the electron streams struck, very thin lines for high-powered beams and broader lines for low voltages. Investigations are in progress to study the peculiarities of this phenomenon and to develop a theory of its action.

Dr. Richtmyer says he is confident the metal plates or films may in the future be used to record the electron beams as do photographic films, and in some cases with greater advantage to scientific work, because the metal plates record in broad daylight as readily as in darkness. Thus danger of spoiling by light is averted.

Cornell has been a pioneer in physical research, and its many notable contributions in this field, Professor Richtmyer being one of the outstanding authorities.

TO PRESS CANCER WAR AS NEW YEAR OPENS

American College of Surgeons Will Open Clinics in Six Cities.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—War on cancer on a scale never before attempted will be opened with the beginning of the new year by the American College of Surgeons, with its approximately 9,000 members, Dr. Bowman C. Crowell, chairman of the organization's committee on the archives of malignant diseases, announced tonight.

Clinics in which standardized methods will be used are to be organized in cities in every section of the country. The members of the college will be asked to send their cases to these clinics, and perfect records of all cases will be made and sent into the department of clinical research of the organization in the Chicago headquarters.

Dr. Crowell, who also heads the clinical research department, has just returned from a three weeks' tour of the cities in which the clinics are to be organized. Early in January with several heads of cancer committees he will go to these cities for the actual work of starting the clinics. In each city sectional meetings of members of the American College of Surgeons will be held.

Clinics are to be opened as follows: Worcester, Mass., for the New England States, Jan. 6 and 7; Richmond, Va., for Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia, Jan. 9 and 10; Atlanta for Georgia, and the Gulf States, Jan. 13 and 14, and San Antonio, Texas, for Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma on Jan. 20 and 21.

A clinic in Denver will be for Colorado and the Mountain States and in Des Moines for Iowa and North Dakota.

RESCUE IN ARCTIC EPIC OF AVIATION

Pilot Who Sought MacAlpine Party Tells of 10,000 Miles of Flying in North.

PLANE WENT THROUGH ICE

Airman and Mechanic Took Pontoon-Equipped Craft Over Frozen Lakes of Barren Lands.

Special to The New York Times.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 8.—Andy Cruikshank, who flew out of the north country from the search for and rescue of the MacAlpine party, leaned against the wing of his plane and laughed off nearly 10,000 miles of Arctic flying.

Day after day and night after night this wiry, keen-eyed pilot of the Western Canada Airways and his comrades fought with death as they guided their Fokkers over the trackless wastes of the Arctic, peering through glaring sun and blinding snow for a sign of the lost explorers.

Mile after mile of country known only to the Eskimo, and some of it not even to them, reeled off beneath him as his machine crisscrossed the barren lands in its search. It is a story of tragedy and humor, of an everlasting battle with the elements.

Cruikshank is not much of a talker, but as his story was pieced together there was unfolded a tale of devotion to duty and heroism that takes its place with the valorous chapters of war-time flying. There was the sudden barrage of fog or storm that hid death in a dozen forms, the maddening lonesomeness of long hours of blind flying, the ever-present fear of a forced landing in some forbidding waste of the barrens and the cold nights.

Cruikshank dismissed it all with a wave of his hand; dismissed the cold fact of 7,000 miles flown over a trackless waste, comparable only to a dash to the Pole and back.

Had to Fly Without Instruments.

And practically every mile of it was flown without instruments in a plane that was hauled from the cold waters of Burnside River after it had gone through the ice, its motor stripped to the last nut, nursed back to life and put into action again. The damaged propeller had to be trimmed off on both ends to get it into balance again; the magneto had to be cooked in an oven for nearly a day to dry it out. The mechanics, unsung heroes of the great adventure, performed wonders and made a plane fly that in ordinary circumstances would be retired with honor, battle-scarred and useless.

It was this machine that bore the brunt of the long search. Six others lie scattered across the barren lands, broken and abandoned, victims of the Arctic.

"I cursed my luck when the old bus went through the ice," said Cruikshank. "I thought I was out of the search. But that's the machine that came smiling back to civilization still going strong."

"And," he added, nodding to his mechanic, who sat beside him, "get this: If it hadn't been for Alf Walker here there would have been no 7,000-mile search flight as far as I was concerned. He nursed that bus until he had it eating out of his hand. He made a motor grow out of a pile of water-soaked metal and fondled an apparently useless magneto until it crooned in his ear."

Cruikshank's first jumping-off point was Prince George, away in the northwest corner of the continent. When the call came, he and Walker hopped off over the Rockies to Hudson Hope, on to Peace River Crossing, Fort McMurray, Chipewyan on Lake Athabasca, and into Stony Rapids.

Flying thousands of miles over the desolate barrens from Stony, he spent fourteen days taking gasoline and supplies further into the wilderness to cache for the use of the search squadron. Through all kinds of weather and over all kinds of country he droned his lonesome path through the air to take up the rations. Once he battled storms and fogs over unknown country to rescue three of the search party lost for thirteen days, stranded on the wind-swept tundra when their plane's undercarriage collapsed.

Over Ice in Pontooned Plane.

A flight he made from Stony Rapids to Baker Lake will go down in the annals of north country flying. In a pontoon-equipped plane he fought his way over ice-locked country, his life depending on his motor. All the smaller lakes were frozen. A forced landing in that area on pontoons might easily have meant death. At the least it would have meant that he would be stranded there, perhaps never to be found. But his motor saw him through.

From Bathurst to Musk Ox Lake to Reliance, Resolution, back to Reliance, over thousands of square miles of unknown country, where a forced landing meant tremendous dangers and hardships, he pressed the search.

Cruikshank had to get from Reliance to Resolution to flash the word to the outside that his was the only machine left in action. One by one the other six had been put out of action in the uneven fight against the Arctic. Off he went with Alf Walker beside him.

Four days it took them to make the trip, four days charged with seemingly unsurmountable difficulties. Twice they were forced down, again and again they tried to beat the fog, but the elements were against them. Then a break in the weather let them into the air. Below them lay 100 miles of open water and death should the motor fail.

Walker peered at the water below. First from one side of the plane and then the other, Alf would frown down at the vast expanse of water. He nudged the pilot and shook his head.

"Hey," said Alf, "I don't arf like this blinkin' Lindbergh stuff."

Fought Through to Fort Resolution.

But they soared across the great body of water and fought through to Fort Resolution.

Day after day and week after week their plane took them through. It boasted no instruments, its body was scarred, its propeller minus several inches, its innards ached, but it hummed along, thanks to the tender nursing of Alf Walker and his pilot.

When the word was flashed that the MacAlpine party was safe at Cambridge Bay, it strained to be off to bring them back to civilization. Down from the edge of the world, it carried the long lost men and then came on to Winnipeg, while a sister plane took up the burden of bringing MacAlpine and his men further south. It floated to a long overdue rest here with a swish of ski on snow that sounded for all the world like a sigh of relief.

The word "epic" is pretty well worn by now. But it describes the search for the MacAlpine party. It is a landmark in the onward march of aviation that some day will be recognized in its importance. Nothing like it has ever been done before.

Even a few months ago the exploits of Andy Cruikshank and his co-pilots on this search would have been called beyond human accomplishment. They were hundreds of miles from a workshop, relying on the expertness and resourcefulness of the mechanics. Hurried inspection of fuel and food and off into the unknown when the call came to take the air. Hour after hour of lonesome flying over wastes where a compass was useless and flying instinct was a priceless gift.

The fliers dismiss it by saying it "had to be done," but it did not leave them unmoved. They talked in their sleep and at times their nerves were terribly on edge. Cruikshank spoke of the sleep-talking, growing from the strain of constant thinking that MacAlpine and his men must be found. From the men in their sleeping bags at night would come mumbled words. "There they are, Andy. See the plane down there on the ice," or "We must find them before they starve to death."

Then with the dawn they would be off again, flying until darkness forced them back to their nest.

They would dream foolish and tragic things, of queer shaped planes piloted by grinning Eskimos, of accidents that would snuff out the lives of comrades.

Cruikshank and Walker dismissed it with a wave of the hand and asked for a light.

ENLIST PARTY HERE TO AID EIELSON HUNT

Friends of Pilot Lost in the Wastes of Northern Alaska Act to Finance Wide Search.

PLANES TO BE SENT NORTH

Aviation Corporation Promises a Fleet as Soon as Possible—Asks Help of Canada.

Friends of Carl Ben Eielson, the flier, missing in Northern Alaska since early November, organized a committee of his fellow club members in the City and Explorers clubs to cooperate with the army, navy and Aviation Corporation in searching for him and Earl Boland, his mechanic.

The committee, headed by Burt McConnell and C. E. Whitemore, members of the City Club, are enlisting financial aid and the backing of independent aviation interests to organize a special expedition in case that sponsored by the Aviation Corporation, Eielson's employer, fails to find him in the next few days, it was said yesterday by Mr. McConnell.

The impetus to the search came as a result of the return last week of Mr. McConnell from the North. He is a close friend both of Eielson and Olaf Swenson, one of the party now stranded on the schooner Kamuk and whom Eielson was trying to rescue when he disappeared. Swenson was the hero of the rescue of the survivors of the wreck of the Karluk from Wrangell Island on Sept. 7, 1914, after eleven had died of privation or had been lost on the ice as the efforts of three nations were directed in the rescue. He and his little 110-foot sealing vessel broke through the ice floes and delivered the survivors to the United States Revenue Cutter Bear in what is now known as one of the most difficult rescues of the Arctic.

Seek Planes for Search.

The Aviation Corporation announced yesterday that as soon as possible a fleet of monoplanes would be rushed to Alaska to start out over the Bering Strait in the search for the lost fliers. It is known that the middle of Bering Strait is now blanketed by a heavy fog, and the rescuing pilots, all used to Winter flying, will have to make long detours over the frozen part of the North to get as far as Siberia, it being impossible to get through the fog caused by the open water of the strait in Winter.

A dispatch from Paul Goldsborough, operating vice president of the Universal Airlines at St. Louis, to the New York office of the Aviation Corporation said that the shipment of Fokker monoplanes would have to be held in abeyance until some method of transporting them by steamer over part of the route to Nome were found, without having to dismantle them. The company officials in New York, however, said that Fairchild folding-wing monoplanes would be substituted for the Fokkers and that shipment would be made as soon as possible.

The Aviation Corporation has also sent out requests to other airline operators with ski-equipped planes for additional planes. The Canadian Government has a fleet of Fairchild mail and passenger planes which may be used to augment the ranks of the searchers, it was said last night.

Stefansson Is Optimistic.

Vilhjalmur Stefansson, Arctic explorer, reassured his fellow-members at the City Club yesterday by saying that few people knew as much about living in the Arctic as Eielson. He said that, unless the two men were hurt in a crash as their plane came down, he was certain that Eielson could exist indefinitely.

The party aboard the Kamuk, though frozen in the ice, has plenty of provisions and can hold out until the coming of Spring frees their vessel, which is loaded with furs.

Thus far the only plane available at Nome for the rescue is that of Joe Crosson, who spent last Winter in the Antarctic with Eielson and Sir Hubert Wilkins. Crosson is associated with Eielson in the Alaskan Airways but his plane is too small and has too short a range to be of much value in the search. It is expected that he will direct the search of the larger planes.

Flier Is Forced Back.

NOME, Alaska, Dec. 8 (AP).—After making repairs to his plane, damaged last Friday in an attempted take-off from Teller, Alaska, pilot Joe Crosson today made a second effort to fly to the rescue of Pilot Carl Ben Eielson and his mechanic, Earl Boland, missing since Nov. 6, but was forced to return to Teller after a short flight because of fogs encountered over Bering Strait.

TEXTILE UNION TO MEET.

National Organization to Consider Problems of Mill Workers.

The problems of the unskilled workers in the mills of New England and the South will be considered at the second national convention of the National Textile Workers' Union in Paterson, N. J., on Dec. 21, it was announced yesterday from national headquarters in this city.

Knit goods workers in this city and Philadelphia will be represented, the union declared, and a special effort will be made to have present delegates from unorganized workers' groups. Union organizers, the announcement said, are active in Massachusetts and Rhode Island mill cities, where frequent meetings are being held.

Tobacco WAR!

EFFECTIVE immediately, the Liggett Drug Stores throughout the country will sell the following popular brands of cigarettes at prices representing approximately our costs.

LUCKY STRIKES
CAMELS OLD GOLDS
CHESTERFIELDS

Package of 20 — 12c
3 Packs of 20 — 35c
Carton of 200 — $1.13

THESE prices, to the best of our belief, are the lowest prevailing in the retail industry.

The tobacco business of the country has been built up very largely on trade-marked brands which are on general sale.

There is a large public demand for these brands, and their sale represents a large part of the business of every legitimate dealer in tobacco, cigars and cigarettes.

Occasionally—sometimes from a desire to sacrifice legitimate business for advertising purposes, sometimes from a desire to grasp and secure control of the business of others—large retail concerns cut prices on popular items to a figure which leaves no living margin of profit to the average dealer, nor to themselves.

A cut rate war has been started, and is being waged by several large retail concerns at the present time. The Liggett Drug Stores have always operated their business on the sound principle of selling merchandise of high quality at reasonable prices, yielding a fair margin of profit to the owners of the business.

But we do not propose to have our legitimate business diverted to others through such cut price methods. With our large chain of nearly 600 stores, our buying power is equal to that of any corporation in the country, and should we permit this pernicious practice to continue unchallenged, our business, and that of all other legitimate merchants will suffer.

We will not allow our stores to be undersold by any such tactics, or for any such purpose as described.

URGES LIMITATION OF ALL IMMIGRANTS

Secretary Davis, in Annual Report, Favors Quota Extension to Western Hemisphere.

FOR GREATER SELECTIVITY

He Says That He Should Have More Power to Choose Among European Applicants.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Changes in the immigration laws to limit immigration from New World countries, and to allow greater selectivity among those from Europe, were advocated by Secretary of Labor Davis in his annual report, made public today.

Although the new national origins plan, which went into effect July 1, reduced the total of immigrants which may be admitted from Europe, it did not, in the opinion of Secretary Davis, allow his department enough leeway in choosing the most desirable ones, nor did it deal with the problem of immigration from Canada, Mexico and the Central and South American countries.

These two questions, he said, call for further legislation.

There has been a steady decline in the immigration from Canada, but that from Mexico has fluctuated both upward and downward to a marked extent, Mr. Davis pointed out. Last year Europe furnished 158,598 immigrants, while New World countries furnished 116,117. The latter number will increase, he predicted, as more European immigrants filter through South American countries.

"The whole problem of immigration from New World countries could be satisfactorily solved by extending a modified quota system to countries the natives of which now are free to come to the United States in unlimited numbers," the Secretary of Labor asserted. He added that the national origins system, if it becomes permanent, might well be extended to the present non-quota countries to obtain the desired results.

Would Limit Permanent Settlers.

"My proposal," he continued, "is that the coming of permanent settlers shall be fixed at a limit which, although generous as compared with European countries, shall fortify against drawing away from our neighboring countries the native-born population which they so greatly need, and which is not needed here.

"It must be remembered that practically all our New World neighbors are immigrant-receiving countries, not having reached the saturation stage which impelled the enactment of our own restrictive laws.

"Some of them are actively engaged in promoting immigration to their undeveloped lands, and under such circumstances it is hardly a neighborly act for the United States to continue a system of immigration control which, to some extent, already does and inevitably will continue to induce their native-born people to come to this country."

Discussing his proposed application of the selective principle to European immigration, Mr. Davis explained that he would not increase the present quotas, but would simply give a preference to immigrants needed in this country.

"Cases are constantly arising in which some American industry, institution or interest can very clearly demonstrate that it needs the service of some particularly qualified person resident in a foreign country, but there is no provision for expediting such immigration," Mr. Davis declared.

Cites Case in Point.

He cited the case of a European manufacturer who was ready to buy an abandoned factory and produce a commodity now imported. Under the present law he would have to wait two years. Hence, said Mr. Davis, the industry was lost.

"The solution I have in mind is very simple," he continued. "It would provide that industries and other interests in the United States needing the professional services of some particular individual could allege to the Secretary of Labor that it was necessary to bring the needed talent from a foreign country.

"The Secretary, after a full hearing and investigation, would authorize that a preference in the issuance of immigration visas be accorded to the particular person named."

Another recommendation of Secretary Davis was for the consolidation and codification of all the laws relating to immigration, now "a thing of shreds and patches."

He also asked for an air patrol for the Immigration Bureau and better quarters for the detention of aliens along the land borders.

Despite agitation in Chicago and other large cities for the deportation of alien gangsters and gunmen, only 610 criminal aliens, convicted after their entry into the United States, were deported during the year ended June 30, according to the annual report of Harry E. Hull, Commissioner of Immigration, part of which was incorporated in the report of Secretary Davis. The number of deported criminals convicted in the United States was seventy-one less than last year.

233 Mexicans Deported.

"During the year 610 aliens convicted of crimes involving moral turpitude and sentenced to imprisonment of a year or more after entering the United States, were deported following release from prison," the report stated. "The largest number of deportees of this class, 233, were Mexicans, or 38.2 per cent of the total. The others included 75 Italians, 57 English, 32 Germans, 27 French, 25 Irish and 161 of the miscellaneous races of peoples."

In addition to the deportees convicted of crimes after establishing residence here, 799 aliens found to be criminals at the time of their entry were deported. The total deportees of the criminal and immoral classes for the year was 1,856.

The report showed that the country during the year received 279,978 immigrants and lost 69,203 emigrants, a net gain of 210,475, as compared with a net gain of like character last year of 229,703. The total number of immigrants admitted during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1929, was the smallest since 1918 and 1919, and excluding those two years, the smallest since 1898.

New York's share of the 1929 immigrants totaled 87,862, that number having designated the State as their intended permanent residence.

Health Demonstration Planned.

City officials, doctors and representatives of voluntary agencies will attend the semi-annual meeting of the Bellevue-Yorkville Health Demonstration Thursday afternoon at the headquarters, 325 East Thirty-eighth Street. Health Commissioner Wynne will preside, and among those who have been invited to speak are Mayor Walker, Sanitation Commissioner William Schroeder Jr., Superintendent of Schools William J. O'Shea and Dr. William T. Devine, director of the demonstration.

TREASURY CLOSES $325,000,000 ISSUE

OFFER TAKEN IN 48 HOURS

Details of Terms for $100,000,000 of Non-Interest Bearing Bills to Be Announced Tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—An announcement made tonight by Secretary Mellon that subscriptions for the offering of $325,000,000 of 3⅛ per cent Treasury certificates of indebtedness had been closed Saturday night, after giving prospective purchasers only forty-eight hours to make their applications, was accepted here as evidence that early reports from the Federal Reserve districts gave assurance of a heavy oversubscription, despite the fact that the interest rate had been cut from 4⅛ per cent, the rate quoted on the last issue of a similar security in September.

The rate of 3⅛ per cent quoted on the new issue, which was publicly announced Friday morning, is the lowest the government has offered since 1927, and was decided on after study of the developments in the money market which followed the decline of values on the Stock Exchange and the release of billions of dollars tied up until then in brokers' loans.

Treasury officials gave no further information concerning the new offering except to say that subscriptions received up to 10 o'clock tomorrow morning will be considered as having been received before the close of the subscription books.

A statement issued by the Treasury read:

"Secretary Mellon announced that subscriptions for the issue of 3⅛ per cent Treasury certificates of indebtedness, dated Dec. 16, 1929, Series TS, 1930, maturing Sept. 15, 1930, closed at the close of business on Saturday, Dec. 7, 1929. Subscriptions received through the mails up to 10 o'clock Monday morning, Dec. 9, will be considered as having been received before the close of the subscription books."

Secretary Mellon also announced today that he had authorized Federal Reserve banks, beginning Tuesday and until further notice, to redeem in cash before maturity, at the holders' option, at par and accrued interest to date of such optional redemption, Treasury 4¼ per cent certificates of indebtedness of Series TD, 1929, and Treasury 4¼ per cent certificates of indebtedness of Series TD-2, 1929, both maturing Dec. 15.

These certificates, to a total of about $704,000,000, must be retired upon maturity and receipts from the marketing of the new offering of 3⅛ per cent certificates and from an issue of about $100,000,000 of non-interest bearing Treasury bills, which are to be offered, along with a part of the quarterly payment of income taxes, due Dec. 15, are to be used for that purpose.

It is expected that the details of the offering of Treasury bills will be placed before the public on Tuesday. This will be the first time the government has experimented with such bills, authority to use them having been granted last June by Congress. Competitive bids will be received, and it is believed that prospective purchasers will seek to obtain them on a yield basis, which will be equal to the return that would be received on a certificate carrying approximately 3 per cent interest. The bills are to be of a ninety-day maturity.

Books Closed for Treasury Issue.

Notice that the subscription books for the current issue of 3⅛ per cent Treasury certificates of indebtedness dated Dec. 16, 1929, Series TS-1930 for $325,000,000, maturing on Sept. 30, 1930, were closed on Saturday, was sent to banks and other financial institutions by George L. Harrison, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York yesterday. Subscriptions received through the mails up to 10 o'clock this morning will be considered as having been received before the books were closed, according to the notice.

PUTS PER CAPITA DEBT OF STATE AT $21.23

State Controller Morris S. Tremaine issued a statement yesterday in which he asserted that the true per capita debt of the State is $21.23 and not $30.75 as given in a recent compilation of the bonded debts of the various States by the Bank of America. The statement follows:

The Bank of America issued the public statement on Dec. 6 purporting to give the bonded debt of all of the States of the United States and the per capita debt of each State. This statement in so far as it pertains to the State of New York is grossly inaccurate and misleading. The bonded debt of New York, as stated by the Bank of America, was placed at $355,223,000. The per capita debt was listed as $30.75.

The inaccuracy and thoroughly misleading character of this statement is due to the fact that the Bank of America overlooked the fact that the State of New York holds a sinking fund of $104,981,523.19, which should be deducted from the amount of bonded debt contained in its statement. The true bonded debt of New York, making proper allowance for the sinking fund, is $250,241,476.81. The true per capita debt is $21.236.

It will be seen at a glance that the statement of the Bank of America is at variance with the facts and that the per capita debt of the State is really far under the per capita debts of a very large number of the States, instead of having only ten States in the Union with a larger per capita showing.

The net debt is the only true basis for comparison.

"Every Person in the World"

"Already, on the basis of present scientific knowledge, except for the prohibitive cost, every person in the world—whether on land, sea, or in the air, could be brought into instantaneous intercommunication."—Walter S. Gifford, President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

"ON land, sea, or in the air!" Distance swept aside by man and his science. Nations—once isolated from the rest of the world about them—brought together by the ties of human speech.

25 years ago, such a statement would have been received with polite incredulity. Today it is accepted without reservation.

For such has been the progress of telephony, even in the past ten years, that we may look forward expectantly to even more amazing achievements.

Ten years ago less than 12,000,000 people in this country were united to each other by the speech network of the telephone. Today, from your telephone, you can talk to any one of nearly 29,000,000 telephones, here and abroad.

So we draw nearer that day when a person in New York State can reach by telephone anyone in the world with whom he wishes to talk—a day when Mr. Gifford's statement will have become an accomplished fact.

9½% Guaranteed Dividend

Once a theory now tested by Experience

Postal Life Building Owned by the Company

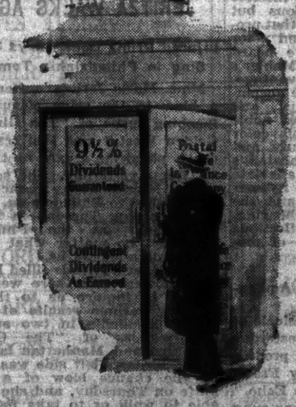
The Postal Way and Its Economies

The POSTAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY is employing a method tested by more than one try-out, indeed by the experience of years. These years show the Company growing by its Non-Agency method in substantial proportions and nation-wide prestige.

What was once its theory in a prophecy of its future, is now an established fact. Its distinctive economies are outstanding in the chapters of its twenty-four years of history, resulting in savings for policyholders.

Passing Out of the Doubting Thomases

The taking out of insurance volitionally, overcoming resistance to initiative, and overcoming the resistance of high-pressure competition, has been demonstrated. The doubting Thomases, who in the beginning spoke derisively of the Postal method and its 9½% dividends guaranteed to policyholders, have passed out of hearing. The contention has been sustained that by the POSTAL WAY there was warrant for the self-imposed reduction. That insurance operations can be well conducted within the reduction is now not questioned.



YOU and YOU and YOU

Its non-agency door once opened has been kept open—it is to be kept open through the years. You and You and You are thus enabled to be your own agent and reduce the cost of your insurance.

We have been wont to say that the method we employ is the Direct method. A laboratory method goes along with it, improving and conforming it. As in the laboratory of scientific research, experiment determines what is the right way, it is so in the Postal's laboratory.

A theory is splendid if it can be proved by experiment. Every successful business is an experimental laboratory improving an old way and testing out new theory. Thus have the Postal's twenty-four years been years of increasing success. Conditions in the Company that have contributed to low cost of insurance will continue to improve.

New York State Supervision

The Company is subject to the supervision of the Insurance Department of New York and the regulations of the United States postal service everywhere.

Every form of insurance from the low-priced "Start-Off" policy to the investment forms of Endowment Insurance is provided through its organization.

It is the outstanding company of practical economies because of its distinctive direct Non-Agency method.

Health Bureau Lowers Cost

The life-prolonging service of its Health Bureau also helps to keep insurance cost down, as well as to make living worth-while, while one lives. It is a most appealing feature.

Policyholders tell a very satisfying story and are increasing the Company's prestige everywhere.

PONSELLE TO SING IN 'LUISA MILLER'

Her Appearance in Revival of Verdi's Opera, Last Heard Here in 1853.

SEASON'S THIRD NOVELTY

Lauri-Volpe and De Luca in Cast—Serafin to Conduct the Metropolitan Premiere.

Rosa Ponselle is soon to make her first appearance this season on the stage of the Metropolitan. A "slight cold" left the prima donna with inflamed vocal cords before New York's opera season opened this Fall. The soprano will have been two months out of opera when she returns to sing the title rôle in Verdi's "Luisa Miller," a work last heard at the old Academy of Music in 1886, and now announced as the third of the current season's novelties and revivals, at next week's Saturday matinee, Dec. 21, at the Metropolitan.

Lauri-Volpi, De Luca and Pasero, with the Misses Telva and Doninelli and Messrs. Ludikar and Paltrinieri, are to sing with Miss Ponselle in Verdi's melodious version of a famous tragedy, "Kabale und Liebe," by the poet Schiller.

"Luisa Miller" was first sung in Naples at the San Carlo Theatre on Dec. 8, 1849. It was Verdi's "first success," a year before "Rigoletto." The opera reached New York in 1853 at Castle Garden, and it had two recorded Academy performances of Oct. 20, 1886, and shortly after with Giulia Valda, Sig. Vicini and Angelo's Italian Opera Company.

Mr. Serafin has prepared the musical ensemble for Mr. Gatti-Casazza's revival and will conduct the Metropolitan premiere. The stage direction is in charge of Ernst Lert, in recognition of the German stage's restoration in recent years of this forgotten work of the great Italian composer. Giulio Setti has trained the opera chorus, and Joseph Urban has designed the scenes.

THREE DANCE RECITALS DRAW LARGE CROWDS

Hundreds Fail to See Kreutzberg-Georgi—Ruth Page and Angna Enters Reappear.

Three recitals were offered last night to the attention of patrons of the dance. Ruth Page gave her second program of the season at the Guild Theatre, assisted this time by Frank Parker in "chansons mimées"; Angna Enters made the third and last appearance of her local season at the Booth, and Harald Kreutzberg and Yvonne Georgi gave their sixth and last concert for a while at the Craig. Despite this division of interest, large audiences were the rule, especially at the Craig, where standing room was crowded and hundreds were unable to obtain admission.

The German dancers' program was made up of selections from previous programs, among them being "Révolte," "Angel of Annunciation" and "Capriccio," by Mr. Kreutzberg; "Waltz," "Kassandra" and "Spirit of Evil," by Miss Georgi, and "Persian Song," "Bad Dreams" and Mozart "Variations," by both together. There was as usual high enthusiasm and several repetitions.

Miss Enters added to her réertoire a new number entitled "Antique in the English Manner—Rosetti, Ltd., and reintroduced its companion piece, "Saturnalia—Antique à la Francaise." The remainder of the program consisted of popular favorites from this and other seasons.

Miss Page, though presenting only two new compositions, added the spice of novelty by presenting as her fellow-artist Frank Parker in a group of new "chansons mimées." Mr. Parker, who was first seen here in this style of work last season with Grace Cornell, made a distinctly enjoyable contribution to the evening. As a diseur, he makes small pretensions to vocal gifts, but relies upon his alert and genial humor and his excellent costuming and choice of songs. Sometimes he misses the fine points of form in his creations, but they are all alive and full of spirit. Most popular last night, though not quite up to the mark in composition, was his group of three devastating "Folk Songs of Broadway." He is also a dancer of parts, whose ability in this line was all too briefly called upon.

Miss Page's new dances included a "Romantic Etude," done in the classical style, and a humorous piece entitled "The Flapper Goes Oriental," which proved to be a burlesque of her own Balinese group preceding it. This group, incidentally, was again the outstanding item on her program.

STOKOWSKI TO STUDY RADIO

Will Try Engineering to Improve Orchestral Broadcasting.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 8 (AP).—Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia orchestra, announced over the radio tonight that during his approaching vacation of twelve weeks he would take a course in radio engineering. By his study in radio laboratories, he said, he hoped to improve if not revolutionize the broadcasting of orchestral music. His leave of absence from the orchestra will begin soon after Christmas.

"There are certain aspects of broadcasting orchestral music with which I am not satisfied," Dr. Stokowski said. "Hence I am going into the laboratories and studios of the National Broadcasting Company, and with the help of its chief engineer try to devise mechanical means of overcoming some of the handicaps large orchestras labor under when broadcasting."

Young Artists Sing "La Traviata."

Gita Glasé, soprano, who has been heard in concert here in former seasons, presented a group of young artists in Verdi's opera, "La Traviata," at the Majestic Theatre last evening, Mme. Glasé herself singing the rôle of Violetta. Ugo Martinelli, tenor, and Misail Speransky, baritone, were among a dozen other performers, and Michael Fevelsky conducted. The opera was sung as a benefit of the Young Folks League for Aid to Hebrew Infants.

MUSIC

By OLIN DOWNES.

José Iturbi Plays Again.

José Iturbi, the Spanish pianist, whose first New York appearances with the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra last week were not short of a sensation, appeared again with that body yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall, playing the Liszt concerto in E flat. The brave old piece has not been heard frequently of late years, although it was not so long ago that it held a leading place in the affections of concert pianists and their audiences.

Mr. Iturbi's performance as a whole was very brilliant. The lyrical themes were done rare justice, as well as bravura passages. Mr. Mengelberg's accompaniment was unusual and excellent. The introduction of the concerto, at the hands of pianist and conductor, had the breadth it does not always receive. This part was truly Lisztian, and it may be said from the standpoint of both virtuosity and musicianship that it would have been hard to excel this performance.

And yet—something seemed to be lacking, something which was perhaps precisely the result of Mr. Iturbi's taste, musicianship and aristocratic sense of proportion. That something was the Lisztian "grandeur," or what the less enthusiastic might call the splurge and swank which characterize so much of Liszt's music. A few virtuosos—oddly enough Vladimir de Pachmann, essentially a miniaturist, was one of them—have played the finale of the E flat concerto, not at top speed, but very grandly, broadening at the end, finishing with a lordly pomp instead of a whirlwind tempo. And it is said by some authorities that this was Liszt's conception. Certainly, by such treatment, the concerto would lose nothing of imposing gallantry and splendor.

We found that Mr. Iturbi's interpretation, admirable and virtuoso-spirited as it was, reduced certain of the later pages of the work to the inflections of salon music. The concerto, even where it is most superficial, is always more than that. At its worst it is Don Juan, with that gentleman's silken flattery and pride of bearing, and always it has a picturesque stride, a Mephistophelian glitter and a lightning flash! The grand illusions, inherent in so much of Liszt's music, we found lacking in the very just, penetrating and wholly admirable performance of Mr. Iturbi. In the words of the Westerner, he appears almost too much the gentleman and the scholar in art to do complete justice to this splendid, frothy, blazing, music.

The Friends of Music.

From Liszt's concerto, and Mr. Mengelberg's singular treatment of Franck and Tchaikovsky, already reported in these columns, it was possible to take a turn of one block down and half a block to the left, and, entering the portals of Mecca Temple leave behind all thought or vestige of glitter, pomp and vanity. For here the Friends of Music discoursed Brahms, Locatelli, Mahler and Bloch with a magisterial solemnity no doubt in keeping with the occasion, but rather oppressive in pace and dun-colored in vibration.

This, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Bodanzky is far more sympathetic to the music of a Brahms, a Locatelli, and the Bloch of the "Concerto Grosso," who is a classic "protem," than he—Bodanzky—is to music of a more romantic or dramatic description. Was it apathy on the part of the orchestra, or was it the atmospheric gloom of an interior which watched the melodious but lugubrious songs of Mahler, that produced the sluggish mood and color of the occasion? We have heard Mme. Matzenauer, who was Mahler's interpreter, sing to better advantage, although she was always thé accomplished and thoughtful artist, and the possessor of a rich and noble voice. But of contrast of color there was little. The beauty and the unfailing charm of Locatelli's "Concerto Grosso" did not alleviate the prevailing grayness. The listener reflected upon the beauty and the edification of what he was hearing, and—reflected again. Such reflections seize the mind in intervals of musical inspiration.

"Beggar's Love" Sung at Ambassador.

The New York Matinee Musicale at the Hotel Ambassador yesterday staged a "miniature opera" production of "Beggar's Love," by Frank Patterson, composer of "The Echo." The text, by Tyndall Gray, was sung by Marguerite Hawkins, Justin Lawrie and Richard Parks to an accompaniment arranged for violin, 'cello and piano, played by the Misses Grace Fisher, Genevieve Hughel and Minabel Hunt. The opera was a tragedy laid "in the slums of a present-day American city" and containing songs which have been adapted to concert performance.

JOHN CHARLES THOMAS DELIGHTS BIG AUDIENCE

John Charles Thomas appeared yesterday afternoon in a song recital at Town Hall before an audience distinguished socially and musically which completely filled every seat. The singer presented what virtually amounted to two programs. The first was devoted to French songs ranging from an old fifteenth century air to works by Duparc, Widor and Holmès, and songs in German by Beethoven, Schumann and Marx.

The qualities which have characterized Mr. Thomas's singing in the past were again in evidence. He caught the spirit of the text with felicity. His diction in the various languages was admirable. His phrasing and melodic line were musicianly. His high notes were often splendid. Occasionally there appeared, perhaps as an aftermath of his recent cold, a noticeable flatting which marked the ends of those phrases which were sustained pianissimo and diminuendo. Just a bit more abandon might have metamorphosed the indubitably admirable into the great.

The concluding group of the program was given over to a first New York performance of "Vodvil," described as "a satirical cycle," and dedicated to the singer by the composer, Harvey Enders. Its inclusion by an artist of Mr. Thomas's attainments might be impunged, clever caricature though it was. The skit concerns itself with the seamy side of the lives of trapeze queens, prima donnas, harmony sisters, blackface comedians and the like, and contrasts their hours before and behind the footlights to the accompaniment of reminiscent "blues" and "slow drags" and the inevitable "Vesti la giubba-Ridi Pagliaccio" pot-pourri. The interpreter made the most of the work by clever histrionic by-play and pantomime, recalling his operetta career. The composer, who was in the audience, was obliged to acknowledge the insistent applause.

The auditors welcomed Mr. Thomas with enthusiasm, which mounted to an ovation at the end of each group and to which Mr. Thomas replied by singing many encores and by giving witty speeches. His accompanist, Lester Hodges, provided an adequate background.

A SYMPHONY CONCERT.

Manhattan Orchestra Plays Before Audience of Good Size.

The Manhattan Symphony Orchestra gave its fourth concert in Mecca Temple last evening, with an audience showing considerable popular support for this independent venture and a further visible evidence of its wider appeal in the fact that the music was broadcast by radio through Station WOR.

Henry Hadley conducted Mozart's "Figaro" overture, G. W. Chadwick's "Tam o' Shanter," substituted for the Boston composer's "Aphrodite," and a concluding Wagner group from "Die Walküre," "Siegfried" and "Götterdämmerung."

Marvin Maazel, the pianist, recently heard in recital after several years' absence, was the orchestra's guest, playing Rubinstein's D-minor concerto. His performance was one of splendid energy and rhythmic fire, heartily applauded at every pause.

The new orchestra has under consideration a plan, outlined in last night's programs, to give three Sunday evening concerts at St. George's Church, Stuyvesant Square, on invitation of the rector, the Rev. Dr. Karl Reiland. Expenses of the series will be met by subscription and not by admission fees from the general public.

JERITZA WALKS AGAIN.

Injured Prima Donna Says She Will Sing in Philadelphia Tomorrow.

Mme. Maria Jeritza, suffering from a blow in the solar plexus in the lynching scene of "The Girl of the Golden West," was still resting under a physician's care at the Hotel St. Regis yesterday. She sent word to the Metropolitan, whence it was telegraphed to Philadelphia, that she hoped to sing Tuesday in Puccini's "Turandot" at the Philadelphia Academy, no matter what her doctor's orders should be.

The singer's friends filled her room with flowers and there were many callers to inquire as to the unexpectedly serious results of the repeated accidents in two successive performances of "The Girl" in Brooklyn and Manhattan last week. Mme. Jeritza's left side was numbed by the chance blow of a wooden knife on Thursday, and she was unable to walk or to take food up to last evening.

Musicale by Hunter Choir.

The Hunter College choir will give a musicale tonight in the college auditorium. James M. Kieran, president of the college, and Ruth McKane, president of the choir, will give addresses. The choir is under the direction of Alfred Y. Cornell.

THE SCREEN

By MORDAUNT HALL.

A Sorry Business.

THE WHITE SHEIK, with Lilian Hall-Davis, Warwick Ward, Jameson Thomas, Julie Suedo, Gibb McLaughlin, Clifford Mcfarlan and Forrester Harvey; adapted from Romita Forbes's novel, "King's Mate," directed by Harry Knoles; news reel: "Feed 'em and Weep;" "Strange Prayers," a Ufa oddity. At the Little Carnegie Playhouse.

There are, it is true, scenes of Morocco and glimpses of hosts of Arabs on their fast horses in the British production, "The White Sheik," but the acting and direction of this silent film is so amateurish that it fails even as a soporific. The story itself is more often than not unconsciously funny, for the characters are as silly a lot as have ever darted to and fro on the screen.

This peculiarly boring piece of film work was directed by Harley Knoles. He had under his guidance such players as Jameson Thomas, Lilian Hall-Davis and Warwick Ward. Mr. Knoles's inspiring touch is not in evidence, for even Mr. Ward, whose work in "Variety" was not excelled by the talented Emil Jannings, cannot be accused of doing much more than look the old-fashioned villian, with a half-covered eye here and a sneer there.

Stupid Rosemary Tregarthen hies herself to Fez, where, possibly after reading E. M. Hull's clever tale, "The Sheik," she becomes very much interested in what she presumes to be a legendary person known as the White Sheik. Needless to say that he is alive and kicking, quite unlike a Sheik and ready to fall in love with the first pale-faced screen actress that comes his way.

Mr. Ward officiates as the malignant Martengo; he also poses as a Sheik who is in sympathy with the Riffs. He has a weakness for English girls and offends Rosemary Tregarthen and does so again when this far from brainy creature gives him the opportunity. A great deal of fuss is made when none other than the White Sheik, played by Mr. Thomas, has a rough and tumble encounter with the scoffing Martengo, after the villain had insulted Rosemary Tregarthen the second time. Martengo is the type of scoundrel who won't take no for an answer and is a source of considerable annoyance to a hard-working, inexperienced hero. He has the worst of it in the fistic encounter and so soon as the director, Mr. Knoles, arranges it, he smites the White Sheik in the face with a whip and asks him whether he knows what that means, in the Riffian manner.

It is surprising to see a motion-picture hero look comparatively calm after this slash across his countenance. Instead of taking the villain by the nape of the neck and throwing him over at least two mountains, the White Sheik says he does know what striking one in the face means. It means that the two men will have to fight a blind duel at sunrise, and a blind duel is one in which one of the pistols is loaded with a blank.

There is a great deal of fiddling about with the pistols, so that it seems as if they had just done it enough times to set everything right in the end. At any rate the White Sheik is not killed, but neither is the unpleasant Martengo. He is wounded in the shoulder. In the end, however, he has a very nasty time tumbling down 3,000 feet into a canyon, and although—for all one knows in such a film—he may still be living, the idea appears to be that he is doomed for the duration of the story.

As to the acting of the three principals, well they might themselves say, "Why bring that up?"

SIR OLIVER LODGE TALKS IN NEWS REEL

Discusses Space in Embassy Picture—Rudy Vallee in a Double Role.

NEWS REELS, a compilation of Movietone news reels shown continuously at the Embassy Theatre.

Ranging from Gene Tunney, "a Shakespearean student," and Sir Oliver Lodge, who discusses space, to Rudy Vallee, the dulcet voiced, and Raymond Duncan, a brother of Isadora, the news reel theatre is offering its kaleidoscopic program of pictorial news at the Embassy.

Sir Oliver, describing magnetic forces, says: "That is the kind of thing going on in magnetism, and I see certain analogies with what goes on in life. If we understood all that happened between space and matter we might begin to understand something more of what life and mind really are."

Gene Tunney, who with his wife, the former Polly Lauder, returns from Europe on the Vulcania, remarks that "the best thing about traveling is getting home." Mrs. James M. Doran, wife of the National Prohibition Commissioner, charmingly explains a "kickless" receipe for a cocktail.

Fossy Gillis, re-elected Mayor of Newburyport, raps his political foes and declares no graft jobs exist in his régime except a "few to some of my best friends." Walter E. Edge, United States Ambassador to France, bids us adieu, declining to make a speech because "the first rule for a diplomat is to be a good listener."

There is a view of Rudy Vallee leading an orchestra while singing melting tunes. Pop Warner, W. A. Alexander, Tad Jones and Knute Rockne are heard discussing candidates for the all-American eleven.

A hero of the Spanish-American War, Richmond Pearson Hobson, continues his fighting, this time against narcotics. He says that 90 per cent of all criminals use drugs. The Princeton Triangle Players cavort across the boards in the best chorus-girl fashion, and a platoon of Swiss soldiers execute the goose-step.

The Yuletide season is ushered in with scenes in the postoffice showing overtaxed mailmen and warnings to wrap securely and mail early. Tony Sarg entertains young visitors in his studios with trick dolls that whistle and dance. Tourists at Juarez, Mexico, consume "Alexanders" at a local bar and cry for more.

Conrad Lorenz, son of Vienna's famous physician, trains wild birds in his back yard. A great cat at Essex, England, weighs thirty-three pounds and four ounces, but meows like any other. Lacemakers in Yugoslavia make lace while the sun shines.

In the realm of sports Ben Erens demonstrates tricks employed by card sharps, the final handicap at Bowie is run, Navy "sinks" Dartmouth, Frank Taberski, world's champion pocket billiard player, demonstrates a few trick shots, and Raymond Duncan composes a tunic with the help of a pretty manikin, on whom Mr. Duncan lavishes more praise than on the garment he is making. The six-day bike racers race.

Other Photoplays.

"The Sky Hawk," a talking picture based on Llewellyn Hughes's story, "Chap Called Bardell," will be presented on Wednesday evening at the Gaiety Theatre.

"Hunting Tigers in India," a travel film, will be presented this evening at the George M. Cohan Theatre.

Belle Baker in "Song of Love," a talking and singing picture, is now on view at the Capitol.

"Hungarian Rhapsody," a Ufa silent film, is at the Film Guild Cinema.

Kentucky Former Representative, Convicted in Liquor Case, Publishes His Defense.

PIKEVILLE, Ky., Dec. 8 (AP).—The first instalment of a book with the dual title, "They Tried to Crucify Me, or the Smoke Screen of the Cumberland," has been received here and its author, former Representative John M. Langley of Kentucky, is preparing for its circulation.

The book is dedicated to the author's mother and father, deceased, and his wife, Katherina Langley, who is now a Representative. In the foreword Mr. Langley says that in giving the story of what he terms his persecution he "hews to the line and lets the law of gravitation take care of the chips."

The first part of the book is devoted to a history of Mr. Langley's conviction for conspiracy to violate the Federal prohibition law and matters leading up to it. He quotes in full a letter from Harry M. Daugherty, Attorney General at the time of the conviction, and expresses the opinion that he aided in stirring up the case to divert attention from his department.

MUSIC NOTES.

The New York State Federation of Women's Clubs has sponsored an invitation concert of young artists tomorrow evening at the Home-Making Centre in the Grand Central Palace.

Adia Kuznezoff and Zinaida Nicolina will sing Russian gypsy songs at the Jewish Club tomorrow afternoon for the benefit of the Educational Guild.

Claude Debussy's piano, used by the composer in the years 1913 to 1915, has been brought from Paris for exhibition at Wanamaker's.

The glee club of the West Side Y. M. C. A. will sing in the "Y" Hall on Thursday evening, assisted by Esther Nelson, soprano.

Haarlem House has announced a concert by its neighborhood orchestra next Sunday with Ernesto Muratori as conductor.

REMEMBER

The 160 Neediest Cases.

BEYOND all doubt our ten thousand brilliant gifts deserve an illustration more modern in its theme and motif! But, certainly, no illustration would better depict the old-fashioned spirit of helpfulness and service that has kept us New York's one "Shop of Gifts" since the year 1847.

SHUBERTS TO REVIVE OSCAR WILDE PLAYS

Will Give a Cycle at Jolson's Theatre, Each Drama to Continue for Two Weeks.

SERIES OF STANDARD PLAYS

Project May Extend to Other Cities —"Robin Hood" to Reopen at the Casino on Dec. 23.

The success of the musical comedy and operetta revivals at Jolson's Theatre has inspired the Shuberts to plan for the presentation of a series of standard plays by British, American and Continental authors. The project will get under way in January, each play to have an engagement of two weeks, as is the case with the musical presentations at Jolson's.

The first productions will be an Oscar Wilde cycle. Among his plays now being considered are "Lady Windermere's Fan," "The Importance of Being Earnest," "An Ideal Husband," "A Woman of No Importance" and "A Florentine Tragedy."

Some of the players have already been engaged. Their names, along with those of the director and scenic designer, will be announced later. The project, it was said by the Shuberts, may eventually extend to other cities. It will be in no sense a repertory company, they pointed out, for they plan "to present each play with a specially selected cast, necessitating regular and important changes of players."

The Shuberts also announced yesterday that "Robin Hood," one of the recent revivals at Jolson's, would reopen at the Casino Theatre on Dec. 23 for a Christmas engagement. The cast will be largely the same as that which played the operetta during its two weeks at Jolson's, where it preceded the current engagement of "The Merry Widow."

'SIMPLESIMON' CAST CHOSEN

Musical Show, With Ed Wynn, Is to Open in Boston Next Month.

The cast of "Simple Simon," the show in which Ed Wynn will appear under the management of Florenz Ziegfeld, will include, in addition to the star, Harriet Hoctor, Bobbe Arnst, Alan Edwards, Hugh Cameron, Will Ahern, Dore Leslie and Paul Stanton. It will go in rehearsal in another week and open in Boston about Jan. 20.

The book of "Simple Simon" is by Guy Bolton and Mr. Wynn, and the music and lyrics by Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart. Seymour Felix will stage the dances and Zeke Colvin the book.

"Simple Simon" may come to the New Amsterdam, although that house is also mentioned for the Fred Stone show, which Charles Dillingham will produce, and "The International Revue," which Lew Leslie is sponsoring.

The show which Mr. Ziegfeld is planning for Marilyn Miller will go in rehearsal on Jan. 13.

"Children of Darkness" Here Jan. 6

"Children of Darkness," the Edwin Justus Mayer play in which Basil Sydney and Mary Ellis will appear under the management of Kenneth Macgowan and Joseph Verner Reed, will open at the Biltmore Theatre on Jan. 6 after a week in Pittsburgh. The play in now in rehearsal under the direction of Lester Lonergan. Robert Edmond Jones is designing its costumes and scenery. Eugene Powers will be a member of the supporting cast.

"Children of Darkness" was tried out last season by Jed Harris with Ina Claire as the star. It was then known as "The Lady of Newgate" and "The Gaoler's Wench."

Irvine Players to Give Playlets.

The Irvine Players, a group of young actors, will present a bill of one-act plays next Sunday evening at the Davenport Theatre, 138 East Twenty-seventh Street. The proceeds of the performance will be given to the needy poor at Christmas. The plays on the program include "Babouscka," a Christmas play by Ethel Van der Veer; "The Death Trap," by H. H. Munro; "The Third Angle," by Florence Ryerson; "Bargains in Cathay," by Rachel Field, and "The Best of All Ways," by Julia Farrell Whitely.

Cat Show Opens Today.

Some of the town's tonfest tabbies, brushed and beribboned, will exhibit themselves today and tomorrow in a charitable cause. The occasion is the opening of the twenty-eighth annual show of the Atlantic Cat Club for the benefit of the Bide-a-Wee Home for Friendless Animals. It has happened in the past that a stray alley cat has crept in and even won a prize. Such an event is not expected this year, the publicity representative of the club declares. Among the 150 highly bred, long-haired Persians in the show there will be none that cannot show Social Register standing, if he can help it.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Two premieres are on tonight's schedule. "Diana," with Mary Nash as the star, will open at the Longacre Theatre, and "The Novice and the Duke," a modernized version of Shakespeare's "Measure for Measure," will be presented at the Assembly.

Michael Kallesser plans to produce "The Bridge of Sighs," a play by Charles Sherman, in New York in February. Mr. Kallesser has in past seasons produced several of his own plays.

"Cease Firing," a musical comedy which Andy Wright is sponsoring, will open in Philadelphia on Jan. 6. It is expected on Broadway two weeks later.

A Chicago company of "How's Your Health?" the Teasdale-Wilson farce at the Vanderbilt, is announced to go in rehearsal in two weeks' time.

"City Haul," which Gil Boag is producing, will open tonight in Jamaica and go next week to Newark. It will open on Broadway Christmas night.

Tchekov's "The Three Sisters" will be the second production of the sitting company at the American Laboratory Theatre. Maria Germanova, the new director of the organization, will appear in one of the leading rôles. It will be her début on the English-speaking stage.

"Hope's End," "Winter-Bound," "The New Moon," "Let Us Be Gay" and "Hot Chocolates" will begin their last week on Broadway tonight.

The Washington Square Players will present Sheridan's "The Rivals" on Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons, Dec. 26, 27 and 28, and on Saturday, Jan. 4, at the Gansevoort Theatre, 29 Grove Street. "Hop o' My Thumb," a play for children, is now being staged there at daily matinees.

Loney Haskell will be among the speakers at a luncheon of the Wednesday Matinee Club which will be held in the music room of the Hotel Biltmore this Wednesday.

JACK DEMPSEY ACTS IN SKETCH AT PALACE

Answers Questions About Tunney Fight—Esther Ralston Dances, Ken Murray Clowns.

By going through no more red tape than buying an admission into the Palace Theatre this week, you may become reacquainted with the fact that Jack Dempsey was once the heavyweight champion of the world, that Esther Ralston is known as "the golden girl of the screen" and that Ken Murray has few peers as a vaudeville entertainer. There are some other items on the new curriculum, including three gentlemen who sing and two other gentlemen who toss a lady around at the risk of, principally, a broken neck. But, amid no little stir and pother on the part of the management, Mr. Dempsey, Miss Ralston and Mr. Murray are declared to be the big three.

The act prepared for the former champion is from the devoted pen of Willard Mack, and when it is all over it is quite clear that Mr. Mack still resents the outcome of that Chicago incident in which Mr. Dempsey and Mr. Tunney participated on a September evening now two years past. There are not too furtive hints that the orthodox count of ten matured to the fourteen seconds during which Mr. Tunney reposed on the floor that night and that, except for some dubious mathematics, the Manassa Mauler would have won his crown and glory back. All this is gleaned from a cannily prepared sketch in which the ex-monarch is interviewed by a roadside ancient who asks him, oddly enough, questions at which Mr. Dempsey springs with ready answers. Each reference to his former prowess is a signal for no little applause, including that which follows his opinion, graciously rendered, of Mr. Tunney—"a nice fellow and a better fighter than the public gives him credit for." If this seems faint praise, the same public is invited, by means of motion pictures, to see for itself what might have happened in Chicago had the old champion been the warrior who came back through the ropes to level Firpo with a malefic punch four years before. All of which may indicate that nothing is so financially healthy as a controversy which can never be settled.

Miss Ralston, before she appears on the stage, is slyly introduced by her accompanist as a blonde princess who will promptly steal your heart away. Although this event scarcely threatens to materialize, she pirouettes prettily about, while the accompanist utters through a microphone a song about a golden girl who is gone with the dawn. Miss Ralston then indulges in some clog dancing, a voluble "dramatic" sketch about a dance hall hostess, a dance creation of her own called "the Boardwalk" and the speech of thanks for a reception which has, of course, "made me very, very happy."

Ken Murray's dynamic clowning is, as it has been so many times before, the best act on the bill. The jauntiest of the vaudevillians, he returns with Helen and Milton Charleston to indulge in his now familiar but no less entertaining rough-house antics. With Foster, Fagan and Cox, a separate act on the current bill, but identified as former members of the Murray unit, he speeds the program toward its conclusion with jocular insanity and in general saves a day that would not otherwise have been so bright.

Billy and Elsa Newell are present in their always dependable comedy patter, and at least one of the Lime Trio is a contortionist worthy of the tradition. Ray, Ellis and La Rue are an adagio act, and Ford and Price bring matters to an end by strolling on a tightrope.

Frances Arms, in a song cycle, is the headliner for the week at Loew's State.

BENEFIT FOR NEGRO ACTORS

Florence Mills Theatrical Association to Be Sponsor.

The Florence Mills Theatrical Association will sponsor a benefit performance at the Casino Theatre next Sunday night in which many well-known white and negro players are expected to appear. The proceeds will go to a memorial fund to help purchase the home for negro performers which the association now occupies.

Jimmy Durante and Jack Osterman will be masters of ceremonies at the benefit. Among those announced to appear are Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees, Duke Ellington and band, Gertrude Lawrence, Frances Williams, Rose Perfect, Joe Frisco, Jack Osterman, Miller and Mack, Daniel Haynes, Glenn and Jenkins, Baby Cox, Buck and Bubbles, Hamtree Harrington and the revues and orchestras from several of the Harlem night clubs.

WAR DRAMA FOR HOBOKEN.

"The Blue and the Gray" to Open at the Rialto Dec. 23.

The next theatrical activity in Hoboken of Christopher Morley and Cleon Throckmorton will be "The Blue and the Gray or War Is Hell," a Civil War melodrama which is said to have been extensively revised by the producers. It will open during the week of Dec. 23 at the Old Rialto Theatre. The recent closings of "After Dark," which ran almost a year, and "The Shoestring Revue," which had only a brief engagement, have left Hoboken theatreless, in so far as the attractions of the Morley-Throckmorton group are concerned.

Cap and Bells to Give Shaw Play.

At what will be its first appearance in New York in two years, the Williams College dramatic club, Cap and Bells, will present Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion" at the Heckscher Theatre on Friday, Jan. 3. Gene Lockhart is the director of the production. The cast will be headed by Alan E. Baxter of Cleveland Heights, Ohio, and John D. Lucas of Mount Vernon, N. Y.

"Top Speed" Here Christmas Night.

"Top Speed," the Bolton-Kalmar-Ruby musical comedy, will open at Chanin's Forty-sixth Street Theatre on Christmas night. Heading the cast will be Lester Allen, Irene Delroy, who replaces Brenda Bond, and Harland Dixon. Miss Delroy and Mr. Dixon will enter the cast in Philadelphia tonight. "Top Speed" will be seen the week of Dec. 16 in Newark before beginning its Broadway engagement.

"The Candlelight" to Open.

"The Candlelight," an after-theatre entertainment which plans to feature brief, sophisticated sketches and playlets, will open late this month at 12 East Sixtieth Street. Charles Morton Bellak is sponsor for the project, which, according to announcement, will utilize both stage entertainers and stage material.

MANY ARTISTS AT BENEFIT.

Take Part in Concert for Advancement of Colored People.

Led by Duke Ellington and his Cotton Club Orchestra, many artists contributed to the benefit concert of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People at the Forrest Theatre before a near-capacity audience last night. Heywood Broun, as master of ceremonies, introduced performers in current Broadway shows, as well as night club entertainers and others, in a long program.

Among those who appeared were Bobbe Arnst, Clifton Webb, Libby Holman, Edward J. McNamara, Clayton Jackson and Durante, Margaret Wycherley, Helen Morgan, Charles Butterworth, Albert Carroll, Edith Wilson and Baby Cox.

Violet Vivian to Return to Stage.

Mrs. Charles Hopkins (Violet Vivian), wife of the producer and theatre manager, will return to the stage to appear in "Trevelyan's Ghost," the Dwight Taylor comedy which A. L. Erlanger and George C. Tyler are producing. Mrs. Hopkins has not acted since she appeared in her husband's production of "Treasure Island" more than a dozen years ago.

"Trevelyan's Ghost" will open in Philadelphia New Year's week for a fortnight's engagement before coming here.

DANCING TEACHERS MEET.

Adolph Newberger Demonstrates an Original Dance.

The New York Society Teachers of Dancing, Inc., held its annual guest meeting at the Hotel Astor yesterday morning. Adolph Newberger demonstrated an original dance set to the song "Try Dancing," which is also the title of the new slogan of the National Dancing Teachers' Association.

The president of the New York Society, A. J. Weber, demonstrated a fox trot; Miss Dorothy Paffendorf of Newburgh, a tap routine, "Cops on Beat"; Mrs. J. A. Stocker, a fox trot; Mrs. Elsa Hellich Kempe, a ballet arrangement, and Mrs. Clara I. Austin, ballroom steps and a baby dance number.

Concerts in Four City Hospitals.

Concerts for patients in four city hospitals will be given this week under the auspices of the Hospital Music Committee of the New York City Visiting Committee. This will mark the second week of the season's concerts provided by the committee to brighten the lot of the sick in municipal institutions. The concerts will be given in the tuberculosis wards of the Metropolitan Hospital on Welfare Island, the Coney Island Hospital, the Sea View Hospital and the Riverside Hospital. Mrs. Hugh Campbell Wallace 2d is in charge.

OUR EXPORTS LEAD THE WORLD IN VALUE

United Kingdom Was Second, and Germany Third in First Half of 1929.

BRITAIN LED IN IMPORTS

Total Trade of 52 Countries Increased From $30,280,000,000 to $31,358,300,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Exports of fifty-two countries, the aggregate trade of which represented 91 per cent of the commerce of the world, totaled $14,921,000,000 in the first six months of 1929, an increase of $515,000,000, or 3.6 per cent over the corresponding period of 1928, while the imports, amounting to $16,437,300,000, showed an increase of $530,000,000, or 3.7 per cent, according to a review by J. J. Kral of the Division of Statistical Research of the Department of Commerce, made public today.

International trade during the period, the report stated, was marked by a notable expansion of United States trade; by the increasing efforts of Europe to satisfy its own needs and to hold down imports, while at the same time expanding exports to overseas countries by lower prices on agricultural products and by larger sales of machinery and automotive vehicles and a smaller turnover in textiles.

In comparison with the first half of 1928 the trade in 1929 was larger in both volume and value. The rate of increase was somewhat higher than that shown for the calendar year 1928 in comparison with 1927.

United States Leads in Exports.

Of the exports for the first half of 1929 the share of the United States was $2,623,200,000. The United Kingdom was second with a total of $2,040,800,000, and Germany third with $1,859,600,000. France came next with $969,200,000, and Canada fifth with $589,700,000. Argentina led the South American countries with $507,700,000.

The United Kingdom led in imports, with $2,943,100,000; the United States was second with $2,238,400,000, Germany's imports were $1,624,800,000. Those of France $1,201,000,000, and those of Canada $664,400,400. Argentina's imports were $450,900,000.

"The increased sales of machinery, chiefly industrial and agricultural, bear testimony to the increasing efforts of producers in many countries to improve the process and lower the cost of production," the survey said.

"Ten of the principal countries—the United States, Canada, Germany, the United Kingdom, France, Switzerland, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Italy and Japan—increased their exports of machinery of all kinds from $962,505,000 for the first six months of 1928 to $401,606,000 in 1929, a gain of $119,008,000, or 17.4 per cent.

United States exports of machinery expanded from $230,780,000 to $305,-209,000, an increase of $65,459,000.

American Trade Expansion Noted.

"The figures indicate a remarkable expansion of United States trade in both exports and imports. Compared with the first half of 1928 our foreign trade in 1929 shows an increase of 10.5 per cent for exports and 6.6 per cent for imports, as against increases of only 2.2 and 2.7 per cent, respectively, for the other fifty-one countries.

"The twenty-five countries of Europe increased their exports 2.6 and their imports only 1.1 per cent. The remaining twenty-six countries, all outside the United States and Europe, show an increase of less than one-half of 1 per cent for exports, as against an increase of 6.7 per cent for imports. Their dependence an American and European supplies has evidently increased.

"Of all the countries listed, Germany shows the most striking reversal in the movement of foreign trade in the first half of 1929 as compared with 1928. Exports increased 2,403,000 metric tons in quantity and $167,000,000, or 12 per cent, in value; imports declined 1,571,000 tons in weight and $91,000,000, or 5.6 per cent, in value.

"British foreign trade for the first half of 1929 showed a slight reduction—less than 1 per cent—from the totals of 1928. Domestic exports increased $17,083,000, but the re-exports of imported foreign merchandise declined $35,697,000, chiefly through large reductions in re-exports of rubber, wool, coffee and cacao."

Kings Engineer Dies After Fall.

Martin Hanson, 60 years old, of 648 Eighty-eighth Street, Brooklyn, a stationary engineer, died in Cumberland Street Hospital, Brooklyn, yesterday, three hours after has was found unconscious in the hall of 137 Prince Street. The police said his skull must have been fractured in a fall.

HUNGARY PRESENTS GIFT TO CATHEDRAL

OLD GUARD AT CEREMONY

Four Members Salute as National Anthems Are Played—Bishop Manning Thanks Envoy.

A colorful service marked the presentation yesterday afternoon of a gold chalice and paten to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine by the Hungarian Government. Count Laszlo Szechenyi, Hungarian Minister to the United States, offered the communion vessels on behalf of his country and they were accepted for the cathedral by Bishop Manning.

After Count Szechenyi had delivered his address of presentation, four members of the Old Guard, who stood before the table on which lay the cup and the wafer dish, emblazoned with scriptural passages, came to a salute as "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played, followed by the Hungarian national anthem, by the Police Department Band.

"In presenting this gift to you on behalf of Hungary," said Count Szechenyi, "I am impressed by the contrast between the modesty of the gift offered and the magnificence of the house erected to the glory of God, in which you receive it. Infinitely more costly and precious offerings have been presented to you by nations great, prosperous and happy, but I doubt whether anything proferred has better typified the spirit of the donor than this simple cup, this emblem of sacrifice."

In accepting Hungary's gift, Bishop Manning, after commenting on the stupendous nature of the enterprise required to build the cathedral, said: "Beautiful and significant gifts have come to this cathedral gifts expressing friendship and good will and interest in this undertaking from many of the governments and nations of the world, from Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy, Japan, Czechoslovakia, the Kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, Denmark, Sweden and the Netherlands.

"I believe that no such collection of gifts from the different countries of the world exists anywhere, and they give to this great edifice the character of a temple of peace and good-will among men. Today this cathedral has received another most gracious gift from the Government of Hungary.

"We most deeply value and appreciate this gift. It will speak to us of the heroic history of the Hungarian people, of their great struggles and sacrifices for Christianity and for civilization, and of their noble and dauntless spirit typified in the life and deeds of Saint Ladislaus, and symbolized for all Americans by the name of Louis Kossuth. And we value this gift also because of its peculiarly sacred character."

COLORADO PRISON RIOT BLAMED ON 2 CONVICTS

Report of Governor's Investigators Also Says Guards Are Underpaid, Some 'Disloyal.'

DENVER, Col., Dec. 8 (AP).—The mutiny at the State Penitentiary Oct. 3, in which thirteen men were killed, was blamed on Danny Daniels and Jimmy Pardue, "two desperate criminals possessed of reckless courage, determined to escape or die in the attempt," in a majority report of the investigating commission appointed by Governor Adams. Both Daniels and Pardue died in the riot.

The report was signed by W. W. Grant Jr., chairman, and Henry McAllister Jr. The third member of the commission, Benjamin C. Hilliard, refused to sign and announced he would submit a minority report.

Underlying causes of the outbreak were listed in the report as misplacement of the penitentiary; such a prison, it was contended, should never be located in a city; inadequate housing, failure to segregate different classes of prisoners, two-man cells, out of date "death trap" towers on the walls and underpaid, inefficient and disloyal guards.

The guards, the report said, had "no systematic training or discipline, they are not drilled or instructed as a body for cooperation in case of emergency. There is much jealousy and lack of confidence among them. There are guards whose loyalty may be questioned."

Handling of the riot was treated in the report with the statement:

"There was no one in authority at any stage of the proceedings who was capable of analyzing the problem and reaching a sound conclusion."

COLUMBIA FRESHMEN BRIGHTEST IN 10 YEARS

Upper Fourth of Class Scored 91.5 in Thorndike Test, Against 89.6 Average Since 1922.

Higher rating in intelligence and placement tests has been attained by the present freshman class at Columbia College than by any entering class during the ten years preceding it, Assistant Dean Willet L. Eccles announced yesterday. Dean Eccles said that the improvement over previous classes noted in this respect was probably attributable to a more rigid process of selecting applicants for admission and to the "improved quality of the average applicant."

Dean Eccles made public figures applying only to the upper fourth of the entering class. This group, he said, attained an average of 91.5 out of a possible 120 in the Thorndike intelligence test. This average rating compared with an average of 88.4 for the same group of the 1920 entering class, and to a grand average of 89.6 for the same group of the entering classes from 1922 to 1929. Mr. Eccles estimated that the same group taken from all high school senior classes would show an average rating of 72, while the same group taken from other colleges' freshman classes showed an average of 85.

The placement tests indicate that approximately 2 per cent of the members of the class, in addition to those in the upper quarter in the ratings at Columbia, would have been in the upper quarter of their high school classes.

Shoots Himself Trying to Kill Dog.

Patrolman Frederick Bamberg, 22 years old, attached to Traffic C, accidentally shot himself in the fleshy part of the right thigh when he attempted to draw his revolver to shoot a frenzied police dog yesterday. The accident occurred in front of 2,550 Decatur Avenue, the Bronx, as Bamberg, standing on the running-board of a commandeered taxicab, came abreast of the maddened animal. Bamberg was taken to Fordham Hospital. The dog was later killed in front of 250 East Gun Hill Road by Patrolman Fox.

Six Die in Cuban Bus Crash.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Dec. 8.—Six persons were killed near Matanzas tonight when a delivery truck crashed with a heavily-loaded omnibus on the Central Highway. Many passengers in the omnibus were injured, all being rushed to Matanzas and Havana hospitals.

'FALSE SWEARING' LAW SOUGHT BY BANTON

He Wants an Act That Would Be Easier to Enforce Than Perjury Statute.

Curbing of perjury by creating a more easily enforceable law with materially lessened penalties is advocated by District Attorney Banton in an article in the forthcoming issue of The Panel, organ of the Association of Grand Jurors of New York County, which was made public yesterday.

Perjury is a felony with conviction carrying a maximum of twenty years in the penitentiary when committed during a trial for a felony and ten years in other cases, Mr. Banton points out. The necessary evidence often is difficult to obtain, he says, and, even when obtained, "juries sometimes, through compassion, will forget their oaths and acquit those guilty of a crime."

Mr. Banton's proposed bill, which was defeated once in the Legislature, but may be presented at the next, would create the crime of "false swearing," which would be punishable as a misdemeanor.

The creation of the new name for the offense, namely, "false swearing," would prevent the possibility of such a law being found unconstitutional, Mr. Banton writes. Under common law, he explains, perjury is known as an "infamous crime," and, as such, is prosecuted only on indictment and before a jury. States named by Mr. Banton as having overcome this technical difficulty through the creation of the crime of "false swearing" include Rhode Island, Connecticut and South Carolina.

British Veterans at Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 8.—A group of visiting British World War veterans, headed by Captain Sir E. Beachcroft Towse, vice president of the British Legion, went to Northwood Cemetery in Oak Lane today and laid a wreath at the foot of the Cross of Sacrifice, a monument to British war dead unveiled several months ago by Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador. Captain Towse and his companions left later for Washington to lay a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Bishop Anderson to Speak Here.

The Right Rev. Charles P. Anderson of Chicago, recently elected Presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, will deliver his first public address in the East in that capacity this evening at a mass meeting in the Brooklyn Academy of Music, arranged by Bishop Ernest M. Stires of the diocese of Long Island.

100 Billions of Life Insurance Will Be Taken During the Next Decade

THE total life insurance in force in America totals 100 Billions. It is estimated that another 100 Billions will be taken during the next decade. Personal life underwriting service of the highest character will be required in rolling up this great bulwark of protection.

HOOVER GETS BIBLE FROM SOCIETY HERE

President's Acceptance of Gift Announced at Celebration of Group's 120th Anniversary.

SPECIAL SERVICE CROWDED

Dr. Carter Says Organization Distributed Nearly 1,000,000 Bibles Here in Past Year.

The Rev. Dr. George William Carter, general secretary of the New York Bible Society, announced yesterday that the organization in celebration of its 120th anniversary, which was last Wednesday, had presented a Bible to President Hoover and that the volume had been accepted and acknowledged by the President.

Dr. Carter made the announcement in an address yesterday afternoon at a special service in observance of the anniversary of the society held under its auspices in Holy Trinity Lutheran Church, Central Park West and Sixty-fifth Street. The edifice was so crowded that camp stools were brought in.

"During the past week the New York Bible Society had the honor of presenting a specially engrossed copy of the Bible to President Hoover in commemoration of this 120th anniversary," said Dr. Carter.

"The President, in accepting the Volume, said: 'I am glad to receive it and do appreciate the kindness which prompted this thoughtful gift in commemoration of the society's 120th anniversary.'

"Mr. Hoover referred us to his message on the Bible which he gave at a National Federation meeting in Baltimore not long ago, one sentence of which is, 'As a nation we are indebted to the Book of Books for our national ideals and representative institutions: their preservation rests in adhering to its principles.'"

The gift to the President was a seal-lined Bible in a royal purple plush case. It was a King James version and it measured seven and one-half by five inches. The inscription read: "Presented to Herbert Hoover, President of the United States, as a token of esteem and confidence, in commemoration of the one hundred and twentieth anniversary of the New York Bible Society; December, 1929."

A feature of yesterday's service was the singing by the congregation, led by Holy Trinity's robed choir, of an anniversary hymn, "Thy Word Is Life," written for the occasion by the Rev. Dr. Ralph Welles Keeler, pastor of the Goodsell Memorial Methodist Church, Brooklyn. Dr. Keeler pronounced the benediction. Before the service there was an outdoor processional in Geneva gowns and divinity hoods of the clergy and the directors of the society, all of whom are laymen. These included:

The Rev. Dr. SAMUEL TREXLER, president of the United Lutheran Synod of New York.
The Rev. Dr. A. EDWIN KEIGWIN, pastor of the West End Presbyterian Church.
The Rev. Dr. PAUL SCHERER, pastor of the host church.

Among the clergymen in the congregation were:

U.S. Cross-Country Title Again Won by Moore; Dorchester Club Takes Team Crown

MOORE AGAIN WINS U. S. HARRIER TITLE

U. of Pittsburgh Athlete Retains Crown on Muddy Van Cortlandt Park Course.

LOWERS HIS 1928 TIME

Keeps Feet Well in Treacherous Going, Beating Heikkila by 250 Yards in 31:10.

DORCHESTER CLUB VICTOR

Takes Team Honors With 33 Points —Meadowbrook Club Second and Millrose A. A. Third.

By ARTHUR J. DALEY.

Plowing through the marshy flatlands and the treacherously slippery hills of Van Cortlandt Park with an ease that none of his competitors could emulate, Gus Moore, University of Pittsburgh sophomore, retained his title as national cross-country champion yesterday afternoon.

A year ago on a cool, crisp November day with firm underfooting and under ideal racing conditions Moore won in 31:18. Yesterday with spongy turf ever beneath his spiked shoes, with water hazards scattered all over the park and with the damp, dismal atmosphere enfolding him, the former Brooklyn harrier ace covered the six miles in 31:10, remarkable time in view of the conditions under which he ran.

No one was near him at the halfway mark and no one was near him at the finish. Nearly 250 yards behind the gold-shirted Brooklyn youth trudged little Eino Heikkila of the Dorchester Club, the New England champion, and then followed Eldridge Stevens, also of Dorchester; George Rapp of the Meadowbrook Club of Philadelphia and Willie Ruckel of the Millrose A. A.

Race Becomes a Pursuit.

It was a mere pursuit after the first mile and a half. For that distance the mud-bespattered pack hung on grimly to the lithe-limbed Moore, but as soon as he headed off the parade grounds and darted under the trestle, Moore broke loose from the trailers and was never headed thereafter. Last year, when the former P. S. A. L. mile and cross-country champion gained his first national title over the hills and dales that he knew so well as a schoolboy, he finished completely exhausted.

There was no exhaustion apparent about Moore yesterday. He looked fresh enough to run around the course once again and except for a generous coating of mud was none the worse for his arduous trip through the ooze. Once he slipped and fell in the hills, but even at that he sustained less damage than any of his competitors, who tumbled as often as five and six times.

Moore was fortunate in not having to meet Willie Ritola, five times winner of the title; Eino Purje of Finland, world's 2,000-meter recordholder, and Kingdon Proctor of the New York A. C., the 20-year-old youth who won the metropolitan harrier title last week. Ritola was entered but failed to appear, Purje failed to enter, and Proctor was slightly injured in an auto accident en route to the run.

Team Title Leaves City.

For the first time since 1920 the team championship went out of this city when the Dorchester Club of Dorchester, Mass., recent winner of the New England team title, repeated its triumph of nine years ago to romp off with club honors with the surprisingly low score of 33 points. The Meadowbrook Club of Philadelphia gained second honors, while the Millrose A. A., team victor for the past two seasons, annexed third place with 36 points. The Nativity Catholic Club of Philadelphia was fourth with 88 and the Brooklyn Harriers fifth and last with 102.

The Massachusetts club was well balanced and finished in the first seventeen. The 23-year-old Heikkila led the winning brigade and was followed by Eldridge Stevens, veteran star; William Zepp, the New England junior and senior ten-mile titleholder; Jimmy Hennigan, a member of the Olympic team and former Marathon ace, and Vincent Signor, 19-year-old Newton schoolboy.

The Massachusetts combination was up near the front of the parade at the start. Moore, away like a sprinter despite the mud, was a stride or two ahead as the field swung around the parade grounds, weaving in and out of the crowds that watched various football games.

Moore Leads at Mile.

Moore was five yards ahead of the rest as he completed the mile tour of the flats in the time of 4:48. Paul Kanaly of Belmont, Mass., who later dropped out; Phil Silverman of the Brooklyn Harriers, second a year ago; Tom Ottey of Meadowbrook, the Middle Atlantic champion, and Harold Pierce of the Millrose A. A. followed, closely bunched, in that order.

After one journey through the hills, the pack found the going too rigorous and steadily dropped behind, while Moore increased his lead with every stride. He was more than 150 yards ahead at three and a half miles in 18:36.

Navy and Union Jointly Put First in Lacrosse Ranking

Navy and Union were bracketed at the top as the leading lacrosse teams of the 1929 season in the annual ranking of the United States Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association announced yesterday. The records, schedules and observations of officials were considered in determining the positions of the leaders. The twenty-one schools in the association figured in the ranking.

The first ten places were awarded as follows:

1—Navy and Union	6—Stevens
2—Maryland	7—Syracuse
3—Rutgers	8—Johns Hopkins
4—Yale	9—Penn
5—Hobart	10—Harvard and St. Stephen's.

ENGLISH WILL PLAY 12 LACROSSE GAMES

DATES STILL UNSETTLED

Several Rhodes Scholars Among Invaders — U. S. Association Elects Officers.

Twelve games with American colleges and clubs will be played by the combined Oxford-Cambridge lacrosse team in this country next year, according to an announcement made yesterday by Professor Laurie Cox of Syracuse University at the annual meeting of the United States Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association.

Opponents and dates for the games were discussed in addition to the routine business of the association. More than a hundred coaches, managers and officials attended the session at the Pennsylvania Hotel.

Eight college rivals for the English team were announced, the tour opening against the Naval Academy. Other opponents will be Penn, Swarthmore, Harvard, Dartmouth, Syracuse, Hobart and Brown. The tour will close with a game in Brooklyn against the Crescent Athletic Club.

The coming invasion will be the fourth by the Oxford-Cambridge team, and there is added interest in this one because of the presence on the English squad of several Rhodes scholars. Included in the group will be McIntyre, Yale's captain of last year, and Al Cornswet, famous at Brown several years ago as a football player.

English Strive for Cup.

The English-American Lacrosse Cup will be at stake during the invasion, and if the English win the majority of their games they will be privileged to carry back the trophy which Syracuse won abroad several years ago.

Navy and Union were bracketed as the leading lacrosse teams in the association for the season of 1929 in the annual report of the ranking committee. The twenty-one members of the body were considered in the ranking.

Three new and powerful schools were admitted to membership—Princeton, St. John's College of Maryland and Western Maryland. St. John's had an undefeated team last season. The organization now has a membership of twenty-four, the old members being Dartmouth, Brown, N. Y. U., Swarthmore, City College, Colgate, Cornell, Lehigh, Penn State, Hobart, Stevens, Syracuse, Navy, Union, Maryland, Rutgers, Yale, Johns Hopkins, Penn, Harvard and St. Stephen's.

The association also reported an invitation from the Oshawa (Ont.) club to challenge for the Mann Cup, symbolic of the amateur championship of Canada. The matter will be considered next Spring when the identity of the leading American teams is better known.

To Number Players.

Another item of importance was the decision to number lacrosse players in the future, as is done in football and basketball. No important rules changes were made, although there was a lengthy discussion on the advisability of shortening the playing field to increase the speed of the game. It was also voted to lend encouragement and instruction to high school teams in the metropolitan district.

Lewis Jay Korn of Swarthmore was elected the new president and Victor Starzenski of Stevens was named as vice president. E. S. Barber of Harvard was re-elected secretary and treasurer. E. M. Stuart of Johns Hopkins and Irving Lydecker of Syracuse were elected to the executive committee to replace members whose terms had expired. Other members of the committee are Cyrus C. Miller, New York University, Charles E. Marsters, Harvard; R. D. Root, Yale, and Samuel J. Parke, Pennsylvania.

OREGON ELEVEN FETED.

Team That Lost to Florida Guest of Miami Organization.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Dec. 8 (AP).—The University of Oregon football team spent today as the guests of the Miami Beach civic organizations, recovering from their 20 to 6 defeat by the Florida Gators in Miami yesterday preparatory to starting their 4,000-mile return journey to Eugene, Ore.

Al Browne, who was taken to a hospital when he collapsed during the game, felt better today, Coach Mollwain said.

The Oregon coach lauded the brand of football played by the Florida team and added that he had no alibis to offer.

Jacob Schiff Centre Five Wins.

The Jacob Schiff Centre basketball team defeated the Temple Ansche-Chesed quintet, 41 to 31, in a metropolitan league game on the winner's court last night. The teams were tied at half time at 14-all.

Lone Star Team Handball Victor.

The Lone Star Boat Club four-wall handball team defeated the Ostend A. C. players, 12 to 0, on the latter's courts at Far Rockaway yesterday. It was the fourth victory for the Lone Star team.

PRINCETON AWARDS 78 SPORTS LETTERS

Twenty-seven on Football Team and Two Managers Named for Recognition.

WITTMER'S 6TH MAJOR "P"

Second Varsity Players, Cross-Country Men and Freshman Crews Also Honored.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 8.—Seventy-eight athletic awards have been granted to members of Princeton teams by the university undergraduate athletic committee, it was announced today.

Twenty-seven members of the football team and two managers were awarded their major sport "P's," while seven minor sport championship letters were awarded to five members and one manager of the championship cross-country team, and to next year's manager of the freshman football team.

Twenty-one "APA" insignias were awarded to men who played on the second varsity football team, which played against Yale, while eighteen "1932" class numerals with crossed oars were given to members of the two freshman crews of the Spring of 1929.

Six Get Third Football "P."

Six members of the football team received their third letter in that sport, Bill Barfield, Dave Lowry, Bill Moore, Bill Scarlett, Jack Whyte and Ed Wittmer being the ones so honored. Wittmer has received his sixth major "P" with the award of his letter this Fall, and also received a minor "P" in basketball previous to its being made a major sport.

Dick Vogt has won four major sport letters, two in baseball, one in football and one in basketball, and one minor sport "P" in basketball. The undergraduate athletic committee also announced that members of the track team who competed in the Oxford-Cambridge meet should be awarded their major sport "P."

It was further decided that a member of the wrestling team who wins first place in the intercollegiates shall be awarded his minor sport championship "P" and also a member of the wrestling team who wins his bout in the Yale meet and gains at least a second place in the intercollegiates. The same insignia shall be given to all members of a championship team.

Awards in Football.

William D. Barfield, Jacksonville, Fla.; Holmes Bennett, Cleveland; Frank D. Blakistone, Washington, D. C.; Alexander Bonnyman Jr., Knoxville, Tenn.; Julius Byles, Ardsley-on-Hudson, N. KEEN PACE IS HELD IN SCHOOL CONTESTS

With P. S. A. L. Basketball and Hockey Seasons Waning, Catholic Tourneys Come to Fore.

COMPETITIONS ARE CLOSE

Climax of Swim Meets on Dec. 21—Indoor Track Season Off to Auspicious Start.

Metropolitan scholastic Winter sports teams have settled down for a season of keen and spirited competition and the campaign gives promise of being the most active in history. Basketball, hockey and swimming have been going on for several weeks, but with the opening of the track season on Saturday, Winter sports activities got under way completely.

Although the P. S. A. L. hockey tournament is scheduled to wind up within the next two weeks and the P. S. A. L. basketball competition has passed the half-way mark, interest in those sports will not be lacking after the hockey and basketball finals are played.

Other Schools Carry On.

The Catholic High Schools A. A. basketball tourney started last week and will continue through February, and the C. H. S. A. A. hockey tournament is scheduled to open next Saturday and will not close until early in February, twenty-one games being slated by the six teams entered. La Salle Military Academy of Oakdale, L. I., is the defending champion.

The running of the twenty-seventh annual elementary school indoor track and field championships and of the silver jubilee twenty-fifth annual Stuyvesant High School interscholastic meet at the 102d Combat Engineers Armory on Saturday ushered in the interscholastic indoor track season.

In both events last year's winners came through with flying colors, Public School 9 of Brooklyn capturing the elementary laurels for the sixth straight season and New Utrecht High of Brooklyn continuing its long dominance in high school track circles that has extended over a period of more than five years, by decisively winning the team honors in the Stuyvesant meet.

Erasmus Strong in Hockey.

As the P. S. A. L. hockey season nears its close, Erasmus Hall is certain of being one of the principals in the play-off series for the championship, consisting of three games if necessary, the first of which is scheduled for Dec. 16.

Manual Training and Jamaica are still in the running for the right to oppose Erasmus in the battle for the title, and the outcome of this week's games may and may not decide the problem.

Jamaica is slated to play New Utrecht on Wednesday night, and a Jamaica victory will give the four-year defending champions a total of 11 points for their seven games. Manual must meet the undefeated and untied Erasmus Hall sextet on Friday night.

A Manual triumph will give the Blue and Gold first place in the final standing and put Manual and Erasmus in the play-off. A tie with Erasmus will also give Manual the right to enter the play-offs, but if Manual loses and Jamaica wins on Wednesday, the latter two will be deadlocked in the final standing with 11 points each, and a play-off between them will be necessary for the privilege of battling Erasmus in the championship play-off.

Textile Five in Lead.

Textile looms as the likely winner of the Manhattan P. S. A. L. basketball laurels, having won every one of its seven games to date and having only three contests to play. The 33-to-17 victory for Textile over the chief contender, Stuyvesant, Saturday night, virtually clinched the laurels.

Alexander Hamilton at present leads the race in the Brooklyn division, with Thomas Jefferson, the defending Brooklyn P. S. A. L. champion, Franklin K. Lane and New Utrecht in hot pursuit.

Theodore Roosevelt heads the Bronx P. S. A. L. quintets, with five victories and one defeat, with De Witt Clinton right behind with four triumphs and also one setback. Newtown, last year's Queens P. S. A. L. champion, occupies first place in that division with four victories in as many games. Bryant is second with only one defeat by Newtown blemishing its record for four league contests.

The semi-final games for the city P. S. A. L. championship are scheduled to be played on Jan. 4, with the Manhattan and Bronx winners clashing in one game and the Brooklyn and Queens victors meeting in the other. The winning quintets of these two games will play for the city crown at the 102d Combat Engineers Armory on Jan. 11.

Swimming Race Close.

The series of P. S. A. L. dual swimming meets is scheduled to close on Dec. 21 and that date is likely to provide the title-deciding encounter in the New York division. George Washington and Evander Childs, the two teams deadlocked for first place, each with seven triumphs and no defeats, will meet on that date in the George Washington pool, and if both come through their meets next Saturday as expected, first place in the final standing will be determined on Dec. 21. Erasmus Hall is out in front with seven straight victories in the Brooklyn section and is closely pressed by New Utrecht and Manual Training, each of which has lost only once in seven starts.

Two basketball games are on today's schedule, one of them a C. H. S. A. A. encounter in the Manhattan division. In that contest, Regis High will play New York Cathedral Prep on the latter's court. It will be the opening C. H. S. A. A. game for both. In the other game, a non-league affair, Columbia Grammar School's quintet will play Rhodes University Prep.

The next event on the interscholastic indoor track and field program is the Eastern District interscholastic meet to be held at the Thirteenth Regiment Armory next Saturday afternoon.

Staten Island Six Plays Tonight.

The second game in the newly organized Interstate Amateur Hockey League will be played tonight at the Brooklyn Ice Palace when the Staten Island Scorpions engage the Rutherford Canadians.

BOOTH'S GAINS SET NEW YALE RECORD

Totaled More Than 1,000 Yards During Football Season, Eli Statistics Show.

McLENNAN NEXT WITH 537

Dunn Takes 3d Honors in Carrying Ball—Greene's Team Recorded 2,165 Yards to Rivals' 994.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 8.—Albie Booth gained more than 1,000 yards during the past football season, establishing an individual record for a Yale back-field member in modern football.

The statistics, which were tonight announced, showed that Don McLennan totaled 537 yards and Kempton Dunn 347 yards, excellent performances for football backs against formidable teams. Ned Austen and Tommy Taylor, substitutes, netted 325 and 305 yards, respectively, while Bob Wilson, quarterback, made 227, and Herb Miller, halfback, secured 226.

Considering that Booth remained in the play at no time for an entire game, his record is regarded at Yale as little short of marvelous. From scrimmage plays, he made 630 yards in 146 rushes. He handled eighteen kicks and ran back 282 yards.

McLennan's performance of gaining 202 yards from scrimmage plays against Harvard was an unusual feat for a Yale back. Taylor's 85-yard run against Vermont secured the only touchdown from kick-off made by Yale. Harlan Ellis's 78-yard run in intercepting Longnecker's pass and racing for a touchdown against Dartmouth ranked next in a single run.

The statistics indicate that both of the games lost by Yale, the Georgia and Harvard contests, directly followed blocked punts. Captain Waldo Greene's feat of blocking a punt by Downes of Georgia, his recovery of Gibner's fumble against the Army, his block of Marstare's punt against Dartmouth and his recovery of fumbles by Roberts and Radics of Maryland created a new total at Yale in recent years in results of closely following the ball.

Captain Greene's team gained in scrimmages 2,165 yards to its opponents' 994 yards. Against Harvard, Yale's ground gaining easily exceeded its rival opponents' punts, which averaged 30 yards to 27.1 for Yale. Opponents completed thirty-five passes for 380 yards, against twenty-three for 332.

Le Champlevois, 13 to 1, Wins Maubourget Stakes at Paris

PARIS, Dec. 8 (AP).—Before one of the smallest crowds in the history of Auteuil racing, Le Champlevois, 3-year-old, belonging to Gustave Beauvais, won the Maubourget Stakes, a steeplechase of two miles and a quarter, from a field of ten starters today. The winner made all the running and rushed by the finish line five lengths in front of Bright Agreus, a 4-year-old, and Strelitz, a 2-year-old. None of the older horses finished near the money. The winner paid 13 to 1.

75 EVENTS LISTED ON ARMY SCHEDULES

West Point Athletic Program to Start Jan. 4 With Polo and Hockey Campaigns.

DATES SET FOR SIX SPORTS

Varsity and Plebe Teams to Meet 39 Colleges and 14 Prep and High Schools.

Schedules of six sports for United States Military Academy teams were released yesterday by Major P. B. Fleming, graduate manager of athletics.

Athletes at the institution will take part in a total of seventy-five events starting on Jan. 4, when the polo and hockey squads open their campaigns. More than 25 per cent of the student body will participate in athletics on varsity, scrub or plebe teams, the actual count being 314 cadets, the maximum permitted by the regulations.

Army varsity and plebe teams will meet representatives of thirty-nine colleges and fourteen prep and high schools in basketball, boxing, hockey, polo, swimming and wrestling, the schedules of which were released yesterday. Programs for two additional sports, fencing and gymnastics, have not yet been approved by the superintendent.

Among the institutions to be encountered in basketball are Columbia, Princeton, Harvard, Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh. A trip to Columbus to meet Ohio State University also appears on the varsity court list. Major Fleming states that the schedules arranged for 1930 are the most attractive ever prepared for the West Pointers.

MAGAI ON EAST'S TEAM.

Pennsylvania Guard to Play in Football Game Against West.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Dec. 8 (AP).—Walt Magai, guard and a star lineman at Pennsylvania for three seasons, today accepted an invitation to play with Andy Kerr's East eleven in the San Francisco Shriners' Hospital benefit game New Year's Day. Yesterday Tony Holm, first choice for fullback on The Associated Press all-American team, joined the East's ranks.

Kerr said today that he expected acceptances from three other outstanding Eastern players, but could not make known their identities until he heard further from them.

"We have plenty of back-field talent and we will have the line strength, too, before the end of the week," Kerr said. Kerr will leave for the West Saturday to join Dick Hanley, Northwestern coach, in the job of assembling the all-star party at Evanston.

SHORT HILLS TRIUMPHS.

Defeats Montclair A. C. Team, 4-3, in Class B Squash.

Special to The New York Times.

SHORT HILLS, N. J., Dec. 8.—The Montclair Athletic Club team bowed to the Short Hills Club, 4 to 3, in a Class B squash tennis match on the winner's court today. Ed Van Vechten of the victors conquered R. E. Callahan, 18—15, 15—8, in one of the outstanding matches.

The summaries:

Tutts, Montclair, defeated Ryan, 15—4, 15—6; Van Vechten, Short Hills, defeated Callahan, 18—15, 15—8; Montgomery, Short Hills, defeated Bowers, 15—8, 15—7; Short Hills, defeated Lambert, 8—15, 15—8, 15—12; Wimpenny, Montclair A. C., defeated Marckwald, 15—8, 15—11; Harvey, Short Hills, defeated Mabry, 15—13, 15—8; Watkins, Montclair, defeated Greer, 15—11, 17—14.

NEW YORKERS WIN LOCKETT TROPHY

Team Captures Squash Racquets Intercity Honors Again by Beating Boston, 4-3.

POOL PLAYS BRILLIANTLY

Champion Defeats Baker, 15-8, 15-8, 15-9—Rawlins Turns Back Rice.

By ALLISON DANZIG.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 8.—Captain A. E. Ellis and the New York squash racquets team tonight started home with the Lockett Trophy. For the second successive year the metropolitan players captured the intercity honors today when they followed up their 4-3 victory of yesterday over Philadelphia by defeating Boston by the same score on the courts of the Harvard Club.

After the engagement between New York and Boston, the latter team met Philadelphia and won by the margin of 5 to 2 but the match had no bearing on the outcome of the round-robin series. Had each club scored a victory, the winner of the trophy would have been decided by the number of individual matches won, it was explained by Arthur H. Lockett of New York, donor of the trophy, who was present.

This was the fifth year of the intercity competitions and New York and Philadelphia have both won twice and Boston once. Had the Philadelphians come through, they would have gained permanent possession of the trophy. Next year the matches will be held on their own courts.

Boston Makes Close Fight.

J. Lawrence Pool 2d, national champion; Herbert N. Rawlins Jr., 1928 titleholder; George Dobevoise and Philip K. Keenan turned in victories for New York, while W. Palmer Dixon, Lee Norris and Lathrop Haskins met with defeat. Although Boston made a close fight for the honors, the defending team clinched victory in the first five matches played, winning four of them.

Pool, seeking to redeem himself for his defeat yesterday at the hands of Neil Sullivan, came through in brilliant style in his match with Myles P. Baker, former national champion, winning in three successive games at 15—3, 15—8, 15—9. The champion had too much speed for his opponent and never slackened pace for a moment.

The most impressive exhibition of the two days of play was turned in by Rawlins in defeating William H. Rice Jr. Rice has come rapidly to the front this year with victories over Baker, and there were many here who regarded him as an even favorite against Rawlins. But the Bostonian's game was made to order for the clever drop shots of the metropolitan champion and lacked the necessary decisiveness.

Rawlins's Play Brilliant.

Rawlins won in summary fashion at 15—11, 15—5, 15—10, with an exhibition of almost perfect control and mastery of the ball, mixing up his game beautifully and running his opponent ragged. Harry F. Cowles, the Harvard coach who taught most of the Boston and New York players as undergraduates, was in the gallery and declared that he had seldom seen the New Yorker put up so brilliant an exhibition.

The surprise of the day was the defeat of Dixon by Ralph Stuart in five games at 12—15, 15—12, 7—15, 18—16, 15—13. Dixon had made so strong an impression in his victory over C. Sewall Clark of Philadelphia that he was the decided favorite to win.

For the greater part of the match there did not seem to be much question of Dixon's winning, and after he had taken the third game to lead at 2—1 he appeared to have the match in hand. Stuart was fading badly, it seemed, and apparently had nothing left in reserve physically, for Dixon was chasing him unmercifully with an attack of consummate craft and variety.

Stuart Comes From Behind.

Apparently Dixon himself thought his work was done, for he failed to force matters in the fourth game. Stuart came from behind at 9—12 to pull out that game by a narrow margin, playing beautifully to the corners and using the drop shot and covering court unflaggingly.

His success in winning that game gave the Bostonian a new lease on life and the final chapter saw him playing on his nerve and hitting harder than he had at any other time in the match. Dixon led at 4—0 in this game, but Stuart overhauled him and then outsteadied Dixon to come through by a bare margin of 2 points.

Debevoise seldom has played prettier squash than he did in defeating Tom Jansen in three games at 15—11, 15—11, 15—9. The New York Harvard Club representative couldn't miss a thing and had his shots working like a charm.

Keenan Sews Up Series.

It fell to Keenan to sew up the series, and he did it in brilliant style in the fifth game of his match with Francis Hill. Trailing two games to one, the Montclair A. C. star rallied to take the next two, putting up a beautiful display of drop shots in the final chapter.

Haskins yielded to Paul B. Watson Jr. in the fifth game, after sustaining a cut at the corner of his right eye in the fourth chapter, and William F. Howe Jr. vanquished Norris in five games.

Sullivan emerged from the Round Robin with a major portion of the individual honors. In the match which climaxed the series this evening the Philadelphian followed up his conquest of Pool by defeating Baker in a four-game engagement.

THE SUMMARIES.

New York 4, Boston 3.

J. Lawrence Pool 2d, New York, defeated Myles P. Baker, 15—3, 15—8, 15—9; Herbert N. Rawlins Jr., New York, defeated William H. Rice Jr., 15—11, 15—5, 15—10; George Debevoise, New York, defeated Tom Jansen, 15—11, 15—11, 15—9; Ralph Stuart, Boston, defeated W. Palmer Dixon, 15—12, 9—15, 15—12, 15—13; Philip K. Keenan, New York, defeated Francis Hill, 15—12, 15—11, 11—15, 12—15, 15—12; Lee Norris, New York, defeated William F. Howe Jr., Boston, defeated Lee Norris, 15—12, 15—7, 12—15, 15—13, 15—8; Paul B. Watson Jr., Boston, defeated Lathrop Haskins, 15—10, 15—13, 12—15, 15—13.

Boston 5, Philadelphia 2.

Neil Sullivan, Philadelphia, defeated Baker, 15—13, 15—12, 15—9; Rice, Boston, defeated J. De V. Keefe, 15—11, 12—15, 15—10, 15—12; Jansen, defeated E. R. Collins, 15—12, 15—10; Stuart, Boston, defeated C. S. Clark, 15—11, 12—7, 12—15, 15—11; John Haynes, Philadelphia, defeated Hill, 15—17, 15—12, 17—12, 15—10; Howe, Boston, defeated S. P. Clark, 15—13, 15—10, 11—15, 15—12; Watson, Boston, defeated E. C. Sandy, 15—13, 15—11, 15—12.

GIANTS TURN BACK FRANKFORD, 31 TO 0

FRIEDMAN, HAGERTY EXCEL

Latter Scores on 20-Yard Run After Taking Pass From Plansky—Losers Brace in 3d Period.

By JOSEPH C. NICHOLS.

Benny Friedman and Jack Hagerty led the New York Football Giants to a 31-to-0 triumph over the Philadelphia Yellow Jackets at the Polo Grounds yesterday. A crowd of 20,000 witnessed the game and saw the New Yorkers send their Pennsylvania rivals down to defeat for the second time in two days. The contest was the final home game of the season for the Giants, who hold second place in the National Professional Football League.

The Giants had little difficulty sending the Yellow Jackets back, despite the fact that playing conditions were far from ideal. The field was slippery and muddy, and the ball water-soaked, but this did not deter Friedman from executing a number of fine passes that opened the way for scores. Nor did it interfere with Hagerty's superb open field running.

Yellow Jackets Start Strongly.

The Yellow Jackets made a strong start, and in the first few minutes of play had the ball on the Giants' 9-yard line, only to lose it on downs. From that point on, New York had complete control of the game, and went on to score at least once in three of the four periods.

Friedman opened the way for the Giants' first touchdown when he intercepted a Yellow Jacket pass late in the opening period on his own 30-yard line, and ran to the visitors' 28-yard line. A steady march through the line, with a pass from Friedman to Ray Flaherty, brought the ball to the Philadelphia 2-yard strip, from where Jerry Snyder took it over.

In the second period the Giant attack took on power and accounted for three more touchdowns. After Bill Kelly of the Yellow Jackets fumbled on his own 35-yard line, the Giants advanced steadily through the medium of three forward passes, and scored on a fourth, which Flaherty snared from high above his head and downed behind the goal.

Hagerty Gets Touchdown.

Hagerty scored the next touchdown when he took a long forward from Tony Plansky and ran twenty yards through the visiting team for a tally, twisting and dodging in a fine exhibition of open-field running. The third score of the period followed when Plansky hurled another long throw, this time to Len Sedbrooke, who dashed eighteen yards to the goal.

The Yellow Jackets braced in the third period and held their rivals scoreless, although Plansky made one effort to count when he essayed a drop kick from the 33-yard line. The kick went wide.

The final quarter saw the Philadelphia team try numerous passes in an effort to cross the Giants' goal at least once. The home defense was alert and smothered the throws capably. With a little time remaining, the Giants garnered another touchdown when Sedbrooke plunged through from the 2-yard line for a touchdown after Flaherty carried the ball there from the Yellow Jackets' 30-yard line on a pass from Friedman.

NEVERS'S FORWARDS BEAT ORANGE, 26-0

His Aerials Account for First Two Cardinal Touchdowns—Chicago Line Stands Out.

Special to The New York Times.

EAST ORANGE, N. J., Dec. 8.—Orange suffered its most decisive defeat of the season at the hands of the Chicago Cardinals in a National Football League contest today, the Chicagoans winning, 26 to 0. The Chicago line stopped the Orange backs completely, and the visitors' back-field cast, featuring the forward-passing combination of Ernie Nevers to Mickey MacDonnell, ran circles around the Orange team.

After being held on the Orange 10-yard line in the first quarter, Chicago did most of its scoring in the second period. A slow pass, Nevers to MacDonnell, started the latter on a dash from the Chicago 38-yard line to the Orange 20-yard line. The same pair added 15 yards more on the next play and, after two line plunges had been stopped, functioned again to cross the line.

Nevers completed a pass to Rooney for the second touchdown, and Duke Slater intercepted an Orange aerial and ran for the tally. After being stopped in the third period, Nevers plunged through centre for the fourth and last touchdown in the final period.

SAYS BIG BUSINESS CAUSED IOWA BAN

SEES VENALITY IN OTHERS

Declares Professionalism Is Overshadowed by the Administrative Methods Used by Some Schools.

Special to The New York Times.

IOWA CITY, Iowa, Dec. 8.—Stalking in the background of the Western Conference scene, from which the University of Iowa made a spectacular exit Saturday, is the sinister figure of big business, charged Dean G. O. Williams, head of the Hawkeye Athletic Board, in a statement today. A vigorous assertion that "purity of athletics will not in all cases be the primary consideration" in the filling of their schedules by the other Big Ten schools, featured the declaration by the man who pleaded Iowa's cause in vain before the stormy conference session Friday and Saturday.

"The action of the conference was naturally a deep disappointment to me," Dean Williams said in his statement. "The conference was unwilling to accept the view that the penalty already inflicted on Iowa was sufficient to atone for their irregularities in past administration of the athletic department. It was their view that blood must be let in order to cure the offender, and Iowa had not let blood.

Would Not Do Injustice.

"It was Iowa's position that we should not do injustice to players who had been caught in the meshes of past mal-administration, nor could Iowa admit the right of an outside body to dictate who should serve on the staff of its athletic department or who should compose its board in control of athletics.

"Iowa will continue to exercise scrupulous care in certifying the members of its teams, regardless of who may be opponents in the field. Negotiations looking to the solution of these opponents are in the province of the athletic department and will be properly cared for in due time. Indeed, the selection of games to fill Iowa's schedule is of less significance in the educational world than is the choice of games to fill some of the schedules of other conference universities.

Color Lent to Suspicion.

"The implacable position displayed by the athletic departments of certain institutions lends color to the often-expressed suspicion that a desire for larger gate receipts was a factor in their attitude.

"While I would not in any degree condone breaches of amateurism in intercollegiate athletics, yet professionalism at its worst among bona fide students on college teams sinks into pale insignificance as a blotch on the educational page in comparison with the venality of some of the institutions themselves in the administration of their athletics."

IOWA DISAPPOINTED BY BIG TEN ACTION

Continuance of Ban Draws Bitter Comment—School's Future Course Undecided.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8 (AP).—The University of Iowa is a free lance as far as athletic competition in the Big Ten is concerned, but the Iowa delegates, Dean G. O. Williams, who made the plea for his school, and Athletic Director E. H. Lauer, were greatly disappointed at the failure of the committee to consider the petition favorably. Lauer was somewhat bitter and turned to Scripture to explain Iowa's stand.

In a formal statement Lauer said: "At the June meeting (the occasion upon which Iowa's first plea for reinstatement was turned down) the chairman of the Faculty Conference Committee quoted a scriptural passage which had to do with the necessity of good works as a sign of repentance. Iowa took this seriously and good work has been done. Some things we could not do, and it now is Iowa's turn at scriptural citation: 'What does it profit a man though he gain the whole world, if he lose his soul?'"

Lauer could not say what Iowa will do. With a new football stadium for which it must pay, attractive games must be obtained. Burton Ingwersen, head football coach, said it might "be a lean year," but added he had answered many telephone calls and telegrams from "a lot o' good schools" concerning games and believed that Iowa would have first-class competition by next season.

Iowa officials were not decided whether they would again petition for reinstatement and representatives of other schools were silent on the whole question.

M'EVER OF TENNESSEE IS FIRST IN SCORING

Gains Top in National List, With Hinkle of Bucknell Next—Tie at 21 Touchdowns.

First place in the race for national football scoring honors among the major teams is held today by McEver of Tennessee, who has passed Clark Hinkle of Bucknell. Both these men have closed their seasons, and so the scoring honors for the year go to the Tennessee ace, unless post-season games are to be counted, which hardly is likely.

McEver has 130 points, just two more than Hinkle. The Tennessee star scored 33 points when his team routed South Carolina by 54 to 0 at Knoxville last Saturday. This was one of the high-scoring feats of the season, but was not the best. Ringle of Gallaudet having made 50 tallies in one game and Hinkle having rolled up 50 points in the contest in which Bucknell trampled Dickinson by 78 to 0.

There is one important fact, however, in the scoring between Hinkle and McEver, and that is that the Tennessee performer took part in nine games, while Hinkle played in ten. The top score for the year, however, does not come close to the total turned in at the close of the 1928 campaign, when Ken Strong of New York University ran away with the honors, having 160 points to his credit.

Hinkle and McEver scored the same number of touchdowns for the season, each carrying the ball across the enemy line 21 times, but the Tennessee man booted four extra points to two by Hinkle. Neither scored a field goal.

FT. HAMILTON IN 0-0 TIE.

1,000 See Game With West Point Field Artillery Eleven.

The Fort Hamilton football team played a scoreless tie with the West Point Field Artillery yesterday before 1,000 at the Fort Hamilton reservation. Both elevens had opportunities to score during the closing quarter, the ball resting on the home outfit's 20-yard strip only to be lost through downs. Toward the close of this session Fort Hamilton was stopped after a march advanced the ball to its opponents' 25-yard line.

The line-up:

Fort Hamilton (0).		Field Artillery (0).
Bired	L.E.	Evans
Morgan	L.T.	Rodout
Bruce	L.G.	Pensare

Substitutions—Hamilton: Trexler for F. Perry, Lacey for Brown, Funderburk for Trexler. Field Artillery: Wells for Evans, Ahiney for Murithew, Neweth for Temararia.

HARVARD STUDENTS PLAN RUGBY TEAM

Yale Will Be Challenged to Play Game in Spring if Sufficient Interest Develops.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 8.—The current revival of Rugby football at Yale has resulted in such a growth of interest at Harvard in the English form of the sport that already there is talk at Cambridge of the development of a Crimson team to meet Yale in the Spring.

Although the Harvard Athletic Association, governing board of Harvard sports, has taken no official interest in the development of a Rugby team, informal interest among the students has brought about the likelihood of the development of a school team.

T. L. Jarman, an English student now holding a Davison scholarship at Harvard following three years at Oxford, has, by mutual consent, been given the leadership in the proposed formation of a team.

If sufficient interest is manifested, definite plans are to be formulated and a challenge issued to the Eli players, who already are practicing.

ROOSEVELT E. H. S. WINS FOOTBALL GAME, 20-6

Defeats Monroe Evening High, Kelly, Jacoby and Bakowitz Scoring Touchdowns.

The Theodore Roosevelt Evening H. S. football team defeated the James Monroe Evening H. S. team, 20—6, at Monroe Field yesterday. Roosevelt Evening showed its superiority in the first few minutes of the game when it scored a touchdown on Kelly's 20-yard run on an off-tackle play. McCabe rushed over for the extra point. In the second period, Jacoby intercepted a pass and ran 25 yards for a touchdown. He also scored the extra point on a pass from McCabe.

Midway in the last period Monroe Evening made two successive first downs from Roosevelt Evening's 20-yard line and scored a touchdown on Lourie's 8-yard end run. In the last few seconds of the game, McCabe threw a 40-yard pass to Bakowitz, who ran 10 yards to score the last touchdown for Roosevelt Evening High School. The game closed the season for evening high schools.

The line-up:

SOUTH KEPT EDGE OVER COAST TEAMS

Widened Margin Over Far West Elevens by Florida's Defeat of Oregon.

TENNESSEE SHOWED POWER

Outclassed South Carolina in 54-0 Triumph—Fans Look to Charity Game Jan. 1.

ATLANTA, Dec. 8 (AP).—The most exciting football campaign in the brief history of the Southern Conference is ended and nothing remains for the fans except the charity game between picked teams from the Northern and Southern ends of the Conference here New Year's Day.

While Tulane tucked the title safely away teh days ago, interest remained at a high pitch right on down to the finish with the intersectional tilt between Oregon and Florida and the annual duel between Georgia and Georgia Tech headlining the final day's program.

The South went three up on the Pacific Coast in the intersectional warfare when Florida won handily from the Oregon eleven, 20 to 6.

Heat Bothered Visitors.

The balmy Florida temperatures so bothered the Westerners that most of them played the last half minus their jerseys. Toward the late part of the afternoon a cooling breeze came in from the ocean and made it possible for the Webfoots to push over a touchdown and stave off a shut-out.

While all this was going on, 20,000 people huddled in the rain at Athens to see Georgia's Bulldogs double the score on Georgia Tech and win by a 12-6 count. Tech fought hard all the way, but what was left of the 1928 juggernaut was not able to muster enough punch to turn back the rolling sophomores of Coach Harry Mehre.

North Carolina won its seventh Conference game by routing Duke's Blue Devils 48-7 in the feature game of the Northern end of the Conference. The fleet backs of the Tar Heels ran wild to roll up 48 points, making their total for the season 346, which makes them high scorers for the South this season.

Tennessee Too Strong.

Hackman and McEver scampered hither and yon to give Tennessee a crushing 54-0 triumph over the game but badly outclassed University of South Carolina.

Between them the "touchdown twins" scored eight times, McEver registering five and Hackman three. McEver added 33 points to his season's total, which gives him the national lead in scoring.

Maryland was the only other Conference team scheduled and the old liners took a 12-0 licking from their old rival, Western Maryland, which finished the season without a defeat.

In the one Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association contest, Louisiana Poly won its first game of the season by defeating Southwestern Louisiana, 24-7. Centenary nosed out Loyola of New Orleans, 6-0, and William and Mary won from Hampden-Sidney, 20-6, in the remaining games.

Amateur Billiards Tonight.

The national amateur Class C 18.2 balkline billiard championship will get under way tonight with a field of more than thirty players competing in two divisions at Lawler Brothers' Manhattan and Brooklyn Academies, Claude Lewis is the defending champion.

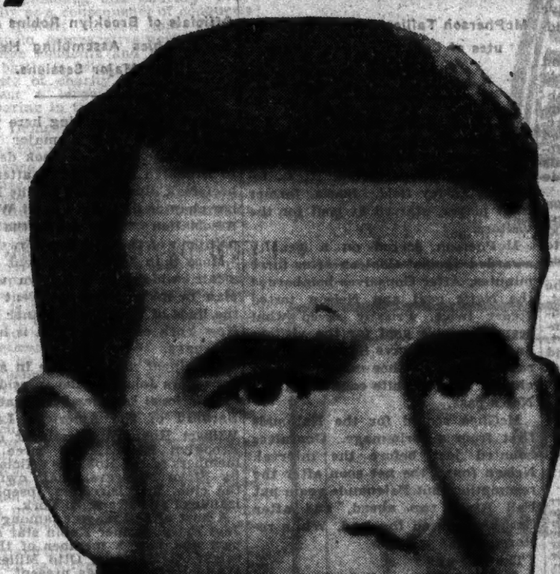
"WIVES! Let's talk about your husbands' cigars"



"Now he may smoke a cigar as safe as certified food," says

Alfred W. McCann

famous pure food expert, long active in crusades for pure foods and sanitary factories.

"You've heard me crusade for clean foods and sanitary factories. Now let's get down to brass tacks about cigars.

"In these modern days of pasteurized milk and certified foods, the old-fashioned cigar is a disgrace. Real danger faces the man who smokes a spit-tipped cigar. That's why I'm so militant in my certification of Cremo.

"And how comforting it is to smoke a Cremo ... to actually know that it is sanitary and safe.

"Every tobacco leaf entering the Cremo factory is scientifically treated by U. S. Government approved methods. Every sanitary precaution known to science is taken to safeguard its purity along each step of the way.

"Cremo Cigars are folded, wrapped and tipped by amazing inventions without the menace of spit ... in factories that are models of cleanliness ... air-flooded, sun-baked, spotlessly clean!

"This Cremo purity is sealed ... in separate sanitary foil wrappers. Thus the method of manufacture used by Cremo insures a cigar that aims to give the same standard as found in certified milk."

Here's a suggestion deliberately made with confidence, which you smokers of imported cigars will appreciate: Try a Certified Cremo. You will recognize the superiority of Certified Cremo which starts with the choicest and tenderest leaves, ripe and mellow, and continues in goodness through a slow, expensive maturing and mellowing process ... and topped off with a wrapper that is really fine! For 5 cents you get the delight of a high priced cigar for Certified Cremo contains no scrap—no floor sweepings—all long filler—all fresh, tender leaves. Over $7,000,000 was spent in perfecting the method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo that insures uniformly fine, clean cigars. Foil-wrapped ... sanitary ... crush-proof ... the kind of cigar the late Vice-President Marshall must have had in mind when he said: "What this country needs most is a good 5-cent cigar."

Do you remember the old, filthy shop where the man in the window rolled the leaves with dirty fingers ... and spit on the ends? What a far cry this is from the modern method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo.

I certify Cremo sanitary and clean. Alfred W. McCann

Soccer Giants Beaten by Hakoah, 3-1; Wanderers Triumph, 3-2

HAKOAH TURNS BACK GIANTS' ELEVEN, 3-1

GET JUMP AT THE START

Grenfeld, Gruenwald and Neufeld Score for Victors Within First 10 Minutes of the Contest.

The New York Hakoah soccer players scored a brilliant 3 to 1 victory over the New York Giants in an Atlantic Coast League game at Starlight Park yesterday before a crowd of nearly 5,000 fans.

The national champions uncorked a withering pace directly as the battle opened, which entirely swept the Giants off their feet. Three goals were rammed across before ten minutes had gone by Grenfeld, Gruenwald and Neufeld, and the Giants never could recover from this smashing shock.

Moorhouse cut down the margin just before the final whistle with a shot from the corner flag which had Fischer beaten all the way and saved the Giants from a shutout.

Right from the kickoff Hakoah rushed the Giants and a play, Gruenwald to Neufeld to Grenfeld enabled the last named to easily notch the first goal. At five minutes Gruenwald went through on his own account to make the score 2 to 0 and a few minutes later Neufeld had the crowd in an uproar as he tore through to whip in a pile driving shot which Jock Brown failed to see.

With three goals against them, the Giants staged rally after rally, but all to no purpose against the superb defense of Hakoah.

At half time the national champions led by 3 to 0 and it was that way up to the final minute, when Moorhouse, who was moved to forward, sent in a crasher from almost the left corner flag which flew past Fischer and curled its way into the top right hand corner of the net.

Previous to this success the Giants missed converting a penalty when Ballantyne drove the ball yards wide.

In a preliminary game the Hakoah amateurs defeated the Vikings, 6 to 2, in a Metropolitan League game.

The line-up:

Giants (1).		N. Y. Hakoah (2).

CRESCENT A. C. WINS IN CUP SOCCER, 3-2

Beats First Germans of New York in National Amateur Play—Clan MacDonald Victor.

Playing aggressively throughout and shooting the deciding goal in the last few minutes of play, the soccer players of the Crescent Athletic Club, leaders in the Field Club League, yesterday gained a notable victory over the First Germans of New York in the first round of national amateur cup competition of the United States Football Association at Suydam Oval in Brooklyn. The Brooklyn clubmen won by 3 to 2 after first establishing a 2-0 lead at half time. The First Germans fought back energetically in the second period and succeeded in coming up level, only to lose in the end.

Aero A. C. Loses, 10-1.

The Clan MacDonald soccer team of Brooklyn defeated the Aero A. C. of College Point, 10 to 1, at Payne Oval, Astoria, yesterday in a first-round game of the United States Football Association national amateur cup competition.

The winners scored first, getting a goal in the first five minutes. G. Wier, outside right of the Aero A. C., soon evened matters by scoring a goal, but thereafter the Clan MacDonald attack started to function in earnest, the result being that the victors tallied nine more times and at the same time held the opposition scoreless.

The line-up:

A., 21—1, 21—1, and Mike Schmookler of the Trinity Club won from his brother, Saul, by default.

WANDERERS DEFEAT PAWTUCKET, 3 TO 2

BEST AND HARVEY COUNT

Brilliant work on the part of Janos Nehadoma, centre forward, aided the Brooklyn Wanderers to their second victory in the intercity circuit of the new Atlantic Coast Soccer League at the expense of Pawtucket before 2,500 fans at Hawthorne Field, Brooklyn, yesterday, 3 goals to 2.

Nehadoma accounted for all of the home team's tallies in the first period. At half time the Wanderers were leading, 3 to 0, but were unable to score again.

The second half was all in favor of Pawtucket, which made a brave attempt to overcome the heavy handicap. Best and Harvey of Pawtucket were credited with a goal a piece. Considering the recent snowfall, the field was in good condition and gave the players little of the usual mid-winter trouble.

Getting the ball on the rebound after Braun, from right, had tested Kerr, the Pawtucket goalie, Nehadoma shot the first goal in ten minutes. The speedy Brooklyn centre repeated midway in the first period after getting around Tate. Nehadoma's third goal was the result of his run down the right wing. Each side had two corners up to half time.

The Wanderers gained a corner on the left upon resumption in the second half. Laszlo, Brooklyn left back, was hurt in a mix-up. He tried to continue, but shortly afterward was relieved by Mitchell.

A misunderstanding among the Brooklyn defenders enabled Best, Pawtucket centre, to shoot the visitors' first goal after a lively scrimmage eight minutes after the restart.

As a reward of their strenuous and continuous efforts the Pawtucket forwards made good a second time after thirty minutes of play. Smith, Brooklyn's goalie, had repelled Best in a difficult situation, in which he was drawn out. At that critical moment Harvey sent across a scorching drive that whistled into the net.

The line-up:

Wanderers (3).		Pawtucket (2).
Smith	G.	Kerr
McAdam	F.B.	Tate
Lessio	F.B.	McArthur
Brown	R.	McAvoy
Maguire	C.	Perry
Kovacsi	L.	Doyle
Reis	O.R.	Harvey
Monaz	I.R.	Aspen
Nehadoma	C.	Best
Enterkin	I.L.	Fleming
Ule	O.L.	McKechnie

Goals—Nehadoma 3, Best, Harvey.

Substitutions—Mitchell for Laszlo, Martin for McAvoy.

Time of halves—45 minutes.

FALCARO TOPS SMITH; BOWLS 231 AVERAGE

Joe Falcaro, local challenger for the world's championship, won his 30-game bowling match with Jimmy Smith, noted veteran, by taking the final two blocks in brilliant fashion at Dwyer's Broadway Alleys yesterday. Falcaro finished with a grand total of 6,949 pins to 6,440 for Smith, a difference of 509 pins. Falcaro's average was 231 19-30 per game and Smith's 214 20-30.

Falcaro won in the afternoon, 2,342 to 2,274, thereby increasing his lead in the match to 344 pins. In the final block last night Falcaro, rolling ten straight double centuries, registered 2,333 in the ten games, and Smith's total was 2,172. Falcaro's high game of 279 was the highlight of the final block. He rolled 258 and 253, respectively, in the third and fourth games, and bowled his high game score in the seventh.

In the afternoon Smith, who was world's champion years ago, rolled ten straight double centuries, six times going over the 250 mark. Falcaro, who begins his match with Joe Scribner, world's champion, in Detroit Saturday, exceeded 230 seven times, his top game being 279.

The scores:

FIRST BLOCK.

FALL RIVER BEATS NATIONALS, 5 TO 3

Sousa, New York Player, Stars Against Former Mates at Tiverton, R. I.

HOME TEAM SCORES EARLY

McPherson Tallies After Three Minutes of Contest Played on an Icy Field.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Dec. 8.—Fall River defeated the New York Nationals 5 to 3 in a soccer game at Mark Stadium, Tiverton, R. I., today on an icy field. Sousa, former local player, starred at goal for the visitors.

McPherson scored on a penalty awarded against Chalton after three minutes. After Gonsalves bombarded the Nat's goal and Nelson tested Reder twice, Priestly saved what seemed a sure goal for the visitors and Ballantyne gave Sousa two hard saves before McGhee missed an easy chance. Then White counted on McNab's pass.

McGhee scored for the Nationals first from a scrimmage. Gonsalves counted just before the interval. Nelson found the net soon after the resumption, but Patenaude again put Fall River two ahead, and after Carlson reduced the lead, White restored it.

The line-up:

Fall River (5).		Nationals (3).
Reder	G.	Sousa
McGill	R.B.	Warden
R. McAuley	L.B.	Donald
McPherson	R.	Wegner
Priestly	C.H.	Chalton
Ballantyne	L.H.	Martyn
McNab	O.R.	Gallagher
Gonsalves	I.R.	Slaven
Patenaude	C.	Nelson
Nilsen	I.L.	Carlson
White	O.L.	McGhee

Goals—McPherson (penalty), White 2, Gonsalves, Patenaude; McGhee, Carlson, Nelson.

Substitutions—J. McAuley for Nilsen. Time of halves—45 minutes.

Amateur Cue Final Tonight.

After four weeks of preliminary plays, the final match in the amateur three-cushion tourney will be staged tonight at Jack Doyle's Broadway Academy between Rodolfo Salcedo, State champion, and William Adams. The loser will be tied with Henry Frantzen and Phil Greenwald for second place.

BASEBALL LEADERS GATHER AT DINNER

National and American League Heads Attend Writers' Event in Brooklyn.

PLAYERS ARE REPRESENTED

Officials of Brooklyn Robins Also—Notables Assembling Here for Major Sessions.

Baseball men arriving here yesterday for the annual major league Winter meetings this week detoured to Brooklyn last night to attend the beefsteak dinner given by the Brooklyn chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America in the grand ballroom of the Leverich Towers.

More than 300 were present at the affair, which the Brooklyn writers plan to make a yearly event along the lines of the annual dinner of the New York chapter, which is held in February.

Prominent among those in attendance were John Heydler, president of the National League; President E. S. Barnard of the American League, Wilbert Robinson, president of the Brooklyn Robins, and three other members of the Robins's official family—Steve McKeever, half owner of the club, and Directors Joseph Gilleaudeau and Frank B. York.

A host of ball players, among them Jess Petty, former Robin star southpaw and now a member of the Pirates; Al Mamaux, Otto Miller and Waite Hoyt also was present.

Orchestral entertainment was provided by Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians, and others to take part in the evening's program were Miss Helen Kane, Will Osborn and Ben Bard.

MORTON'S 63 LEADS IN SNOW BIRD GOLF

HAWE IS SECOND WITH 95

Leuder's 88-20-68 Defeats Garrison Following Tie in First Round of Play.

Playing par golf at eleven holes, John Morton of Bronxville, with a net 63, led home a field of twenty golfers in the second qualifying round of the twenty-first annual Snow Birds tournament over the links of the Siwanoy Country Club in Mount Vernon yesterday. Morton had a handicap of 16.

In spite of the condition of the course, made treacherous by melting snows, Morton played brilliantly, scoring 40 going out and 39 returning, four below par for the course in each instance.

Morton played the first hole of 375 yards in par 4 and followed with another par 4 at the second. He ran into difficulty and took 5 on the third a par 3 for the course. He played the fourth and fifth in 6 each, then played the last four holes on his outgoing trip in par. Coming in, Morton shot the twelfth, fourteenth and last three holes in par.

C. G. Leuder and W. Garrison, who tied for first honors in the initial round last week, each with a net 72, played off, with Leuder emerging the victor. His score was 88—20—68 and Garrison's 90—20—70.

W. T. Hawe turned in the second best card in the second round of play. He scored 95—20—75.

In order to qualify for the match play, which is scheduled to get under way the first Sunday in February, an entrant must triumph in one round of play and take part in four others during the eight successive weeks of qualifying play.

DIEGEL TO COMPETE IN OPEN GOLF TESTS

Six Tournaments, Totaling $50,000 in Prizes, to Be Staged in Southern California.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 8 (AP).—Leo Diegel, who successfully defended his Professional Golfers' Association title on the Hillcrest course here, defeating Johnny Farrell of New York in the final match, 6 and 4, today looked to an array of open tournaments as further fields of conquest.

Six tournaments in Southern California totaling more than $50,000 in prize money are on the list of open events in which Diegel plans to take part. The outstanding of these are the $25,000 open at his own course, Agua Caliente, Jan. 14-17; the $10,000 Los Angeles open, Jan. 8-12, and the Catalina Island $7,500 event, which starts Friday.

Many of the professionals who appeared in the P. G. A. tourney will be campaigning in these events, including Walter Hagen, whom Diegel defeated in the semi-final round, 3 and 2; Horton Smith, Joplin (Mo.) pro, and Farrell.

Reynolds Takes Cue Match.

William Reynolds defeated Jack Ward, 200 to 193, in 42 innings in the only match played in the Manhattan 18.2 balkline handicap tourney at Lawlor Brothers Manhattan Billiard Academy last night. Reynolds had a high run of 31 and Ward's best cluster was 15.

New York Six Takes Three-Goal Lead in First Period of Game on Garden Ice.

BOUCHER SCORES TWICE

Pittsburgh Shut Out Until Late in Second Session—Victors Exhibit Strong Defense.

By WILLIAM E. FRANDT.

Nimble-fingered wielding of sticks by the New York Rangers' big three, Bill Cook, Bun Cook and Frank Boucher, made hockey's return to Madison Square Garden last night a gala occasion from the local viewpoint. The Rangers overpowered Benny Leonard's Pittsburgh Pirates, 5 goals to 1, with 15,000 spectators applauding the deft poking, dribbling, passing and shooting of the Blue Shirts.

The orange-garbed Pirate outfit, holder of two high-scoring records for the season thus far, seven goals in one period and ten in one game, looked dangerous at only one stage of the gymnastics, the latter half of the second period. They conducted a series of high-speed drives at the Ranger goal but its only material effect was to save the Pennsylvanians from a shutout.

The first-line Ranger phalanx tallied three goals in the first period, establishing a lead that enabled the Blue Shirts to play conservative hockey for the rest of the evening. The second-string forwards dumped in the fourth Ranger goal in the second period and two minutes before the finish Boucher scored the fifth and final tally by a brilliant individual play.

Bill Cook Outstanding.

Bill Cook was prominent in all of the first period scoring. The Ranger leader passed twice and scored once. In 3:46 the Big Three steamed across the Pirate blue line and Bill passed out from behind the net to Boucher, who came in fast and slapped the puck past Joe Miller.

The Cooks and Boucher rested a while, then came back in the closing minutes to count two goals right in a row. Too many Cooks danced in front of Miller, who moved the wrong way as Bill passed to Bun and Bun sank the goal in 18:20. A minute later another Big Three offensive culminated with Boucher handing the puck to Captain Bill, who hit the meshes for the goal and that made it 3 to 0.

The fourth Ranger goal was a second-string job, Paul Thompson getting in front of the net to take a forward pass from Butch Keeling and an easy counter.

The Pirate goal came when Jarvis followed fast behind a long shot from McCaffrey. The puck rebounded off Roach's chest, and Jarvis, like a flash of orange flame, met the rebound half way and fired it past Roach before the nimble goalie could budge from his tracks.

The third period was slow, except for Boucher's individual stunt-flight near the finish.

Pirates Fail to Threaten.

The Pirates, except for their one outburst in the second period, never succeeded in seriously bothering the Rangers' defense. The Rangers, content to defend in the final session, gave Miller only 6 saves, as against 14 for Roach. In the first two periods the story was the other way, Miller saving 16 times in the first and 19 times in the second. Roach's score was 12 in the first and 14 in the second.

Outside of the applause for the really remarkable stick finesse of the Ranger Big Three chief, acclaim was paid to the acrobatic saves achieved by Roach throughout the first two periods.

Freddie Spencer, runner-up in the six-day bike spree, was honorary referee for the initial face-off. Frank Frederickson, the field leader of the Pirates, was badly shaken up by a crash into the boards in the second period, but after a rest returned to the ice apparently as good as new.

The line-up:

BOXERS AT BOSTON TONIGHT

Will Represent New York in Intercity Amateur Tournament.

Five of the competitors in the two-night amateur boxing show at Madison Square Garden, which starts a week from today and finishes on Wednesday, were nominated yesterday to represent New York tonight in Boston in an intercity series there. The New Yorkers who will fight in Boston are as follows:

Heavyweight Class—Herbert Jolly, unattached.
175-Pound Class—Arthur Roddenbach, Ascension Parish House.
160-Pound Class—George Comavaga, Holy Name Club.
118-Pound Class—Vincent Valenti, unattached.

Jaffe Wins Chess Tourney.

Making a score of 6¼ points out of 7, Charles Jaffe won the weekly rapid transit tournament at the rooms of the I. L. Rice Progressive Chess Club yesterday. Edmond Fargo, 5-2, took second prize, A. A. Cohen, 4½-2½, third, and H. Liebenstein, 4-3, fourth.

Tetzlaff, Race Driver, Dies.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 8 (AP).—Teddy Tetzlaff, former world's champion automobile racing driver, died today at Rest Haven Home, Artesia, Cal. Death was due, physicians said, to complications from a spine injury received in an accident during a race in 1911.

Sports of the Times

By JOHN KIERAN.

FIREMAN PHIL SCOTT of jolly old England has been pricing barber chairs and tonsorial equipment lately, which might indicate that he has no fondness for his old trade, is a bit doubtful about his prospects in the pugilistic profession and is looking for possible success in another line in the near future.

Nevertheless, and in an era when it is all the rage to poke fun at British heavyweights, Phil has done fairly well since his first series of falls in a Garden ring and is, at the moment, a registered contender in the famous heavyweight elimination sweepstakes. After meeting Knute Hansen and hitting the canvas some five or six terrific blows in his Garden debut, Phil gathered himself up and started over again. He explained that, like Joe Beckett against Georges Carpentier, he was "merely filling in" with preliminary motions when Hansen, in a thoroughly discourteous fashion, suddenly knocked him for a series of loops. "Filling in," it would appear, is a quaint old English custom.

It is a custom, however, which Phil decided to abandon. He did no "filling in" when he stepped out to win a decision over Victorio Campolo, the altitudinous cowboy from the Argentine. He doesn't propose to try any "filling in" with Otto Von Porat this evening. He has come to the conclusion that it doesn't pay.

The Doubtful Point.

On his record since his decline and fall before Knute Hansen, Phil figures to give Von Porat a lively evening unless he runs into one of those roaring Norwegian rights. The London fireman stood off Campolo, who was bigger and stronger than Von Porat. But the barber chair episode has left the Phil Scott Marching and Rooting Club in a quandary.

Just why was Phil around inspecting and pricing barber chairs and talking of setting up a shop in the vicinity of Trafalgar Square? Thinking it over, the Scott supporters have worked themselves into a regular lather. A man headed for the fame and fortune that goes with the heavyweight championship of the world should not, in their opinion, fool around with barber chairs and plans for tonsorial parlors. He should be thinking of a steam yacht, the possible purchase of Newstead Abbey and a bright future in Parliament.

In short, they feel that Phil is doubtful of his own success in the heavyweight hunt. Yet they may be mistaken. Phil has royal precedent for looking up a trade, regardless of what heights he may scale. Charles the Fifth, head of the Holy Roman Empire, was an expert mechanic and clockmaker. Louis the Sixteenth of France, though perhaps a poor ruler, was an excellent locksmith. Phil the First, champion of the world, might well be a master barber.

That's for the future, or perhaps for tonight, to decide.

Under Two Flags.

This Otto Von Porat is a puzzling fellow. He was born in Sweden, but he insists that he is a Norwegian. He won the Olympic heavyweight boxing title for Norway back in 1924. He can't wear a tuxedo with the real swank of a Phil Scott, but he packs a punch that would knock a wardrobe trunk through the side of a building.

Otto the Odd fought Paulino Uzcudeundown at the Garden some time ago and it's the opinion in this corner that, if Otto had been filled with what the esteemed Jess Burkett of baseball fame called "the old confeedience," he would have won that bout with something to spare. But Otto was modest and respectful. For five rounds he seemed to think that the Basque Bounder was quite a chap in his way. Then, for some reason or other, Otto changed his mind about Paulino and began to belabor him in brisk style. But it was too late. The decision went to Paulino, who stalled off Otto's belated attack.

Since that time Von Porat has made steady progress. Scouts report that his confidence has increased and his boxing has improved. He always had a punch.

New Faces and Figures.

The cast of characters in the heavyweight hunt has been changing rather rapidly. About a year ago the leading contenders for the honor of taking a swing at Gene Tunney's crown were Sharkey, Paulino, Heeney and Risko. Three of the four have practically disappeared as championship contenders, even though Johnny Risko has been making a mild attempt at a return to the big war.

Now we have Otto Von Porat and Phil Scott, with one scheduled to eliminate the other this evening; Herr Max Schmeling, the Hammer of Hamburg; Primo Carnera, the Italian colossus; Tuffy Griffiths, the larruping Lochinvar who has come out of the West, and possibly Victorio Campolo, whose head was bloody but unbowed when they gave the decision to Phil Scott in their joint debate at Ebbets Field last Summer.

Sharkey remains, of course. In fact, he leads the field, with Max Schmeling in close pursuit. But Schmeling came up quickly and some one else may bob up twice as fast.

A Financial Test.

The heavyweight bouts in the elimination tournament should either prove or refute the theory that boxing is in the throes of a financial slump. The big fellows bring out the big money if it can be coaxed through the turnstiles at all.

Jack Dempsey drew the first million-dollar crowd and Gene Tunney was the first fighter to draw down a cool million, less a few odd thousands, for thirty minutes of work in a ring. Dempsey and Tunney have retired and some pessimists say the big money era retired with them. It hardly seems logical. There may be a slump now and it may or may not continue, but the general tendency through the years is for bigger things in sport all along the line and heavyweight gate receipts are not likely to run the other way for any length of time.

When the programs are attractive enough, the crowds will turn out and the turnstiles will click a merry tune. The lads with the punch will provide the lure. Two skilled boxers won't set any record for gate receipts, but the boxer-puncher debate in the Tunney-Dempsey style will always prove a magnet for the crowd.

It was so in the past. It will be more so in the future.

BOUTS FOR CHARITY AT GARDEN TONIGHT

Von Porat and Scott to Clash in Feature Event of Christmas Fund Card.

TITLE CHANCES AT STAKE

Winner Slated to Advance in Series to Find Tunney Successor—Dempsey to Referee.

By JAMES P. DAWSON.

A heavyweight battle which may prove of more than ordinary significance in the campaign to produce a satisfactory successor to Gene Tunney's discarded championship, is scheduled for decision tonight in Madison Square Garden.

Its principals will be Otto Von Porat, Chicago's Norwegian contender for the championship, and Phil Scott, England's representative in the elimination race. They are scheduled for twelve rounds in the feature attraction in the interests of The New York American's Christmas Fund campaign.

At the present time Jack Sharkey, Boston's ex-sailor, stands alone in the race for the heavyweight crown. He has battled his way to a position of preeminence. Universal recognition must be withheld, however, until the foreign contenders have been disposed of, according to William Muldoon of the State Athletic Commission, who voiced this view on the night Sharkey knocked out Tommy Loughran.

Muldoon Regards Scott Highly.

In the estimation of Commissioner Muldoon Scott is a factor in the foreign field now, and Max Schmeling of Germany is another. It is Commissioner Muldoon's theory that Scott, if he wins tonight, should be matched against Sharkey in the proposed Miami bout in February, and the winner of the Florida match be sent into the ring against Schmeling next Summer. Or Schmeling could be matched against Scott if the Englishman wins tonight, and Sharkey be the final hurdle in a bout proposed for this city next Summer.

The importance of tonight's struggle thus is magnified beyond what it ordinarily would be. Scott, knocked out in a round by Knute Hansen, finds himself practically on a par with Schmeling and Sharkey, principally as a consequence of conquests over Robert Roberti and Victorio Campolo, comparative novices.

These elements and the fact that the battle is being waged in the interests of charity are expected to attract a large and distinguished gathering in the Garden tonight.

Dempsey Will Be Referee.

Another magnet tonight will be the presence of Jack Dempsey, retired former heavyweight champion, as referee. Dempsey has been licensed by the State Athletic Commission expressly for the impending occasion, and although the commission has adhered rigidly to its established custom in declining to announce that Dempsey will referee the main event, it is, nevertheless, understood that this is the arrangement.

Scott will enter the ring the favorite to win. Boxing followers are practically agreed that if the match goes its limit of twelve rounds the Englishman will walk out of the ring with the decision. It is on the probability, however, of the bout not going its scheduled distance that speculation centres.

Von Porat, while not as clever as Scott, is, admittedly, the Englishman's superior as a puncher. The Norwegian lad boasts a right hand which is destruction itself, and he has many followers who believe he will repeat the performance of Hansen.

Supporting the Von Porat-Scott match as a feature will be a twelve-round struggle between Maxie Rosenbloom, Harlem's contender for the light-heavyweight title, and Yale Okun of the east side. This match, too, holds something of a championship significance, for Okun risks the standing accorded him by the State Athletic Commission as one of four worthy title contenders when he squares off against the Harlem reminder of the late Harry Greb.

Other Bouts on Card.

Georgie Hoffman, young Yorkville heavyweight, and Marty Gallagher, Washington (D. C.) lad, are paired for ten rounds. Paul Bianchi, Argentine boxer, and Jerry Fevelee, local boy, are to clash for four rounds, and in the opening bout of four rounds Bill Daring, local heavyweight, will oppose Charles Steele, English boxer.

The St. Nicholas Arena tonight will be the scene of a new talent show, consisting of ten four-round bouts. In the feature event, Sammy Delson, promising little east side featherweight, will engage Bobby Heller of Brooklyn. Irving Silverman, Brooklyn lightweight, will make his professional début against Bobby Herman in the semi-final.

Other four-round bouts scheduled are: Sammy Weinstock vs. Charley Sieger, George Unison vs. Tony Magri; Billy Esakowitz vs. Rudy Abt, Charley Sheck vs. Joseph Marcantino, Joey Caruso vs. Morris Bone, Davey Lee vs. Maxie Ziegler, Sammy Fisher vs. Tony De Meno, Al Perretti vs. Tony Vincone.

AMERICANS BEATEN AT CHICAGO, 4 TO 2

Black Hawks Gain Lead in the Second Period and Hold Off All Challenges.

THREE GOALS FOR MILLER

Tallies Once in Each Period, Cook Assisting on Each Score, Before Crowd of 8,500.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8 (AP).—The Chicago Black Hawks won their third straight National Hockey League victory tonight, beating the New York Americans, 4 to 2, in the swiftest game this season on the Chicago ice, and before the biggest crowd in the history of hockey in Chicago.

The Hawks outskated and outlasted the Americans, with Earl Miller scoring three goals on passes from Tommy Cook. Arbour got the Hawks' other tally unassisted.

The Americans required less than a minute to crack through. Normie Himes picked up a loose puck 38 seconds after the face-off and rifled the puck past Gardiner's knee for the first goal. The Hawks attacked furiously and banged skates from close in at Worters and connected when Miller took a pass from Cook and beat Worters.

Brilliant skating and defense work kept the crowd of 8,500 in an uproar. Worters came up with several beautiful saves. Play continued at top speed to the finish of the period, but no further scoring resulted.

The second period started slowly, but action became plentiful when Sheppard was penalized for roughing March. With the Americans a man short, Chicago started a drive, but Conacher and Worters averted scores.

The Hawks went into the lead past the middle of the period when Cook feinted a shot and drew Worters to the right. He passed to Miller, who beat the New York goalie.

Arbour gave a personal demonstration in scoring for Chicago forty-five seconds after the final period started. He carried the puck up the right side of the ice, went behind the net, and shot as he circled. The shot bounded off Worters's chest and pulled him out of the cage and Arbour took the rebound and poked the puck into the net.

A fine bit of combination work gave Chicago another goal, but the Americans came back and scored fifteen seconds later when Simpson took a pass from Himes and beat Gardiner.

The line-up:

SIX-DAY BIKE RACE DREW 120,000 FANS

Crowd Exceeded That Which Saw Grind Last March—Pay the Riders Today.

Approximately 120,000 fans saw the six-day bicycle race which ended in Madison Square Garden Saturday night with Franco Georgetti, popular Italian cyclist, and Gerard Debaets the winners. The estimated total attendance greatly exceeded the number which witnessed the grind last March, but was not quite as large as that for the Garden race a year ago.

The victory was the ninth for Georgetti and his third this year. He won the last New York six-day race in March with Debaets and triumphed in Chicago, also in March, paired with Franz Deulberg. If he continues his present pace he gives promise of registering the greatest six-day record in history.

One of the high lights of last week's grind was the attempt by Deulberg and his partner, Freddie Spencer, to lap the field in the closing minutes. If they had been successful they would have won, for they had more points than Georgetti and Debaets.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock the riders will be paid off at Madison Square Garden and then will start resting for the next race to be held in Chicago the first week in February. The next Garden grind is slated for the first week in March. Virtually all the foreign riders will go back to Europe for the Christmas holidays.

Carl Stockholm, the Chicagoan, announced his retirement from six-day racing at a dinner given by the Unione Sportiva Italiana Club after the race Saturday night. Georgetti and Debaets were the guests of honor at the dinner.

POCKET CUE PLAY TO START TONIGHT

FIELD OF 8 WILL COMPETE

Layton in Return 3-Cushion Match With Cochran Here—Seaback to Clash With Woods.

Frank Taberski of Schenectady, N. Y., defending champion, and Marcel Camp of Detroit will clash in the opening match of the world's championship pocket billiard tournament which starts tonight in the Recreation Building, Detroit, and continue through the next ten days.

Camp is the 21-year-old youth who won the Northern sectional qualifying round. He faces a genuine test against Taberski, who is in top form, as was demonstrated when he clicked 125 in an exhibition match against Seaback in New York on Saturday. He had an unfinished run of 80 in an afternoon block, and when the match was resumed in the evening Taberski ran 55.

Only one match will be contested in the championship tonight. However, beginning tomorrow and for the remainder of the tourney, three games will be played daily, two on the afternoon program and one at night. All games will be at 125 points.

Along with Taberski and Camp, six other players will compete for the title, namely, Ralph Greenleaf of New York and Erwin Rudolph of Chicago, former world's champions; Pasquale Natalle of Detroit, veteran title contender; Joseph J. McCann of Jacksonville, Fla., winner of the Southern sectional tournament; Onofrio Lauri of Brooklyn, winner of the Eastern sectional tournament, and Spencer Livsey of Los Angeles, winner of the Western sectional tournament.

The tournament, which is being held under the direction of the National Billiard Association of America, is the first major billiard affair of the season. Interest is keener than ever before, because players from all parts of the country were able to participate in the preliminaries to make them eligible for the world classic.

Johnny Layton, world's champion at three-cushion billiards, will engage Walker Cochran, former world's 18.2 balkline champion, in a return exhibition at Dwyer's Broadway Academy all week, starting this afternoon. The match will be with the diamonds uncovered.

Last week Layton triumphed over Cochran with the diamonds covered, 600 points to 530, despite the fact that the champion played with a fractured finger of the right hand and two fractured ribs received in an automobile accident about two weeks ago.

With the diamonds available Layton will be at his best. Twelve blocks will be played in afternoon and evening sessions of 50 points each.

Arthur Woods, New York State pocket billiard champion, will clash with Charles Seaback for a week starting today at the Strand Billiard Academy in afternoon and evening blocks at 125 points each, with total points to decide the winner.

Although Seaback lost to Taberski last week in an exhibition, he is one of the few pocket billiard players who can claim a victory over the champion. Immediately after winning the championship last December, Taberski came to New York and bowed to Seaback in a three-day match.

STEINER WINS IN CHESS.

Vanquishes Pinkus in Manhattan Club Title Tourney.

Herman Steiner of the American Olympic chess team scored his third victory in succession yesterday in the annual tournament for the championship of the Manhattan Chess Club at the expense of A. S. Pinkus, former City College star, and retained the lead in the field of fourteen.

Steiner had the white side of a queen's gambit declined and won in a neat ending after 31 moves. I. Kashdan, scoring ace of the Olympic team, contested his first game, defeating E. S. Jackson Jr. of Philadelphia in a Zukertort opening which went to 57 moves. In the other game decided yesterday I. Horowitz won from E. Berman.

Milton Hanauer, former State champion, by drawing with C. H. Morrell, tied in points won with A. E. Santasiere in the annual championship tournament of the Marshall Chess Club yesterday. Santasiere, however, has one defeat less charged to him and retains the lead. A. C. Cass won from A. N. Towsen. Three games were adjourned. The leading scores: Santasiere, 4½–½; Hanauer, 4½–1½; Bigelow, 2¼–1½; Bernstein and Smirka, each 3–1.

Topics of Sermons Preached in City and Suburbs Yesterday

BYRD CALLED PROOF OF HUMAN PROGRESS

Rabbi Harris Finds South Pole Party Shows Mankind Is Not Stationary.

SELF-KNOWLEDGE PRAISED

Rev. G. M. Stockdale Declares Explorers Are Aware of Limitations, but Are Unafraid.

Commander Byrd's flight over the South Pole was cited as "the latest incident proving the advance of civilization through discovery and invention," by the Rev. Dr. Maurice H. Harris, rabbi of Temple Israel of New York, Ninety-first Street, near Broadway, in his sermon yesterday morning. He said:

"The story of the growth of the universe is biblically stated as 'these are the generations of heaven and earth.' Evolution has taught the progressive movement from the fiery nebulous mist up to the human race on the earthly planet, endless stages from protoplasm to man. So religion tells a similar advancing story from crude notions of God up to the spiritual universal divinity.

Holds Mankind Not Stationary.

"We do not accept the dictum of Ecclesiastes that 'there is nothing new under the sun.' Mankind has never stood still. What seems more stationary than the glaciers? But they have steadily moved and transformed part of the earth's surface. Even in the Stone Age we meet two stages, the Paleolithic, when they used rough stone, and the Neolithic, when they had learned to polish it. None will deny the advance of civilization through discovery and invention, with Byrd's flight over the South Pole as the latest incident. Yes, man is more intelligent. But is there an ethical improvement? Are people less selfish? Is there a deepened sense of responsibility? Some doubt it and point to the increase of brutality, the wild license of youth and the spread of unbelief.

"Now is there really more crime or only more exposure? Is there really more immorality or only less secrecy? May not a presumed violation of the time-honored sanctities and ethical standards be a fuller revelation of inner conviction? Is man sinking or only groping for the light?"

Byrd's Self-Knowledge.

Commander Byrd and his comrades in the Antarctic were said to show a "picture of perfect self-knowledge" by the Rev. George Maychin Stockdale, pastor of St. James's Methodist Episcopal Church, Madison Avenue and 126th Street, in his sermon yesterday morning on "Self-Knowledge and the Kingdom of God."

"Would you look for a picture of perfect self-knowledge?" he asked. "Turn to Commander Byrd and his comrades, Captain McKinley, Bernt Balchen and Harold I. June, as last week they winged their way like eagles into the sea of ice and snow that guards the South Pole. Did they know themselves? Indeed they did. They knew their powers. They knew how to drive those winged Titans of the air, how to tell their altitude above sea level, above the ground, when the 'ceiling' of the atmosphere is being neared, how to read a sextant, if needed, how to radio, gauge distances and gasoline mileage, take photographs while hurtling through space at nearly 100 miles an hour, how to allow for the currents of air near precipitous mountains, how to gain height by throwing away precious food, as told in THE NEW YORK TIMES this past week. They knew all this, and they knew that they knew.

"Besides they knew their human limitations. No one knew better than they the chance they ran of smashing into a mountain peak, should the threatening clouds mature. They knew the slight chances they had to come out alive, if forced to make a landing on the wind-formed sastrugi of the 'Devil's Ballroom,' as the brave Amundsen had named that particular area of snowy waste. Well indeed did they know all these chances and more.

"Yet beyond these they knew themselves down deep in the inner shrine of the soul. They knew their own unconquerable courage. They knew they could be calm and self-possessed in an emergency. They knew that when the supreme test should come, they would not be troubled with those hobgoblins of fear and horror that unnerve and petrify even the best of men; for these ghosts of the mind they had conquered."

SUGGESTS BAN ON BIBLE MIGHT POPULARIZE IT

Dr. Milo H. Gates Says, in View of Dry Law Experience, Book Might Be Read More.

"I wish sometimes that people would be forbidden to read the Bible because that prohibition, I believe, would be an incentive to its more frequent and more thorough reading," declared the Rev. Dr. Milo Hudson Gates yesterday morning in the Protestant Episcopal Chapel of the Intercession, Broadway and 155th Street, of which he is the vicar.

"In the early days of Protestantism the Bible was a sealed book," he said, "and it was also more than that; it was actually a chained book. The Bible was chained in the church and in many cases was locked, because it was thought that the necessary reading of the Bible could be done by the churchmen."

Declaring that a prohibition might stimulate Bible reading, he continued:

"In view of the liquor prohibition law, I think that there would be considerably more reading of the Bible. We have to judge the present and the future by the past. Often I think I should go further and chain a Bible here in this church and lock its covers. This step, I believe, would lead to some very skillful picking of locks.

"Every home should have a religious library. It would not have to be a very voluminous one. The first book on the shelf of the religious library in the home should be the Bible. Preferably it should be the St. James version because it is, I believe, the translation which is in the purest English."

Finds Supernatural Authority For Morality Is Weakening

Life itself must be the new authority on morals for the rising generations, the Rev. Dr. Minot Simons, minister of the All Souls Unitarian Church worshiping in the MacDowell Club, 166 East Seventy-third Street, declared in his sermon yesterday morning.

"The teachers that the new generations will hear," said Mr. Simons, "are they who can reveal the consequences of conduct, who can scientifically study and summarize such consequences and then say with authority which cannot be ignored.

"Parents say it is a dangerous time to bring up children. Others say it is a dangerous time to be a parent. It is a dangerous time because something is happening. The age-long supernatural authority for morality is weakening. That means a spread of moral skepticism. And for multitudes that means a drift into moral anarchy."

SEES LONGER LIVES AIDED BY RELIGION

The Rev. C. H. Valentine Says Some Men Do Their Best Work in Old Age.

CITES LENGTHENING SPAN

Brookline (Mass.) Pastor Preaches Here on Problem of Making the Added Years Worth While.

It is a fact that longer lives are in style, but how to make them worth lengthening is the problem, declared the Rev. Cloyd Hampton Valentine of the Unitarian Church, Brookline, Mass., preaching at the Universalist Church of the Divine Paternity, Central Park West and Seventy-sixth Street, yesterday morning.

The average person lived to be only 24 years old in the Middle Ages, he said, and somewhat later medical science lengthened the average age to 33 years. He said that today the average person lives to be 57, and the end is not yet, according to the president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, who predicts the approach of the century mark for the average life.

The fact that some scientists and historians speak disparagingly of the value of a longer life is no reason for feeling that one's life is useless, Dr. Valentine said. It is quite true, he said, that James Harvey Robinson, author of "The Mind in the Making" believes that one reaches the peak of usefulness during the early twenties, that Sir William Osler says the average man has done his best when reaching the forties, and that George Bernard Shaw has said that every one on arriving at the age of sixty should be put to death.

In the opposing ranks are those, however, who believe that the greatest achievements of man have been accomplished between the ages of forty and seventy, he continued, and from a list of 400 prominent men of history, ninety were found to have done their best work between seventy and eighty-five.

"Every life ought to be heroic," he continued, "but there is more than the heroic to the ideal life. There should be moments of happiness. Let us stretch out the minutes of joy. And the ethical and religious moments, let us seize these moments and stretch them out to their fullest extent.

"We may have various views concerning theology, but we all want to take our lives and make them as much like that of Jesus of Nazareth as we may."

PHELPS SEES BUSINESS TURNING TO THE BIBLE

Executives Have Learned That Gospel Virtues Pay, Yale Professor Says Here.

There has been a tremendous increase in the Christian virtues in business and professional relations during recent years, Professor William Lyons Phelps of Yale University said yesterday morning in an address before the congregation of the Riverside Church, now worshiping in Temple Beth-El, Fifth Avenue and Seventy-fifth Street.

Declaring that courtesy and honesty have replaced craftiness and shrewdness in business and in the professions, he attributed this change to the discovery by practical men of what he said was the Christian axiom that honesty and virtue are ultimately the things that pay.

From the Christian point of view, he said, the true villian is the man who is absorbed in self-interest. He cited craftiness, canniness and safety first as indicative of the self-interest he condemned.

"It is a discovery of the old Christian idea that the man who is apparently the greatest fool is often the wisest man that probably accounts for the recent change in business and professional attitudes," Dr. Phelps said.

"Where formerly craftiness was praised among lawyers, now it is honesty that is praised. Formerly when you went into a bank you found a regular tiger in the teller's cage and the management encouraged its men to be shrewd. Now when you go into a bank you are treated with the greatest courtesy. The old idea was, of course, merely the result of a short-sighted point of view. Men are beginning to see further today."

Stresses Sincerity in Education.

The need of sincerity and earnestness in educating youth was stressed by Father Thomas H. Miley, S. J., at the communion breakfast held by the Evening Chapter of the Junior Federated Newman Clubs of the Bronx and Manhattan yesterday morning at the Knights of Columbus Club Hotel, Fifty-first Street and Eighth Avenue. "A good deal of the earlier education," he said, "depends upon the parents, but it is the individual himself, after the adolescent years are past, who forms his own character for the rest of his life."

DEFEND THE BIBLE AS INSPIRED WORK

Pastors of Many Faiths Here Join in Attacks Upon Those Who Challenge It.

'SELLING' RELIGION SCORED

Dr. Berg Decries Interpreting Word in Terms of Business—Houck Says Gospel Lighted Byrd Flight.

The power of the Bible was the subject of many sermons in celebration of Bible Sunday yesterday.

The Rev. John Walter Houck, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, Grand Concourse and 175th Street, the Bronx, in his sermon, said:

"Its glorification of the infinite possibilities of human growth enables the Bible to withstand the attacks of its most thoughtless critics. It is the light by which Commander Byrd 'lifted up his eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh his help' and blazed his way across the skies and wrote bravely thereon that man is a part of the Divine Being."

Says Bible Will Live Always.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph P. McComas, preaching in Trinity Church, Broadway and Wall Street on the Holy Scripture, declared:

"Holy Scripture is an unchanging mystery, received by faith upon authority. As St. Paul says, 'Ye have received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God.'

"The discoveries of science and conclusions of scholars, which are the word of man, are constantly changing, but this is fixed. We have no authority to teach the word of man, but we are under authority to teach the word of God. The Church gave us the Scriptures and she alone is their custodian and interpreter. Genesis and the Gospels teach us of God's love, and Revelation opens heaven for us."

Scores "Scientific" View.

The Rev. John Corbett, preaching yesterday afternoon at Fordham University on "The Bible; the Fundamentalist Abuse," asserted that seventeenth century theologians had insisted that even the vowel points in the Hebrew text of the Old Testament had come direct from the original writers.

"The abuse of physical science by writers or public speakers who scrutinize the pages of Holy Writ to detect the sacred writer in a mistake deserves the strongest denunciation," he declared. "The answer both to such maligners of God's word and to the Fundamentalists is the answer of St. Augustine fifteen hundred years ago, St. Thomas in the thirteenth century and of Pope Leo XIII in the nineteenth—namely, that the sacred writers were not teachers of geology or astronomy or of any physical science. As one of the Cardinals is said to have put it in Galileo's day, 'The Bible is intended to teach us how to go to heaven, not how the heavens do.'

The Rev. Dr. Albert E. Ribourg, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Fifth Avenue and 127th Street, in his sermon there characterized the Bible as "one of God's best witnesses," adding:

"The reason that there is such a defiance of the law today and that our twentieth century life is so rapidly becoming a replica of ancient Rome's social life is that nearly 75 per cent of middle-aged people have thrown the Bible to the scrap heap. And youth is following in its parents' footsteps. In many so-called "smart sets" the Bible is mentioned only to ridicule it. Yet the Bible is the foundation stone of our civilization. To the influence of this book we are indebted for the progress made in our English-speaking civilization, and to this Book we must look as our guide in the future if we are to endure as a righteous nation."

The Bible should never be allowed to fall a prey to the commercial spirit of the day, said the Rev. Dr. Irving Husted Berg in his sermon yesterday morning in the Fort Washington Collegiate Church, Fort Washington Avenue and 181st Street.

"This is an age of salesmanship, so it is not surprising that the Gospel should be interpreted in terms of salesmanship," he asserted. "It is not in terms of salesmanship that our age is to find the meaning and inspiration of life. Jesus of Nazareth can never be reduced to terms of the age. He is infinitely above any salesmanship."

The church formed on supernaturalism and based on a belief in the verbal inspiration of the pages of the Bible is doomed, and in its place there must be formed a religion that will construct a new conception of a divine Fatherhood on the basis of human brotherhood, Dr. Stephen S. Wise said yesterday morning in a sermon on "Why is God's House Forsaken?" in the Free Synagogue in Carnegie Hall.

Dr. Wise renounced his own belief in the Bible as a divinely inspired work, and declared "much of it is mistaken, much of it is even morally and spiritually erring, in the Old and New Testaments alike.

"Frankly, I sometimes wonder whether we are not trying to keep a ghost alive, a ghost, or rather a defunct body from which the spirit has fled for the most part, and we are going through the motions and gestures of performing functions which after all have been claimed by other and more adequate agencies."

DECRIES BIRTH CONTROL

Dr. Delany Says Small Families Menace Future of Church.

The Rev. Dr. Selden P. Delany, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of St. Mary the Virgin, Forty-sixth Street condemned birth control in his sermon yesterday morning as a threat to the life of the church.

"This is a parish of the Episcopal Church and I am not at all sure whether the Episcopal Church has any future," he said. "Small families are the rule among its members, and in consequence its membership is not reproducing itself. It can grow only by making converts from the ranks of unbelievers, or from the Protestant denominations. Now that some of our official teachers are advocating artificial restriction of the family, the future of the Episcopal Church begins to look even more dubious.

"It is an inescapable law of social development that the future belongs to those religious and racial groups which are reproducing themselves in sufficiently large numbers to survive. The result of birth control is extinction."

OLD WEDLOCK IDEAL UPHELD IN PULPITS

Dr. Krass Says Monogamy Is the Foundation of Family Life —Takes Issue With Russell.

'NEW-FANGLED IDEAS' CITED

Dr. Goldstein Finds Modern Trend Demoralizing—L. J. Louis Calls Wedlock a State of Mind.

Old-fashioned marriage was advocated in several pulpits yesterday morning.

The Rev. Dr. Nathan Krass, rabbi of Temple Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue and Sixty-fifth Street, after citing a recent study made by a German woman physician of monogamy among the higher animals, suggested that it was a natural relation. He said cranes and swans did not take a second mate after their first died. Other birds and animals do so only as a means of rearing the offspring of the first union. He then said:

"I say to you, young men and young women of the new generation, that if you be faithful to one another and submerge your masculine and feminine solicitude and desires in the rearing of children, like these animals, you will do very, very well.

"When the Church, the synagogue or society looks lightly on premarital or extra-marital promiscuity it will strike a mortal blow at the family. I will be charitable and sympathetic to those who slip, but I must take my position uncompromisingly on the solid rock of monogamy, the marriage institution and the family."

Discusses Russell's Book.

Discussing Bertrand Russell's theories on marriage, Dr. Krass indicated his agreement with Russell in the fundamental thesis that marriage is primarily not a sexual partnership, but above all an undertaking to cooperate in the procreation and rearing of children. He also endorsed Russell's high regard for the family as a unit in society, but objected seriously to Russell's desire for a new morality in marriage in which pre-marital and extra-marital relationships would be treated not as sins or offenses, not only as conduct to be tolerated, but as conduct sanctioned by society.

"To permit this doctrine to become the basis of marriage," he said, "is to invite the anarchical forces of society to work havoc with civilization."

Assails "New-Fangled Ideas."

The Rev. Dr. Israel Goldstein, rabbi of the Congregation B'nai Jeshurun, Eighty-eighth Street, near Broadway, said on the same subject:

"Those who advocate radical changes in the marriage institution are usually the same people who espouse the cult of individualism altogether. From the standpoint of society's welfare the new-fangled ideas of marriage hold great danger.

"From the standpoint of the world's work, which must be done, a marriage code which would tolerate extra-marital relations and easy dissolution of the bond would be a menace, because it would unsettle the minds and emotions of men and women and prevent them from making their best contributions to the world's work. The tasks of science, of commerce and industry, and of governments would suffer in consequence."

Marriage a "State of Mind."

Marriage was called a "state of mind" by Louis J. Lewis, founder and leader of the Christian Science Liberals, at the Pythian Temple, 135 West Seventieth Street, yesterday morning. He said:

"We are all reaching out for something we seem to lack; both sexes hungering for satisfaction. Whether we are aware of it or not, we are not really seeking satisfaction in matter, for there is no such thing. What we crave is understanding. Perfect satisfaction can be found only in spirit because of its unity. That inner urge, subtle in its purpose, is the divine impulsion seeking its own in spiritual oneness. Instead of charm, beauty, physique or money, we must look and search for qualities that endure. Do they blend? Do they harmonize? If not, it is wise to abandon the desire for a contract so binding as 'until death do us part.'"

CHURCH PANES DEDICATED.

Gift of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Taller Completes St. James' Windows.

Stained-glass windows and other recent decorative gifts to St. James' Church, Madison Avenue and Seventy-first Street, were dedicated yesterday morning by the Rev. Frank W. Crowder, rector, assisted by the Rev. Sidney T. Cooke, curate.

A group of three windows on the north side of the edifice, representing fifteen characters from the Old Testament, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Taller, in memory of Mrs. Taller's father and mother, George Birdsall and Eleanor (Jackson) Cornell, completes the windows of the church.

A painting above the reredos of the transept chapel representing the Transfiguration and showing Christ on the mount with Moses and Elijah was the gift of Miss Marion T. Schofield, Mrs. Herman F. Stone and Mrs. Leon D. Bonnet in memory of their sister, Helen Schofield Thayer. The sisters previously had given the altar of the chapel with the reredos and the oak paneling in memory of their mother.

Dr. John W. Wood, head of the department of missions of the National Council of Protestant Episcopal Churches, following the dedications, described the church's missionary activities throughout the world.

Reviews Blessings of Poverty.

The Rev. Douglas Matthews, chaplain of the Seamen's Institute, 25 South Street, spoke last night before a congregation of merchant seamen on "Poverty of Spirit." He said: "A certain blessedness is derived from material poverty. The poor man is not worried about the fluctuations in the money market, he does not lose sleep over the failing of a bank, nor does he long to commit suicide because his real estate has depreciated in value. To be free from the anxieties and the conflicting cross currents of life is to really live and to enjoy living."

Says Our Culture Is Based On Idea People Never Get Old

Most mature Americans are restless and unhappy because American culture is built on the assumption that people stay young all their lives, the Rev. Dr. Bernard L. Bell, warden of St. Stephen's College, said yesterday in his sermon in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Dr. Bell urged that true happiness would be found in spiritual maturity, and suggested that there be more spiritual adventuring.

"Day by day our spiritual and intellectual powers grow less," he said. "For the salvation of our country we need rebels, people who refuse to conform to the social and mechanical pressures all about us, people who are willing to insist that manhood is more than youth and that the internal freedom of a man's soul is too valuable to sell, especially for the petty price offered by civilization at the moment. If we can get some rebels, real rebels, competent rebels, against the standardization and stupidity of the twentieth century, America has a chance of arriving at spiritual maturity."

DR. DARLINGTON SEES 'DYNAMITE' IN TALKIES

Fears They Will Spread Bad English—Urges a "Ministry of the Stage."

Members of the Episcopal Actors' Guild were warned that the talking movies were "charged with dynamite" by the Rev. Dr. Henry Darlington yesterday afternoon at a special musical vesper service held for the guild in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Fifth Avenue and Ninetieth Street. Preaching on "The Ministry of the Stage," Dr. Darlington said:

"The present time offers a great challenge to the men and women of the theatre, and to all those who are seeking to use their gifts and talents not only for the entertainment but for the betterment of mankind. This is the real ministry for the stage today. I do not know of any means that will more effectively carry good teaching to many people than a good play.

"A new invention has just come to hand, the talking movie. Do we realize with what dynamite it is charged? A Spanish writer in the Buenos Aires Literary Monthly claims that the two languages worthy of world adoption and each rapidly forging into this place are Spanish and English, and the odds are in favor of the latter winning out. One of the means to accomplish this end will be the talking movie.

"But what sort of English will the world speak if grammatical errors and mispronunciations which one hears from the screen are allowed to crystallize and take permanent form in the speech of the people?

"It is claimed that Tyndale in his translation of the Bible crystallized the English language and that the great playwright William Shakespeare standardized it. That of course was for the tight little island of Great Britain. Yet when we think in world terms the same high opportunity awaits the playwrights and producers of today.

"I am willing to prophesy that if the great producers are going to make pictures of any constructive influence they will be forced to discard the claptrap, hit-and-miss methods of Hollywood, and turn to the legitimate profession, to those who have been trained not only to act but to speak."

LAUDS STIMSON NOTES ON MANCHURIA CRISIS

The Rev. Dr. Pierce, in Sermon at Capital, Says Kellogg Pact Was Made "a Living Thing."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Asserting that the "wise and capable" action of President Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson, in the latter's notes to China and Russia respecting Manchuria, has made the Kellogg-Briand anti-war pact "a living thing among the nations," the Rev. Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the First Congregational Church, which President Coolidge attended, replied in a prelude to his sermon this morning to critics who have been asking whether the Manchurian imbroglio "is any of America's business."

"Both China and Russia are among the fifty-five powers which signed that treaty and bound themselves by its solemn agreements," Dr. Pierce said. "Apparently both China and Russia were in danger of forgetting their treaty agreements.

"Should the Kellogg Treaty become a mere scrap of paper? A collection of empty words? Should we fatalistically resort to the old and outworn methods of fighting it out, and God help the hindmost? Should nothing be done while another World War is fanned into flame?

"Thank God, our government did something. It took the lead in marshaling the public opinion of the world, and that is a bigger stick than Theodore Roosevelt carried. It called upon Russia and China to live up to the treaty. It reminded them that as late as last July they solemnly promised to do so.

"Russia objected to the American suggestions," Dr. Pierce continued. "but nevertheless two things have quickly happened—public opinion of the world was quickly expressed for peaceful settlement, and a peaceful settlement is reported to have been made. The settlement may or may not have been agreed upon before this last American communication, but it was subsequent to the provisions of somewhat similar communications of last July."

Secretary Stimson's action was courageous and deserves highest praise, Dr. Pierce declared.

"To have sat back and done nothing," he added, "would have been cowardly and traitorous to the higher idealism of America. It was a master stroke in diplomacy. It demonstrated the new technique in international affairs. It applied the resistantless moral force of world opinion. The isolationists and the advocates of the old diplomacy will scoff and rave, but they are blind leaders of the blind."

ARMS CUT VIEWED AS WAR MEASURE

Rev. J. F. Sheen Says It Affects "Quantity of Steel" in Battle, Not "Quality of Soul."

DEMANDS A MORAL BASIS

Peace Can Be Achieved Only by Bond of Unity Higher Than Nations, He Asserts at St Patrick's.

Unless disarmament is put upon moral grounds we can expect no lasting peace among nations regardless of how many treaties are signed, the Rev. J. Fulton Sheen, professor of Apologetics at the Catholic University, Washington, D. C., declared yesterday morning at high mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Fifth Avenue and Fiftieth Street.

"In the light of the true nature of peace, it is well to recognize that despite the desires for peace among nations, very little is to be expected from a disarmament conference," he said. "In the public eye disarmament is often confused with peace. As a matter of fact, disarmament is not a peace question, but a war question; it affects the quantity of steel, not the quality of soul; it is concerned with the weapons with which a nation will fight, not with the question whether or not it will fight. Decreasing weapons is not elimination of war, but only the severity with which one will start war.

"Noble as the Kellogg pact may be, there does seem to be running through it a fundamental fallacy of mechanistic philosophy, namely, the assumption that international peace is the sum of the peace among nations. It is thought that American peace, plus German peace, plus Italian peace, plus French peace, and so on, constitutes international peace. This is not true. Unity among nations can be achieved only by a bond of unity higher than the signatory nations themselves.

"Deny moral responsibility to God and who will challenge Russia's right to ignore peace as a moral problem and tell America to mind her own business? This is one instance where it took three to make a quarrel and the third was the peacemaker. Deny Divine power above men and nations would shrink against war with a great power as "unthinkable" and inexpedient, but allow war with Guatemala without thinking twice about it or even once. When the sense of Divine justice is lost in favor of expediency all that is needed to make war is an oil field and a millionaire who wants it developed for the sake of constructive civilization or the rights of Christian minorities.

"The shortest cut to the problem of the elimination of guns is through the question of the elevation of soul."

Defines True Christmas Spirit.

Hope of everlasting life belongs only to those who can make their Christmas permanent with God and Jesus representing an active force in their lives, the Rev. Dr. S. De Lancey Townshend said yesterday at All Angels' Church, West End Avenue and Eighty-first Street, of which Dr. Townshend is rector emeritus. "Let us follow Jesus because we are asked to follow Him, not explain Him," he said.

Ticker on the Brain?

TRUE it is that Wall Street has been very much on some folks' minds! But as Julius H. Barnes reported last week to President Hoover and the nation's business leaders, there has been a tremendous gain in the number of new Savings Accounts opened following the big drop in the stock market. Four times as many new Savings Bank accounts were opened during the last four weeks for New York County alone, as for the entire state of New York during last July. What better proof of the people's common sense and the nation's stability! Are you one of the great army of steady and sensible savers? Why not join the 155,000 depositors at the Central Savings Bank and be a partner in the country's prosperity!

ELECTRIC UTILITY SERVICE
No Dollar You Spend Buys More Value

PERSIAN MELONS AND POTATOES

Every country of the world, every region of this continent contributes to the food supply of this metropolis.

Brought by express refrigeration trains and by steamer, precious foods are consigned to tremendous cold storage plants for safekeeping. Electricity helps preserve and protect these food supplies.

Electricity operates lifts, elevators, pumps and air compressors. Electricity circulates the refrigerating brine which cools the rooms, ventilates the chambers and removes dangerous excess moisture from the atmosphere. Electric lighting, safety signs and electric fire alarm apparatus help safeguard millions of dollars worth of perishable foods.

It is an important service to all our customers when we furnish an unfailing supply of electricity to the great cold storage houses.

SEASONAL DECLINE EXCEEDED IN STEEL

Activity Early in Year and the Break in Stocks Are Added Factors in Recession.

RAIL DEMAND STILL HEAVY

Farm Tool Makers Also Are Large Buyers—Prices Continue to Hold.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 8.—Activity in steel continues on the down grade, whether measured by consumption, buying or production. The decrease at this season is natural, but it is decidedly greater than usual. There is a combination of normal seasonal trend, hesitation due to occurrences in the stock market and reaction from the special rise in activity that began at the middle of last year.

Allowing for seasonal variation, there was a particularly high stage of general activity from July 1, 1928, to July 1, 1929, when in a general way the peak was passed.

Steel ingot production in the last week has been at about 65 per cent of plant capacity. It cannot be estimated so closely as some published estimates would indicate, as a wide range exists in production in different districts, chiefly on account of differences in character of finished products, which themselves show a wide range.

In the Buffalo and Youngstown districts steel production is below 50 per cent. The Chicago district is reported down to 65 per cent and the Pittsburgh district is at about that rate. Alabama and Eastern operations may pull up the average somewhat.

To bring out the importance of the decrease in progress before the stock market slump could be a direct influence, and before it was time for ordinary seasonal decrease, it may be said that fully half the decrease from the peak rate of last May up to date occurred before the end of October. That is a vital fact.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 8.—The four years which ended with 1928 averaged 46,000,000 tons of ingot production, if the good year 1928 is excluded, and five years through 1927 averaged 43,000,000 tons. This year, despite its poor ending, will show about 55,000,000 tons. Thus a substantial drop in tonnage is suggested. If operating rate relative to capacity be taken as the measure, however, the tonnage would have to be scaled up, as there is more capacity.

As to prices, the manner in which they have been holding to date appears quite reassuring, for the price structure is intact except for a few slight declines that occurred some time ago. Some little evidences have appeared in the last week of steadier prices in sheets. Obviously, however, the support of prices is purely by the mental attitude of producers, not by the relation between demand and capacity.

Price concession would be simply no inducement and lower prices would be harder to hold than high present prices, so well established in practice. The crucial test of prices would come with a substantial increase in demand, when there would be something to work on. In view of the heavy overhead the producers individually may well feel that now is the particular time when prices should be held.

BONUS BY BLOOMINGDALES.

Employes to Be Compensated for Loss of Holiday Night Work.

Bloomingdale Brothers announced yesterday that bonuses would be paid to all employes this year for the money they would have earned if the store had remained open during the holiday buying season in the evening as in previous years. The department store has adopted the policy this year of no holiday night work for employes, by not keeping the store open evenings.

The bonuses are determined on length of service. All who have been in the employ of the company since Jan. 1, 1929, will receive $10; since May 1, $5, and since Dec. 7, $2.50. The delivery force receives higher bonuses because of the extra strain. Drivers who have been in the employ of the company since Jan. 1 will receive $35 and helpers employed for the same period $30. Drivers in the employ of the company prior to Sept. 24 will receive $30, and for employment prior to Dec. 10, drivers will receive $25 and helpers $20.

Raw Silk Sales Show Gain.

A total of 5,560 bales of raw silk, valued at approximately $3,325,000, changed hands on the National Raw Silk Exchange last week. This is only 1,095 bales under the total for December, last year, and compares with 1,765 bales valued at $1,150,000 in the first week of December, 1928.

RABBI KAPLAN IN CAR CRASH

Little Hope Held for Recovery of Head of East Orange Temple.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Dec. 8.—The Rev. Samuel Kaplan, 54 years old, of 20 Ridgeway Avenue, rabbi of the Congregation Sharey Tifile at Prospect Street, East Orange, was critically injured here early today when his automobile, believed to have skidded on the Northfield Road opposite the West Orange High School, struck a tree and hurled the rabbi through the windshield of the vehicle.

Mr. Kaplan was found unconscious in front of his automobile by Louis Devaney of 150 Mitchel Street, Newark, and taken to Orange Memorial Hospital. His right arm and right leg had been fractured and he suffered internal injuries. Doctors hold little hope for his recovery.

Rabbi Kaplan came here from the Middle West three years ago and a year ago preached a sermon on "A New Impression of Christ," which drew wide attention.

YOUNG ARTISTS HEARD.

Mary Seiler, Harpist, and Barbizon String Quartet Give Program.

Mary Seiler, harpist, appeared yesterday in the "New American Artists" series at the Hotel Barbizon, playing compositions for harp by Grandjany, Salzedo and others. She was followed by the Barbizon String Quartet, four young artists from the Juilliard Foundation, in the A minor quartet of Schumann. The intimate hall was informally set for tea, served to the musical guests after the recital.

Miss Seiler, a native of Terre Haute, Ind., studied at the Institute of Musical Art in this city and later at Fontainebleau and Paris.

BRITISH COMMODITIES STILL FALL IN PRICE

Decline in November's Average More Rapid—Continuous Drop During Five Years.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The London Economist's index number of British prices at the end of November, based on the 1927 average as par, is 88.3, comparing with 90.2 a month ago and 95.2 a year ago. Compared with 1913 as 100, the average percentage figure for all commodities in November was 126.9, as against 129.6 the month before and 136.9 a year ago.

Figures for various groups were as follows: Cereals and meat 133.7, other foods 169.9, textiles 131.2, minerals 115.6, miscellaneous 104.2.

The weakened demand for commodities, particularly for metals and rubber, accounted for a good deal of last month's decline in prices; this was clearly reflection of the Wall Street debacle.

Comparison with preceding months and years, based on the average of the full year 1927 as 100, is as follows:

Oct., 1929	90.2	Nov., 1927	100.6
Sept., 1929	91.8	Nov., 1926	106.9
Aug., 1929	93.6	Nov., 1925	109.1
July, 1929	93.7	Nov., 1924	118.5

Nov., 1929	126.9	Nov., 1928	138.9
Sept., 1929	131.8	Nov., 1926	151.9
Aug., 1929	134.5	Nov., 1925	156.7

Percentages for the different groups of commodities, based on the average of 1913 as 100, compare as follows:

	Nov., 1929.	Oct., 1929.	Sept., 1929.
Cereals, meat	133.7	141.9	141.4
Other foods	169.9	171.9	175.1
Textiles	131.2	135.7	137.7
Minerals	115.6	118.7	120.3
Miscellaneous	104.2	105.0	104.9

In 1920 the index number for the whole year, on the basis of 100 for 1913, was 259.8.

COMMODITY AVERAGE UP AGAIN FOR WEEK

Second Weekly Recovery From Year's Low Level—British and Italian Prices Lower.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 6.—Professor Irving Fisher's index number of commodity prices, based on 100 as the average of 1926, was 92.7 for last week, compared with 92.3 the week before, 92.2 two weeks before, 92.5 three weeks before and 93.3 four weeks before. The average of July 2, 99.2, was the highest of the year to date; the average of two weeks ago was the lowest of the year. The highest of 1928 was 100.3, in the second week of September; the lowest was 95.1, in the second week of January. Last week's index number showed the first advance of any week since that which ended July 19.

Crump's index number of British commodity prices, as cabled for the past week, and also based on 100 as the average for 1926, is 88.7, which compares with 89.0 a week ago, 89.4 two weeks ago, 88.9 three weeks ago and 89.7 four weeks ago. The average of April 5, 94.4, was the highest of the year to date; this week's average is the lowest. The average of May 25, 96.7, was the highest for 1928; the average of Oct. 12, 91.8, which was unchanged from the three previous weeks, was the lowest.

The index number of average Italian prices, compiled and cabled by the Chamber of Commerce at Milan, and based on 100 as the average of 1926, is 70.6. This compares with 70.6 the week before, 71.2 two weeks before, 71.5 three weeks before and 71.7 four weeks before. The average of March 15 and 22, 76.4, was the highest for the year to date; this week's average is the lowest. The average of Dec. 28, 76.1, was the highest for 1928; the lowest was 74.0, in the first week of January.

COMMODITY PRICES.

Saturday's closing wholesale cash prices for commodities in the New York market, unless otherwise noted, were:

Year's Last Barges Pass Whitehall.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITEHALL, N. Y., Dec. 8.—Navigation on the Champlain division of the Barge Canal closed today between Whitehall and Waterford. The water will be drawn immediately. The last tow of the season passed south through this village yesterday afternoon, when the tug Defender with a number of boats and the Dorothy with two boats of pig iron in tow from Port Henry to New York were put through.

RESIDENT OFFICES REPORT ON TRADE

Active Market for Holiday and Sale Goods—Spring Lines Are Inspected.

SUIT ENSEMBLES FAVORED

Big Season Is Expected — Leather Goods Lead Accessories—Shortage of Blue Overcoats.

Orders for holiday goods for immediate selling, preparations for post-Christmas sales and inspection of new Spring ready-to-wear lines were major factors in an active week in the wholesale markets. Style trends for early Spring are crystallizing, with emphasis being placed on suit ensembles, for which a big season is anticipated. The call for leather goods was a feature of the demand for holiday accessories. A shortage of blue overcoats was noticed. A similar situation was reported in suede and glacé kid gloves, with importers here unable in many cases to specify definite delivery dates. Business in toilet goods was particularly active, with bath salts in new containers an outstanding item.

The major trends in style and merchandise as noted by the leading resident buyers here were as follows:

KIRBY, BLOCK & FISCHER—"Due to cold weather, business has shown more activity. Buyers in town report their volume slightly ahead. Initial showings of suit ensembles were held during the week. There is a tendency toward the mannish as well as the dressmaking touch on jackets in box contours or nipped-in waistlines and also flares and belted types in soft tailored effects. Blouses are very important in the costume, usually being in a contrasting shade. The suit with cloth coat, skirt and silk blouse is considered outstanding for early selling, but we believe there will be a later demand for the ensemble with cloth coat and silk dress. Coat stocks in manufacturers' hands are light. Sweater firms have merchandised their stocks very closely and there is very little merchandise to be had for immediate delivery. Much attention is being given the three-piece suit for early Spring."

Beaded Dresses for Sales Now.

McCREEVEY, WERRING & HOWELL—"Diversely trimmed beaded dresses are a decided factor for December selling. Black is the outstanding color in crêpes and chiffons, with sheer georgettes wanted in lighter shades. It is expected that short and hip length coat ensembles will be well regarded for Spring. Embroidered coats for Palm Beach are popular. The return of bolero types is regarded as important. Evening dresses, particularly taffetas, are active. Junior dresses at $6.50, $10.50 and $16.50 have been extremely active. Manufacturers are working on their Spring lines and are cutting very little ahead. In children's lines the sudden cold spell has caused manufacturers to resume cutting of wool and velvet combination dresses. Unusual activity has developed in the women's coat market. With numerous requests noted, the market offers a very limited assortment. The only types being manufactured are black coats with black fur. A tremendous number of last minute calls for gift items is noted, with handbags leading."

FELIX LILIENTHAL & CO., INC.—"We have had quite a few calls for black coats with Manchurian wolf collars to retail from $25 to $59. Inquiries were also noted for Spring coats and ensembles for early showing to retail from $39.50 to $95. The past ten days have shown an increased demand for fur coats in the popular grades, chiefly to retail for $100. Many orders were noted for tweed coats for juniors and children. A few of the higher price millinery manufacturers are now showing straw body hats in their early Spring lines, such as porte bonhem, pomalogue, Bakou and sisols. Numerous small brims are shown. The off-the-face styles are not as extreme as those of the Fall lines. The trims are tailored ribbon, velvet in narrow widths and also grosgrains. Leading colors include linen blue, beige claire and fire brown."

HART, FLANAGAN COMPANY, INC.—"We predict ensembles in all materials will play an important rôle for the coming season. Coat dresses as well as suits will be favored. Ensembles made of covert, tweeds, reps and fancy woven fabrics are shown in all representative lines. The coats are straight and rippled. Details include scarfs, suede and calf belts, tucking, slot seaming and stitching. The shorter length suits are fashioned with the tuck-in blouse, whereas the longer skirts are shown with the overblouse. The silk suits, both plain and printed, are treated in much the same way as the heavier fabric. We have had a persistent call for black crêpes during the week. They are difficult to secure for immediate delivery, as most manufacturers concentrated on light colors."

CONSOLIDATED CLOTHIERS, INC.—"The approach of Christmas is evidenced by the increasing activity in all lines of holiday goods. Silk shirts, fancy track pants, neckwear, mufflers and ribbed stitched coat sweaters were particularly in demand during the week. Reports from boys' departments throughout the country indicate a decided increase in the sale of overcoats in sizes 12 to 18. Boys' blue overcoats are maintaining their popularity in all sizes. Reorders on coats have been mainly for blue. The juvenile coat business, however has been disappointing so far."

Use Flat Crêpe and Georgette.

MERCHANDISE REPORTING COMPANY, INC.—"The new Spring $10.50 ranges shown by many dress manufacturers for daytime wear are featuring flat crêpes and georgettes, which seem to predominate. They are showing these garments in street shades of green, red, New Blue, tan, fuchsia and black. Several manufacturers are considering georgettes in the pastel shades, but up to the present this line is not complete. Prints are also being shown, but manufacturers are not pressing them. In millinery, satin types are gaining in favor. Black leads with brown and navy following. The styles are mostly close fitting, with bows to back and long effects to side."

JOHN M. BIGGINS, INC.—"The glove situation in the wholesale market is critical. A grave scarcity of the predominating styles and colors exists. Signs of relief are not in sight. The demand for slip-ons in suede and glace kids still persists, and the average importer is refusing to specify definite dates of delivery. Toilet goods are enjoying an active holiday demand, the orders covering a wide range. Bath salts are most popular in attractive containers, with the heavily advertised lines being the favorites in perfumes. Cosmetics are quiet. There is a considerable quantity of business being placed for mid-January sales, especially in linens, domestics and blankets."

AFFILIATED CLOTHIERS — "A larger number of buyers were in the office than for the same week last year, placing a good volume of orders for immediate delivery. Mail orders were larger than was anticipated. Items such as demi-bosom shirts to retail from $3 to $5, neckwear from $1.50 to $3.50 and lounge robes, in brocaded effects and unlined to sell from $15 to $25, and lined from $20 to $40, were outstanding. Excellent response was also noted on celanese robes to retail at $12.75. Russian style pajamas in broadcloth, with embroidered emblem, was the largest single pajama item purchased. Full-fashioned silk and wool hose, with embroidered clocks and in the darker shades met with an unusual call at this time from a large number of stores."

BEN F. LEVIS—"Business continues fair on popular-price dresses. Our accounts report that this year's figures compare favorably with last year's. Spring colors are coming in very strongly, both in flat crêpes and georgettes. Chiffons continue to be very big. Set-in sleeve models or sleeveless types with long sleeves attached are good. The extreme styles are most popular. Georgettes are also being reordered in Spring colors and black. New styles in flat crêpes are being shown daily. Bead trimmings have become quite a feature and have been widely adopted. Party dresses continue in good demand."

JACK HARTBLAY, INC.—"Numerous buyers of men's and boys' clothing were in the market during the week, with mail orders also running heavy. Men's overcoats were sought in the cheaper and popular-price ranges, the requests being mainly for box and single and double-breasted models. A decided shortage has developed in blue overcoats. In suits also increased activity has been noted. Items particularly requested are worsteds and serges in popular-price ranges, the double-breasted model being preferred. Numerous requests developed for boys' chinchilla and plaid-back overcoats. In sheeplined and leather clothing orders have come in so fast that manufacturers are working overtime to keep up with them."

PLANTATION RUBBER STEADY IN LONDON

Prices for Last Market Session of the Week—Quotations for Tin and Lead.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—In the rubber market here on Friday plantation grades were steady. Smoked sheet spot and December sold at 7 15-16d to 8d a pound and value, January at 8⅛d and sellers, July-September at 8¾d and value, October-December quoted at 9d and value, crêpe spot sold at 7¾d to 7 15-16d and value. In the shipment market smoked sheet December-January sold at 8d c. f. New York and grades were unchanged, hard fine spot being quoted at 8¼d and sellers.

In the tin market Eastern advices gave 250 tons sold at £179 c. i. f., a decline of 25s. Here the market was dull and on balance cash was 12s 9d and three months, 15s lower. Sales were 300 tons. Cash sold at £174 15s to £173 10s, December at £174, January at £175 10s to £176 5s, three months at £177 5s to £178 5s down to £176 10s. The settlement price was £173 10s. In the late trading January sold £175, February at £176 2s 3d, March at £176, three months at £176 15s to £176 10s. Options of £7 on £177 were paid for calls. English common tin closed quiet at £175 5s to £175 10s.

The output of tin in the Federated Malay States in November totaled 6,134 tons of fine tin, making a total of 61,193 tons from January, which compares with 56,649 tons in the same period last year.

Lead met quiet inquiry, but sellers were not too prominent, and on balance near dates were unchanged, while forward positions were 1s 3d lower. Sales were 300 tons of December at £21 6s 3d. The settlement price was £21 7s 6d. The afternoon market was idle. English lead remained steady and unchanged at £22 15s.

CHICAGO PROVISION MARKET

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—A spasmodic trade within a narrow range, with deliveries of around 1,200,000 pounds of cash lard last week and a reduction to 35,709,000 pounds in lard stocks in the West, are the latest features in the provision market. Despite the heavy losses last month, stocks were 37,941,000 pounds at Western points, compared with 41,363,000 pounds last year. Cash interests took the deliveries early and one house made redeliveries in the closing days. In all there was not a heavy trade at any time, and the finish on distant futures was at practically the bottom, January being $10.87½ and May $10.27½; the former gaining 2½ cents and the latter losing 2½ cents. December closed at $10.55, a net advance of 20 cents for the week.

Hog supplies were the heaviest this year and cash trade is good, with exports heavy. Interest in meats was light, clear bellies have been cleaned up and new packing is meeting a better demand with net gains of 42½ to 47½ cents for the week, January finishing at $12.10 and May at $12.65.

NEW CORPORATIONS FEWER.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Dec. 8.—The total of 26,817 stock corporations chartered during 1928 will not be reached in incorporations this year unless nearly 3,000 are chartered in December, according to a report of Secretary of State Edward J. Flynn, made public tonight. During November there was a slump in the number, the total being 1,683. The previous low monthly figure was for September, when 1,771 companies were formed to embark in various kinds of business. The highest number of charters granted in any one month this year was in January, when 2,787 were issued.

The total capitalization of the companies formed in November was $45,928,675. Those formed in Greater New York had a total capitalization of $36,460,175.

Harding in New Post.

Paul Shoup, president of the Southern Pacific Company, yesterday announced the appointment of Carroll R. Harding as assistant to the president. Mr. Harding is engineer of standards of the railroad and is supervising the company's $12,000,000 Suisun Bay Bridge. He will also continue to have charge of the inspection of material and equipment purchased for the entire system.

IOWA AND WISCONSIN STOCK SHOW LEADERS

New Price Records Set at Chicago —Week's Cattle Market Slow, Closing Easy.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—Live stock interests of Iowa and Wisconsin came out winners at the International Livestock Show. Lucky Strike, the grand champion yearling steer, sold at $8.25 a pound, returning $7,700. Hogs sold at 12½ cents, with sheep 22½ cents. The price for champion steer and the carload of hogs set new records. Ninety-three carloads of show steers averaged $18.50. Railroads bought forty-four lots out of the ninety-three loads offered for their dining car service. A short-horned steer from Manhattan, Kan., sold at 80 cents a pound.

In the general cattle market trade was slow throughout the week, closing easy, with considerable stock unsold. Steers were unchanged to 20 cents higher, the latter for yearlings, butcher stock and feeders the same as a week ago, and calves $1 to $2 lower. Average of beef steers for the week of $12.75 advanced 15 cents over the previous week, which was 20 cents below last year's. Receipts were smaller than the previous week and last year.

Hogs closed 10 cents lower. The spread between top and the average prices was only 20 cents, the latter being $9.10 at the last, with the week's average $9.25, a gain of 15 cents over the previous week and compared with $8.70 last year. Shippers took 15 per cent of the receipts, which were the largest since last January.

Supplies of sheep and lambs were above those of the holiday week last year in Chicago and all other markets. At Chicago fat lambs were 25 cents higher for light and 25 cents lower for heavyweights. Feeders were unchanged to 25 cents lower, and sheep, 25 to 50 cents higher. Average of lambs of $12.60 gained 10 cents over the previous week and was $1.10 under last year. Sheep averaged $5, a loss of $10.25 from last year.

Fresh dressed lambs advanced 1 cent to 19 to 26 cents, dressed beef gained ½ cent at 14½ to 25 cents, with pork loins unchanged to ½ cent lower at 15½ to 20 cents.

	Cattle.	Hogs.	Sheep.

CORN AND RYE PRICES NOW TEND TO ADVANCE

Corn Lacking for Delivery—Conjectures About Large Buying of Rye.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—Movement of corn from the country to the markets has enlarged in some sections, while in others farmers are indisposed to sell, being dissatisfied with prices. Consumers are taking liberal quantities and enough is being marketed to supply this demand. A feature is the open interest of 10,314,000 bushels in December, with virtually no stocks to deliver, although the first delivery so far this month was on Saturday, when 20,000 bushels were sent out.

Trade sentiment leans to the buying side on breaks. December had a range of 80½ to 90¾ cents, and May 97⅞ to 98¼ cents, with the close on December 89¾ cents, March, 95⅝; May, 97½ to 97¾, and July, 98⅞, the net gains for the week being ¾ to 1 cent.

It is said that Board of Trade directors have discovered who is back of the large buying of rye that has been on here for six months, but there have been no announcements.

Natural Gas

Natural gas produces about twice the number of heat units produced by manufactured gas.

Natural gas consumption in the United States has doubled in 6 years.

Natural gas is the most valuable and convenient of all fuels and its distribution one of the most profitable of public utility services.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

A Presidential message which spoke frankly about the collapsed stock speculation but hopefully about the prospect of saving general trade, a treasury report which was not despondent about the effect of the Wall Street crash on the public finances, though it recognized the obscurities surrounding such results, and continuance of the White House conferences—these incidents of last week were reasonably heartening. Mr. Hoover, it is true, concluded his remarks somewhat cautiously by the statement that "a very large degree of industrial unemployment which would otherwise have occurred has been prevented." Mr. Mellon also took refuge in the confining of his specific remarks to the fiscal year ended with last June.

But the disappearance of acute financial unsettlement was as visible on last week's stock market as in the Washington conferences. Transactions rose to the largest figure in three weeks and, for the first time in five weeks, the greater activity occurred in a rising market. Covering by the large "bear account" was undoubtedly the main propelling influence. It has always at this present stage in the aftermath of panic that post-mortem diagnosis grows active. Last week's ideas on the question were as varied and, for the most part, as irrelevant as they usually are on such occasions. Contrasted with the similar assignment of causes at other similar junctures in the past, the really striking fact is not where the blame is placed by Wall Street, but where it is not placed.

By this time in 1907 it had been discovered that the Money Power deliberately and maliciously caused the panic. But the conduct of the banks in the panic of 1929 was quite beyond criticism. Had the panic occurred a year ago, doubtless we should have heard of the Federal Reserve and its credit policies as the sole and only cause. But the character of the money market which accompanied October's crash, and the flood of light thrown on the episode by the amazing liquidation of "brokers' loans," disposed of that notion also.

This does not mean that new explanations of the October collapse are lacking. Congress is beginning to make suggestions. One Congressman finds that "the bears" caused it. Perhaps the proper answer to his theory would be that, if it was really the bears who, single-handed and without the help of other influences, stopped the crazy speculation and forced a precipitate retreat, then that always unpopular fraternity would have performed a public service. But every one knows now that sellers for the short account were in October only the foam on the cataract. Another theory advanced last week was that the mischief was actually done through "brokers' loans by others."

The action since mid-October of that huge body of "outside" lenders—acknowledging no professional responsibilities, holding no reserves, quite as much subject to sudden panic as the army of margined speculators—certainly had something to do with aggravating the crisis. Curtailment of $1,350,000,000 in such "other" loans during the panic week itself, and of more than $2,000,000,000 in the eight weeks ended Dec. 4, was sensational enough. Speculative Wall Street, which had been warned of exactly that probability but which preferred to believe itself to have discovered the philosopher's stone of credit, is hardly in a position to demand now that the government do something about it. But the question still remains: Did this action of the "loans by others" actually cause the panic?

There is not the slightest reason to suppose so. With the new light which events have thrown on the ill-fated speculation of the last two years, every intelligent man is now aware that we had a South Sea Bubble on our hands. It was sure eventually to burst; if one thing had not occasioned the explosion at the appointed time, another would have done so. The longer the collapse was deferred, the more destructive it was bound to be. Many separate influences contributed to bring about the crash when it came at last. But the basic cause was the character of the speculative mania itself, and it is waste of energy to build up theories that incidents which merely aggravated the violence of the reckoning were the reason why it came.

STERLING HAS RISEN TO THE GOLD POINT

London Now Looking for Gold Exports From New York to England.

MOVEMENT MAY BE LARGE

London Estimates That the United States Can Afford to Give Up as Much as $250,000,000.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The week's rise in sterling exchange, to a figure not reached since the end of 1927, attracted widespread attention on this week's financial markets. The rate for cable transfers touched 4.88¼ toward the end of the week, and it was then recalled that the last important gold shipments from New York to London, those of May, 1928, occurred when the rate had reached exactly this level.

General conditions governing such shipments are now much the same as they were then. The only special difference is that the London bank which bought gold in New York on that occasion possessed special facilities which, through eliminating loss of interest during transit, enabled it to import the gold at a lower rate of exchange than would have been possible to others with a profit.

Our Gold Export May Be Large.

It is believed here that the United States could afford to release at least £50,000,000 gold for export without any adverse effect on the American credit situation. This, it is considered, has been rendered possible by the extensive credit deflation which has occurred since the Wall Street collapse.

Evidence that American banks and other lending institutions desire to employ their surplus funds abroad is furnished by recent repurchases of American securities which were flung on this market during the panic, also by American buying of sterling bills of exchange. The rise of sterling is partly attributed to these purchases, but partly also to the fact that England's imports of American produce have not been financed this season by London alone to as great an extent as usual. Some of that financing was undertaken by American banks.

When Bank Rate Will be Reduced.

Aside even from such prospective shipments of gold to London by New York, the Bank's position should presently be changed distinctly for the better through the arrival of about £4,000,000 from Australia. The Bank of England will, however, probably wait until it has actually restored its gold reserve to normal proportions, or until it is actually assured of receiving substantial quantities from near-by markets, before making further reduction in its rate.

A CHEERFUL OPINION ON THE SITUATION HERE

Barclay's Bank of London Emphasizes the Fact That "Fundamentals" Are Unchanged.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Commenting on the American business situation under the changed conditions now prevalent, the monthly review of Barclay's Bank makes the following observations: "At the present moment it is well to remember that the entire industrial equipment of the United States is intact, its railroads are exactly the same as before, its constructive business leaders still in control and its workers and their efficiency unimpaired. What has happened is an unexampled revaluation of paper securities that represent the legal and effective ownership of American business concerns.

"The revaluation process has entailed shifting ownership on an enormous scale, but from the national standpoint the country's industries are owned as before by American investors who will share in the continued expansion of American industry. This more or less philosophical view is expressed not to minimize the effects of the crisis but to call attention soberly to fundamental facts that do not appeal to those swayed by mob psychology. It is one of the fortunate characteristics of the United States that the effects of such inflationary eras can be shaken off in a comparatively short period and ordinary business continue in fairly steady volume."

CRASH AFTER-EFFECTS IN EUROPEAN MARKETS

All Stock Exchanges Badly Shaken —Europe's "Luxury Trades" Already Affected.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 6.—The after-effects of the American crash have been unquestionably serious on European stock exchanges. In all of those markets, the entire list of leading securities have suffered really serious losses. As in America, so in Europe, this financial setback is beginning to be reflected in general trade, especially in such luxury industries as the diamond trade, which at Antwerp is closing down for the next fortnight.

It is this slackness of trade which is contributing to cause the equally general decline in European money rates. They are expected to go still lower; on this market there is a disposition to expect early reduction even of the London bank rate to 5 per cent, owing to the important margin of ¾ of 1 per cent between the bank rate and the market.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Dec. 6.—On the Paris Stock Exchange the worst is generally believed to be over. Experienced business men, however, consider that some lapse of time will be necessary before the crisis on the stock exchanges, which affected all the world's markets, can have been fully liquidated. Luxury trades in this country have already been visibly affected, and the opinion generally held in trade circles is that general industry will suffer to some extent.

It is now realized that cheap money and easy credit in France during the early part of the year invited many traders and manufacturers to accumulate stocks. This makes the upsetting of financial confidence and the decline in raw material prices an unfavorable influence.

Removal of Wall Street Menace Promises Still Easier Money

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—All indications point to steadily easing money rates in Europe, now that the American market has lost the dominant position in international monetary affairs which the abnormally high bids of Wall Street had created for it during so long a time. The influence of the United States on the international market will remain strong, but it should be beneficial rather than detrimental to the rest of the world.

The sharp rise of French exchange this week is causing hope that the French demand for London's gold is near its end. There has, however, been so much disappointment in this matter, during the past few months, that the market is not yet dismissing this fact altogether when attempting to gauge the future.

CRASH IS DISCUSSED BY GERMAN EXPERT

SEES BREAK MUCH BELATED

Was Postponed by Policies of Wall Street Houses—Trade Reaction Inevitable, but May Not Be Critical.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—Alfred Lansburgh, editor of Die Bank, opens his December issue with a searching analysis of the Wall Street crash and its probable reaction on business. Lansburgh declares that the American break was due long before October of 1929, but was retarded through the policies of investing and speculating houses, which continually added fuel whenever the flame seemed to be expiring. The crash, he admits, was primarily an inevitable reaction from an exaggerated boom; but the exaggeration consisted, he points out, not merely in driving stocks high, but in driving them to heights at which dividend yields were wholly insignificant. Overexpansion of investment trusts was also a material factor in the collapse.

Its immediate causes he defines as weariness of speculation, withdrawal of European funds and the requiring of investment trusts and holding companies to supply lists of their holdings. Lansburgh declares that the companies preferred to sell their stocks rather than reveal their holdings. The Federal Reserve policy of removing funds from speculating centres to crop centres he also indicates as an influence, although slight.

Lansburgh gives reasons why, in his judgment, serious trade stagnation must follow the crash in stocks. He criticizes Hoover's optimistic statements in November, particularly the theory that the collapse in speculation has set free capital which will fructify in business. He is caustic also regarding some other utterances in high places, notably by Rockefeller, Mitchell and the Morgan house, and ridicules the notion that America's ability to finance big orders for railroads and other industries has been enhanced by liberation of funds tied up in speculation.

Concluding, Lansburgh declares that America's "continued prosperity theory" is fallacious. He admits that the coming decline in American trade need not necessarily be critical, but believes that demand for goods will wane, and that the old theory that serious Stock Exchange collapses always foreshadow business reaction will apply this time as on all previous similar occasions.

Legal Opinion: Messrs. Long & Daly.

Ottawa is the capital City of the Dominion of Canada and the seat of the Federal Government. In addition to the advantages afforded the City by reason of location of the Parliament Buildings, Dominion Government offices and the large number of Government employees, Ottawa ranks prominently as an industrial centre. Ottawa's bonds have always been highly regarded and have a wide market in United States, Canada and Great Britain.

PARIS GOLD TAKINGS IN LONDON MAY END

Rise in Sterling Foreshadows Transfer of All Such Demands to New York.

STOCK MARKET RECOVERY

Rumors of "Government Intervention" Ridicules, but Bears Covered and Investors Ceased Selling.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Dec. 6.—The sharp rise in sterling at New York this week is considered to make further withdrawals of gold by Paris from London impossible for the moment. It must be remembered, however, that a movement of sterling here in favor of London has often reflected actual engagement of gold in London some time before its actual withdrawal for shipment; therefore the exchange rate is not necessarily an absolute guide to the gold movement.

Paris banks which have been conducting the transactions in the London gold market have preferred to take gold from London because transportation was easier, with less risk of delay and consequent loss of interest than in case of withdrawals from New York. This made the banks take gold from London, even when the profit was slightly lower than it would have been with New York engagements. If sterling remains firm, however, the additional gold which seems likely to be imported into France between now and the year-end will perhaps be drawn exclusively from New York.

The Bourse, after great weakness again on Monday, rose rather sharply Tuesday and has subsequently continued firm. This reversal of tendency was promoted by rumors of government intervention to mark up prices. The idea that the government had considered direct action on the market is absurd, but it certainly did examine the situation, and called upon banks to intervene by way of averting panic. In fact, some large purchases made on Tuesday, particularly of shares of the Bank of France, of Suez Canal and of Rio Tinto were ascribed to a syndicate of large Paris banks.

The subsequent recovery in leading securities, on belief that the slump had been arrested, scared the bear party, who at once commenced to cover the real holders to cease selling. The end-of-November settlement passed off without any brokers failing, but the margin of losses for bull speculators was considerable.

LONDON'S NEW LOANS SMALLEST SINCE 1922

November's Issues Less Than Half Last Year's—11-Month Total Down £89,357,000.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The Midland Bank's statistics on new security issues, which do not include British government borrowings, show that new capital issues in London during November aggregated £12,945,000, as against £11,510,000 in the preceding month and £27,970,000 a year ago. Last month total issues made up the smallest November aggregate since 1922, while the total for the eleven completed months, £248,466,000, compares with £337,823,000 in the same period last year and £288,352,000 in 1927.

When the bank rate comes down to a still lower level, considerable expanse of new capital issues is probable. But the feeling is that these will be mostly of the pure investment class. There is at present no demand at all for new speculative securities.

GOLD FLOWING TO LONDON.

Week's Net Gain by the Bank of England Was £1,467,700.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—During the past calendar week the Bank of England took in £1,892,066 gold. Of this £1,156,261 came from Australia in sovereigns and £368,900 was bought in the open market from South African arrivals. Withdrawals were £434,366, nearly all for France.

Next Monday £500,000 gold will be received by the Bank direct from South Africa, and £378,000 more in bar gold will be available on Tuesday in the open market.

Bankers in Germany Indignant At Schacht's Reparation Talk

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—The hostile memorandum regarding the reparations situation, issued by President Schacht of the Reichsbank, is almost universally condemned in financial Berlin. Its contents are considered misleading; also most inopportune in the time selected to publish them, since they might easily have a bad effect on Germany's international credit at the moment when improvement was in sight. Prominent banking men complained this week that Schacht's repeated indiscreet criticisms made his position as Reichsbank president almost untenable long ago; in fact, they criticized the Ministry for not forcing him to resign.

The newspapers describe Schacht's action as a manoeuvre against Financial Minister Helferding, who formerly criticized Schacht's policies. In answer to the Schacht memorandum, Berlin bankers, while admitting certain unfavorable phenomena—such as increased bankruptcies, Boerse stagnation and probable decline in industry—assert that there is no chance whatever that Germany will fail to meet her reparation payments and other foreign liabilities.

RECOVERY ONLY SLOW ON LONDON'S MARKETS

Improvement Confined to Actual Investment—Still Handicapped by Hatry Difficulties.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The stock markets appear to be drawing slowly out of the deep rut of depression into which they had fallen. The more confident tone imparted to Wall Street by President Hoover's business plans has found some reflection here, at the same time forced liquidation has ceased, floating supplies of stock are small, and investors are viewing the market with less suspicion.

Business, however, is developing only on investment lines, and it will require much time to rid the markets of the large speculative holdings which have passed temporarily from weak to strong hands. Similar conditions exist on all other European markets, though the absorption of bankrupt stock has apparently been effected through other means than sales in the open market.

The settlement of difficulties arising on the London Stock Exchange from the collapse of the Hatry group of companies is yet to be arranged. It presents peculiar difficulties; the Stock Exchange has never before had exactly such a problem on its hands, and until it is solved it will hang as a cloud over the market.

FRENCH BANK'S GOLD RISES, NOTES EXPAND

Week's Large Increase of Circulation Reduces Reserve Ratio, Despite Larger Reserve.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Dec. 6.—The increase of 190,000,000 francs in the gold reserve of the Bank of France, as shown by the weekly statement of Thursday, occurred without any change in the bank's balances abroad. The ratio of reserve to liabilities fell from 42.68 to 45.78. This, however, was occasioned by the movement of other accounts.

The week's bank return, which covered the position as of November 29, reflected preparation for the month-end maturities and developed large requirements through transactions with the bank. For instance, bills discounted increased more than one billion and circulation 1,916,000,000, whereas private deposits decreased 739,000,000. The increase in circulating notes was about the same as in the corresponding week last year, and both that item and the bills discounted are sure to show important changes in the opposite direction in the next weekly return.

GERMANY MAY DRAW GOLD FROM AMERICA

Week's Movement of Dollar Exchange at Berlin Might Render Purchases Profitable.

DEPENDS ON MONEY RATES

Still Lifeless, but Improvement in Market for New Securities Is Now Expected.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—Toward the end of the week dollar exchange was heavily offered on the Berlin Boerse and the rate weakened to 4.1745. This rate, if it lasts, would make profitable the shipment of American gold to Germany.

Weakness of the dollar in London, in the middle of the week, was considered to be due to sales in connection with the new Berlin city credit. Firmness of the mark against the dollar is partly a result of the high German money rates, and, since these rates are expected to decline, dollar exchange may, in the next few weeks, move less favorably to Berlin. The Frankfurter Zeitung expresses the view that the impending heavy gold shipments from America may prevent any further cut in the Federal Reserve rate.

The Reichsbank's return for the end of November shows an unexpectedly big increase in credits and circulation, and this may prevent the Reichsbank from reducing its discount rate, unless the Bank of England again takes the initiative. After the November month-end settlements, money remained dear. The day rate at the end of the week is 7¾@8¾ per cent, the monthly rate 8½ to 10 per cent and the private discount 7.

The home capital market continues dead, and the total of foreign loans placed in November was altogether insignificant. Municipalities have decided to rely on savings bank deposits, which now exceed 8,000,000,000 marks, for consolidation of their short-term debts instead of borrowing from abroad. On the other hand, the present firm market for home bonds seems to foreshadow early improvement in the market for new securities.

The Berlin Handelsgellschaft Bank publishes an analysis showing that in 1929, as compared with 1928, Germany's trade balance will show improvement of 4,000,000,000 marks, which should be sufficient to pay all reparation and loaned-service debts without any fresh foreign borrowing.

LONDON BANK'S STATUS PREVENTS RATE CUT

Gold Holdings Are Still Inadequate, and Note Issue Is Increasing Heavily.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The decision of the Bank of England to make no change in its discount rate this week caused no surprise. The position disclosed by the Bank's weekly return of Thursday clearly explained its unchanged policy. Currency is now moving out to the country districts very rapidly, and will continue to do so until the end of the year. This week's return, for instance, showed expansion of more than £6,500,000 in note circulation, and this happened along with decrease of more than £1,000,000 in gold in the Bank's reserve, owing to further exports to France.

The Bank of England's ordinary banking reserve consequently declined more than £7,500,000, and its present figure is nearly £14,000,000 lower than a year ago. The total gold holdings also, at £134,269,000, are £24,250,000 less than last year, while the proportion of reserve to liabilities, at 31¾ per cent, compares with 38 per cent a year ago. Such a position is considered not to justify a lower bank rate, especially at a time of year when pressure on the money market usually becomes acute.

OUR MARKET'S POSITION.

German Theory That Banking Conditions Have Not Been Made Easier.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—Some financial writers argue that American bank resources will be less liquid, not more so, than before the October panic, and predict that business will have to resort increasingly to short-term credits. The basis of this theory is the supposition that Wall Street conditions will have made new stock and bond issues difficult.

In general, skepticism is expressed as to whether the effort of Washington and the business leaders to revive through planned action declining private initiative will have complete success.

ARGENTINA AROUSED BY EXPORT OF GOLD

Weak Exchange Also Held Due to Drop in Wheat—Rise in Discount Rate Seen.

NO DECREASE IN RATIO

Gold in Circulation Continues to Hold Status of the Past Two Years.

Gold exports from Argentina, which have been substantial all this year, and the continued weakness of Argentine exchange are causing serious concern in that country, according to a report received by the Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company from its representative in Buenos Aires. The exports have been the result of a drop in the price of wheat and a decrease in other exports during the first nine months of the present year.

A reassuring feature of the situation, the report states, is that of $112,000,000 gold exported only $35,000,000 came from the Caja de Conversion, the balance having been taken from stocks in the banks. Ratio of gold to circulation shows practically no decrease as compared to the past two years. The figure stood in September at 83.05 per cent, compared with 83 to 84 per cent during 1927 and 1928.

Opinion in Buenos Aires is divided, one group of economists and financiers viewing the gold movement without concern, while another group advocates relief measures. An embargo on gold shipments, negotiations for a foreign credit to support exchange or an increased discount rate are among the measures which have been suggested by the latter group.

It is generally believed, the report states, that gold exports will not be interfered with, and that in case it is necessary to preserve the gold ratio and prevent inflation the discount rate will be raised.

AGAINST LOWER BANK RATE.

Continental Market Thinks Ease in Money at London Temporary.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 6.—Dutch bankers as a rule do not favor further reduction in the London official discount rate; they are inclined to believe that the relatively lower market rates at London are due purely to a temporary lack of bills. However, even the present bank rate is obviously not effective in attracting gold from near-by markets and, moreover, £5,000,000 gold is believed to be under way from far distant markets to London.

This would seem on the whole to favor the gold situation at London, but opinion on this market is reserved in view of the shipment of £995,000 more gold from London to Paris, making total shipments of the kind this year no less than £32,000,000.

BERLIN AND THE MARKETS.

Outlook Thought to Be Helped by Financial Reaction Elsewhere.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 6.—The only market which seems to have been helped by the world-wide Stock Exchange readjustment is Berlin. Need of foreign capital is the outstanding consideration with Germany and, as a result of the American reaction, it is believed that America's attitude toward German borrowings will now be more friendly than of late. This would probably mean a flow of gold from New York to Germany.

The large recent New York gold shipments to France and Switzerland are clearly a result of the policy of those two countries in recalling their American credit balances, owing to the disappointing turn of events on the American Stock Exchange and in American trade.

BERLIN MARKET DECLINES.

Breaks, After Early Firmness, on Schacht's "Memorandum."

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—The Berlin stock market, with the exception of rayons, was firm during most of this week until Friday. On that day Dr. Schacht's pessimistic utterances about reparations precipitated a fresh and heavy decline in which banking stocks suffered most.

The Frankfurter Zeitung's index of Stock Exchange prices as of Nov. 30, works out at 106.61, which is a new low point since 1926, and compares with a high point of 138 in the present year and of 178 in 1927. The average for 1926 is taken as 100.

AID FOR POLISH RAILROADS.

American Car Company Backs $20,000,000 Ten-Year Loan.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WARSAW, Dec. 8.—What is called Poland's biggest deal yet known has been concluded between the American Standard Steel Car Corporation and the Polish car building firm of Lilpop, Rau & Loewenstein.

The American company will finance credits given by the Lilpop firm to the Polish State-owned railroads to the amount of $20,000,000 for ten years. The Americans take over a new $1,000,000 issue of Lilpop's shares.

The aid of Charles S. Dewey, Poland's American financial adviser, in the negotiations is hailed by this morning's newspapers.

SWIFT & CO. PLANNING FOUR-FOR-ONE SPLIT-UP

Directors Vote to Reduce Par Value to $25 a Share Without Change in Capitalization.

Directors of Swift & Co. have voted a split-up of the company's present capital stock on a four-for-one basis, it was announced yesterday. The new shares will have a par value of $25 each, compared with the present $100 par value shares. The company's capitalization will remain $150,000,000.

In addition, the directors have voted a quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share on the new stock. This will be equivalent to the present dividend of $2 a share quarterly on the outstanding stock. In addition to the paid-up capital of $150,000,000, the company has an accumulated surplus of more than $16,000,000, the directors said. This indicates that the new stock will have a book value of approximately $37.50 a share for the 6,000,000 shares which the directors propose to issue.

The recommendation of the directors will be submitted to the shareholders for their approval at the annual meeting in Chicago on Thursday, Jan. 9.

In announcing the stock split-up, L. F. Swift, president of the company, said:

"A wider distribution of Swift & Co. shares is desirable in the interest of the company, in the judgment of the board of directors. This distribution can best be obtained if the capital stock is represented by a larger number of shares of a lower par value, making the stock more valuable to the small investor, including the company's customers and employes, as well as the consumers of the company's products."

UNITED FOUNDERS EARNINGS

$4.35 a Share Reported in Addition to Equities in Other Profits.

United Founders Corporation reports that its net cash earnings for the fiscal period ended Nov. 30 were approximately $3.5 on the average number of shares outstanding. In addition, it was said, the corporation has an equity in the undistributed consolidated cash earnings of American Founders Corporation and those of Investment Trust Associates, totaling approximately $1.75 a share. United Founders Corporation now has approximately 55,000 shareholders. Present resources amount to more than $200,000,000, of which $14,000,000 is in cash.

Estimated earnings of Investment Trust Associates, whose shares were quoted at $20 when it became a public company a year ago, are $10 a share on the average number of shares outstanding during the year ended Nov. 30. The book value is approximately $29 a share.

BOND FLOTATION.

West Texas Utilities.

Offering will be made today of a new issue of $8,250,000 West Texas Utilities Company first mortgage 5 per cent bonds, maturing on Oct. 1, 1957, priced at 95, to yield about 5.50 per cent. The offering group will consist of Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc.; A. B. Leach & Co., Inc., and E. H. Rollins & Sons. Net earnings of the company for the year ended on Oct. 31, 1929, before depreciation, amounted to $3,120,170, compared with the annual interest requirements on the first mortgage bonds to be presently outstanding, of $1,087,500. The corporation is a part of the Middle West Utilities system.

The eighteenth annual appeal for the Hundred Neediest Cases continues in today's issue of The New York Times.

PLANS FINANCING TO FUND DIVIDENDS

M. A. Hanna Company to Issue 200,000 Preferred Shares for Back Payment and Exchange.

Plans for the funding of the accumulated dividends on the first preferred stock of the M. A. Hanna Company of Cleveland will be presented to a special meeting of stockholders on Dec. 30. The plan provides for the issuance of no-par-value 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock to be exchanged share for share for the present preferred stock, with each holder making the exchange entitled to an additional 27/100 share of the new preferred stock, or $24.50 in cash in payment of the accumulated dividends on the old stock.

No dividends were paid on the present preferred stock from the last quarter of 1925 to last March.

It is understood that the plans call for the issuance of 200,000 shares of the new preferred no-par-value 7 per cent cumulative stock. Of this amount 140,000 shares would be allotted for exchange for the present stock, and arrangement has been made for the underwriting of enough of the remaining shares to pay out the accumulated dividends to those who choose cast payments instead of the additional stock which will be offered under the plan. The underwriting price is $60 a share.

The company reports earnings for the nine months ended on Sept. 30 at $3,028,714, equivalent to $27.04 a share, against $2,231,220, equivalent to $19.92 a share, for the entire twelve months of 1928.

STOCK AVERAGE UP.

"Fisher Index" Shows the Second Advance in Three Weeks.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 6.—Professor Irving Fisher's index number of Stock Exchange prices, based on the 255 most important stocks on the market, reckoned on their average of 1926 as 100, shows an average of 144.2 for the past week, as against 140.1 a week ago, 140.7 two weeks ago, 130.1 three weeks ago and 145.3 four weeks ago. The average of Sept. 6, 208.7, was the highest for the year to date, that of three weeks ago was the lowest of the year.

Another index number compiled by Professor Irving Fisher, and based on the fifty most active industrial stocks of the week, is 730.5. This compares with 723.2 a week before, 700.5 two weeks before, 668.4 three weeks before and 764.4 four weeks before.

SEES FEELING OF CAUTION.

But Bank of America Says Present Conditions Are Self-Corrective.

There are already indications, according to a statement issued by the Bank of America, that early predictions of the effects of the recent stock market break were overdrawn.

"Unquestionably, so drastic a liquidation in the securities markets could not take place without widespread reflection in all basic lines of industry and more immediately in the retail trade of the country," the bank holds. "A part of the recent slowing down in commercial activity is evidently to be attributed to a feeling of caution, a desire to await developments before making important commitments, and this reaction is in itself a safeguard.

"Present unsatisfactory conditions, however, are self-corrective," the review continues.

COTTON DEALS LAG AWAITING ESTIMATE

Final Figures on the 1929 Yield Will Be Announced Today by the Government.

SPOT HOUSES HOLD STAPLE

Wholesalers Have Held Off Buying in Hope of Getting Better Prices Later.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 8.—The cotton market last week was under the shadow of the approaching final government report of the season. While the earlier forecasts of yield were based on conditions existing on specified dates, the estimate to be issued tomorrow will be the final word of the Agricultural Department as to the cotton crop of this season.

As a result, there has been little disposition to enter upon new commitments and the majority of traders have been liquidating their deals with a view to having as little in the way of trades open to take the chances of what the government may show.

Fear of the government report estimating a crop as large as or larger than the last has induced liquidation by recent buyers and probably also some short selling by those speculatively inclined. Consequently prices have eased again and probably would have eased further but for constant trade buying, which has come into the market on scale-down orders and which made itself felt promptly on all dips.

The average estimate of twelve private reports issued so far is for a crop of 14,814,000 bales, and the average of five private estimates of ginnings to Dec. 1 is 12,585,000 bales, against 12,560,154 ginned to the same date last year.

There has been much talk of mill curtailment as a result of the backward wholesale demand for cotton goods, but it does not appear that the retail trade has fallen off. On the contrary, advices from many important centres indicate that the demand from actual consumers is running ahead of a year ago. Such being the case, retailers and jobbers will be compelled to replenish their stocks, and the wholesale demand may pick up again after the turn of the year.

There is little doubt that back of the diminished demand in the wholesale markets has been an impression that by holding off a little longer goods may be obtained at lower rates. Evidently the large spot cotton houses of the country take the opposite view, as they are firmly holding large amounts of desirable cotton in warehouses for higher prices. It is rumored that one big firm bought fully 1,000,000 bales of cotton while the crop was coming to market freely with a view to holding a large part of it for higher prices later.

Chicago Traders Believe Operators in East Have World-Wide Aims.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—An impression prevails in the wheat trade that a master eastern interest is endeavoring to control the wheat markets of this country, possibly with an idea that ultimately it will have its influence in all markets of the world. This belief has been created by apparently systematic buying on all sharp declines below $1.40 for May and selling on bulges of around 5 to 10 cents or more.

Occasionally the market gets beyond control, but they manage to absorb sufficient wheat on the big breaks to turn values upward and sell sufficient on the bulges when prices are regarded high enough to overcome all bullish influences and make a setback.

The idea of the trade is that values should be stabilized at times and prices kept at a level where export business is possible part of the year at least. Of late selling has been sufficient on all bulges above $1.40 for May wheat in Chicago to turn values downward and bring good export buying.

Argentine crop news is bullish, with most estimates of around 90,000,000 bushels as the country's available exportable surplus, although some claims are for a materially greater quantity.

The situation in Australia, where harvesting is under way, is fairly bullish and supplies there will be short.

Primary receipts for last week were 8,338,000 bushels, the previous week 4,551,000 and the week last year 7,868,000. Shipments were 6,207,000 bushels, the previous week 6,643,000 and the week last year 7,640,000.

Speculative sales of wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade for the week were 438,891,000 bushels, compared with 291,919,000 the previous week and 320,927,000 in the week last year.

Open interest at the close was 185,481,000 bushels, against 186,973,000 the previous week. Open interest in December wheat has declined to 7,810,000 bushels. Deliveries of cash wheat on December contracts during the week were 19,686,000 bushels, of which almost 10,000,000 were made Dec. 1.

May wheat ranged for the week at $1.39¾ to $1.42¾, with the close at $1.39¾ to $1.39½. December closed at $1.34¼ to $1.35, March $1.33¾ to $1.33¾ and July $1.36¾ to $1.36¾. Net losses for the week were 2½ to 4¼ cents.

UTILITY EARNINGS.

Statements for Twelve Months Issued by Public Service Corporations.

Utilities Power and Light.

Net income of the Utilities Power and Light Corporation after all charges, depreciation and Federal taxes, amounted to $7,013,999 for the twelve months ended on Sept. 30, against $3,105,765 for the preceding twelve months, an increase of 125 per cent.

The income was equal to $5.81 a share on the average number of Class A shares outstanding during the period, after preferred dividends, and equal to $4.45 a share on the Class A shares outstanding on Sept. 30, 1929. Earnings on the Class B and common shares outstanding at the end of the period were equal to $1.41 a share for each class. The figures include the earnings from British properties for the same period.

Gross revenues for the twelve months ended on Sept. 30 were $40,668,197, against $38,773,092 for the preceding year, a gain of 72 per cent. Net earnings to the parent company were $10,349,815, against $4,054,618 for the previous year, a gain of 108 per cent.

Oregon-Washington Water Service.

Gross revenues of $607,562 are reported for the year ended Oct. 31, 1929, by the Oregon-Washington Water Service Company, against $577,157 in the previous year. Gross income, after expenses and general taxes, was $267,189, against $272,015.

COTTON EXPORTS WATCHED.

Trade Thinks Foreign Buyers Unwisely Deferring Purchases.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 8.—Exports of cotton were fairly large last week, although slightly under those of the corresponding week last year, when they were uncommonly heavy. The demand from foreign spinners has not been what it should be all this season and it is evident that they have been depending on their surplus or reserve stocks to a considerable extent. These stocks will have to be replenished eventually, and when this foreign demand sets in buyers will probably have to pay higher prices for the cotton wanted than it could have been bought for had spinners supplied their needs in the usual way.

WHEAT DAMAGE AVERTED.

Freezing Feared in Southwest, but Other Sections Are Protected.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—Winter wheat had fair protection over the Middle West and parts of the northern sections of the Southwest which it is believed has prevented damage, as indicated by numerous reports. In the extreme Southwest, Kansas and Eastern Oklahoma, damage is feared from freezing. The entire Kansas Winter wheat area has a good subsoil moisture and many fields are being pastured, especially where growth is ripe as a result of an ample supply of moisture.

EXCHANGE TO GIVE DINNER.

Will Entertain Its Employes on Next Wednesday—Simmons to Speak.

The New York Stock Exchange will give a dinner on Wednesday to 108 of its employes who have served for more than twenty-five years.

The speakers at the dinner will be E. H. H. Simmons, president of the Exchange; the Rev. Francis P. Duffy, chaplain of the Sixty-ninth Regiment; John E. Wilson, secretary of the New York Quotation Company, and Edward Doyle, superintendent of the floor department of the Exchange. Mr. Doyle will also act as toastmaster.

PLANS 5-FOR-1 SPLIT-UP.

General Gas and Electric Calls Meeting to Consider Proposal Jan. 6.

Directors of the General Gas and Electric Corporation have approved a plan for a five-for-one split-up of the Class A and Class B common stock. A special meeting of the Class B stockholders has been called for Jan. 6, 1930, to consider the proposal.

Buick and Marquette Prices Raised.

Special to The New York Times.

FLINT, Mich., Dec. 8.—Increases in the list prices on both Buick and Marquette automobiles were announced today by E. T. Strong, president of the Buick Motor Company. The increases, effective immediately, range from $26 to $75 and, in most cases, are a return to about the level of the 1929 season, although on some models the price is below the 1929 list. The announcement states that the increases are necessary to conform to the increased cost of production of the 1930 lines.

MEETINGS AND ELECTIONS.

Notice of Stockholders' Meeting of Rhein-Westfälisches Elektrizitätswerk Aktiengesellschaft (Rhine-Westphalia Electric Power Corporation) called to meet upon payment of shares.

In the meeting of the Board of Directors (Aufsichtsrat) of the Rheinisch-Westfälisches Elektrizitätswerk Aktiengesellschaft (Rhine-Westphalia Electric Power Corporation) hereinafter referred to as the Company, held on Saturday, November 30, 1929, it was voted:

1. That a meeting of the stockholders of the Company be called to act upon the payment of a dividend upon the outstanding bearer shares of Common Stock of the Company.

2. That the rate of the proposed dividend be 12 per cent payable to stockholders with proper deduction of the German Kapitalertragsteuer.

3. That the above mentioned meeting of Stockholders be called for 12 o'clock noon, December 14, 1929 at the Hotel Kaiserhof, Essen, Germany.

4. That cable notice be given by the Company to The National City Bank of New York of action taken at the said Stockholders' meeting.

5. That warrant holders who shall purchase American Shares, as provided in a certain Stock Purchase Agreement entered into between the Company and The National City Bank of New York, on or before the date of the said Stockholders' Meeting, shall receive, on the payment of the dividend coupons entitling them to participate, with respect to the shares of the Company represented by the American Shares so purchased, in the said dividend, if declared.

BUILDING PROGRAM PUT AT 8 BILLIONS

Truman S. Morgan Expects Private Construction Increase of $625,000,000 for 1930.

EASIER CREDIT AN AID

Dodge Corporation Estimates Forecast Moderate Expansion in Most Classes of Buildings.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Private construction operations in the calendar year 1930 will approximate and probably exceed $8,435,000,000, an increase over the outlay in the current year of $625,000,000, in the belief of Truman S. Morgan, president of the Dodge Corporation of New York, who attended last week's conference of business and industrial leaders sponsored by the United States Chamber of Commerce. He said estimates prepared by his organization showed that building operations for 1929 would be in the neighborhood of $7,810,000,000.

This is a falling off of $864,000,000 as compared with 1928, when the total reached $8,674,000,000.

Mr. Morgan attributed the favorable outlook for 1930 to an easing of credit conditions and the diversion of funds by banks and other lenders from speculative to industrial channels.

"We have estimated conservatively, because such indications of building demand as we have at this time point to moderate increases in most classes of building, rather than big increases," said Mr. Morgan.

"It would not surprise me greatly, however, for 1930 to show a better measure of improvement than is indicated by these present estimates. The money situation, unfavorable to construction activity during the past seventeen months, has reversed itself completely in the past six weeks and is now entirely favorable to increased building and engineering work."

Mr. Morgan said he had just completed a trip through the South, that banks there had an abundance of money to loan and that much of it would be advanced to home and building associations for construction work. A like condition prevailed in other sections of the country, his reports indicated.

"On the whole, it seems likely that the construction program, once it starts to improve, will strike a better balance between various classes of building and engineering work than has been possible this year," he added. "The building decline of the past seventeen months has been unduly prolonged, has effected a considerable measure of adjustment between building supply and building demand and should end within a comparatively short period."

HOLIDAY BUSINESS SPURTS IN CHICAGO

Wholesalers of Dry Goods and General Merchandise Report Sales at 1928 Level.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—Holiday trade hereabout has increased in wholesale and retail lines, particularly in the closing days of the week. Wholesalers of dry goods and general merchandise report sales equal to those of last year, with a good number of buyers in the market for bargains in pre-inventory sales, particularly of attractive special lines.

Sales for November equaled those of November last year, and for the eleven months were about the same as in the 1928 period, with a few lines showing gains and others slight losses. The twelve months' business is expected to be virtually even with that of 1928 in a majority of lines. Mail order and chain store sales made substantial increases for November and for the eleven months compared with the previous year.

November business finished about the lightest tonnage of any month during the year; the last sixty days will probably reduce the lead over 1928. With one less blast furnace operating in the Chicago district, there are twenty-two of thirty-six stacks in operation. Specifications about equal shipments. Railroads bought about 6,500 freight cars during the week for delivery next year, requiring more than 100,000 tons of steel. Automobile interests show a disposition to take more steel, preparatory to increased operations in the new year.

Consumption of fuel oil has reached record proportions, while cold weather checked the use of gasoline.

Revenue freight loadings on seven Western systems for November were 1,018,733 cars, compared with 1,054,419 last year. For the eleven months ended Nov. 30, 12,063,123 cars were loaded, against 11,856,047 in that time in 1928.

WARNS OF SURPLUS OF NEW BUILDINGS

Repair Work Instead of New Construction Is Industry's Need, Says Building Manager.

Present buildings and structures under construction will give more space than can be absorbed at the normal rate, according to a statement made by Paul Robertson, president of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, at President Hoover's "prosperity conference." This fact must be considered in estimating the extent to which new office and commercial building construction can contribute to the business activity during the coming year, Mr. Robertson said.

"Having kept pace with, and even exceeded, the demands for commercial housing during the recent years of great business expansion," Mr. Robertson said, "we now stand with those whose interests would be seriously jeopardised by any curtailment of the normal activity of business and industry.

"The commercial buildings of the country, representing an enormous investment of capital, are singularly dependent upon conditions entirely beyond the control of their owners. These buildings are fixed as to location, size, character and field of service. In good times or bad, they have much the same costs of operation. In the production of a return on the investment, they are limited by fixed factors and their own four walls. They produce no goods that may be carried to market in quantities and at prices subject to the laws of supply and demand, nor can they increase or create a demand for the space they have to offer. They can only serve those who require space in which to transact business. It follows that we look with high favor on such organized efforts as will tend to promote a continuance of the national prosperity.

"There is an abundant supply of office buildings in the principal business centres of the country. Moreover, present construction and other buildings definitely projected will add during the coming year more space than can be absorbed at the normal rate. It will be seen, then, that in the office building field a continuance of good business has been anticipated.

"Needless construction projects would hinder rather than promote the common good. Idle space in buildings means idle capital. We have seen that the vacant space in office buildings exceeds 11 per cent of the total and that new construction will add to the supply a volume almost equal to the existing vacancy. The amount of office space estimated to be vacant on May 1 next will represent an unproductive investment of half a billion dollars. It is plain that any further encouragement to construction would result in an inflation that could result only in a very real economic loss.

"The business surveys of the National Association of Building Owners & Managers will show, from time to time, in what communities and in what regions new construction may be encouraged with safety. Assuming no abnormal or unexpected conditions to unsettle the normal status, we propose to encourage throughout the country a comprehensive program of rehabilitation, modernization and repair of buildings and their mechanical equipment. This would include structural changes, the renewal of worn out parts and the repair and redecorating of existing buildings."

WAGES ABROAD GAINING IN PURCHASING POWER

Rate of Increase Equals, and in Some Cases Exceeds, the Gain Here Since Just Before War.

The relative increases in the purchasing power of wages in some European countries approximate, and, in some instances, even exceeds, the corresponding increase in America since just before the war, according to the National Industrial Conference Board. This is despite the fact that the purchasing power of the wages of industrial workers in the United States is greater than that of workers in foreign countries, and during 1928 was, on the basis of hourly earnings, 44 per cent, and on the basis of weekly earnings, 35 per cent greater than it was just before the war.

Taking into account the increase in the cost of living in the various countries as well as the increase in money wages as reported by governmental agencies, the board finds that the purchasing power of wages in Denmark, on the average for all divisions of industrial labor and on the basis of hourly earnings in 1928, had increased 46 per cent over 1914, as against an American increase of 44 per cent. The increase in the "real" wages of Danish unskilled workers on the same basis, was more marked, advancing 56 per cent as against only a 50 per cent increase for the same type of workers in the United States.

While there has been a substantial increase in the purchasing power of wages in most countries since the World War, in New Zealand and in the Union of South Africa average "real" weekly wages have remained practically stationary.

IMPROVEMENT SEEN IN BUILDING TRADES

Construction Outlook Better, Says F. H. Smith, Head of Portland Cement Group.

MANY PROJECTS REVIVED

Cement Supply Called Adequate, With No Wage Reduction Contemplated in Mills.

The construction outlook today is better than it has been for the last few years, according to Frank H. Smith, president of the Portland Cement Association and State Commissioner of Banking and Insurance in New Jersey. Mr. Smith was one of the eighteen men recently in conference with President Hoover regarding building conditions.

"The great power of the United States is behind the industry, leading the way with its own vast construction program," Mr. Smith says, as reported by Allen E. Beals in the current Dow Service Daily Building Reports. "So far as I can remember, so great a rally for peacetime construction never has been attempted. The problem today is to keep prosperity with us, and that, I believe, is what the President intends to do.

"The long-continued flow of building construction money away from investment and toward speculation has made construction a sluggish industry in some parts of the country. In other parts the long rest period has enabled tenancy to catch up with surplus housing supply. As money rates have fallen progress in the direction of greater building construction activity has been seen and felt. I am informed that in New York City and other large sections the changed condition in building construction finance has brought about the revival of plans that have long lain dormant. This has been noticed in the greater stability of prices, and where actual price changes have not yet taken place there is at least a halt in their downward course.

"Speaking for the cement industry, 1929 will show a slight decrease from the volume reported in 1928, and up to recently it looked as though there was going to be a still lower volume for 1930. All cement mills are running on reduced schedules. For example, our member mills produced 148,711,000 barrels in the first ten months of 1928, and only 144,896,000 in the same period in 1929. In the first ten months of last year 156,120,000 barrels were shipped, as against 152,240,000 barrels in the same time this year. As to stocks on hand, at the end of October, 1928, we had 14,579,000 barrels, whereas this year we have 15,361,000 barrels.

"The cement industry contemplates no reduction of wages. There has been some reduction in hours of employment so as to let as many benefit as possible, where working hours have been curtailed. There is plenty of mill capacity available, so there need be no fear of a shortage of cement supply. Plants able to turn out 250,000,000 barrels a year are operating only at the economic maximum of 175,000,000 barrels. The foreign situation, especially affecting our seaboards, is directly responsible for this, as the tonnage is kept down by price, and our largest markets lie adjacent to our coast lines."

GRIMM URGES TAX CUT.

Sends Letters to Legislators Asking Its Immediate Adoption.

Peter Grimm, president of the Real Estate Board of New York, announced yesterday that he had sent letters urging the immediate adoption of the cut in Federal income taxes proposed by Secretary Mellon to Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, chairman of the Finance Committee of the Senate; Senators Copeland and Wagner, of New York; Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the House; Representative Willis C. Hawley of Washington, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the House, and Representative John F. Carew of Brooklyn, also a member of the latter committee.

In his letter, Mr. Grimm said the board believes the proposed tax cut to be both practical from the standpoint of estimated income and the budget expense and most advisable and timely in the interest of business promotion in this country. "As representing and speaking for the millions of dollars of capital invested in real estate and for the real estate business in this city," Mr. Grimm said, "we most strongly urge prompt action of Congress in this matter."

Mr. Grimm also sent a communication to Mark Graves, member of the State Tax Commission at Albany, recommending that the State authorities take similar action in connection with the State income tax to strengthen President Hoover's country-wide program for maintaining the buying power of the nation.

MORTGAGE LOANS PLACED.

Financing Obtained for Manhattan and Yonkers Projects.

The Title Guarantee and Trust Company made the first advance on a building loan of $80,000 to the City Federation Hotel, a seven-story building under construction at 442-445 West Twenty-second Street, Manhattan.

Winston & Judelson, Inc., obtained for the Fairdeal Holding Corporation a loan of $200,000 on the two six-story apartment houses on a plot 200 by 100 feet under construction on the south side of McLean Avenue, 116 feet west of Kimball Avenue, Yonkers.

Chrysler Steel Work Completed.

With completion of steel work on its tower, the Chrysler Building at Forty-second Street and Lexington Avenue has reached a height of 1,030 feet, according to an announcement yesterday by Walter P. Chrysler, who said the structure is now the tallest in the world.

SAYS JERSEY PLANS A WIDE PORT SUIT

Booth Warns Merchants Here New Action Will Attack All Freight Rates to City.

CHAMBER AIDS DEFENSE

Asks I. C. C. for Permission to Intervene in Lighterage Case—Names McCollester Counsel.

In a report to its members on the progress of the New Jersey lighterage case, outlining the defense that is to be made against the efforts of the State of New Jersey to force the railroads to add an extra charge for the lighterage of freight across the harbor, the Merchants' Association yesterday warned of another and broader attack about to the launched against the New York side of the port.

A circular letter by Willis H. Booth, president of the association, addressed to its members, included the following:

"Within the last few days reliable information has been received to the effect that other New Jersey interests will soon file another complaint in which the entire rate structure to and from New York City will be attacked as being prejudicial to New Jersey. The latter complaint, it is stated, not only covers the lighterage rates but will also attack the pier, inland station, freight station and team track rates now applicable on New York City traffic."

Since the start of the lighterage action by the State of New Jersey, shipping circles have heard that a second suit would be brought by the business interests of New Jersey on a broader scale than the original action. The rumor had died down of late and it was beginning to be considered possible that the original action would be the only one.

Freight Terminal Under Fire.

The various fields to be covered by the proposed new suit, including piers and inland stations, have long been bones of contention by interests of New York and New Jersey. The Port Authority plans to build a union freight station near Fourteenth Street and Eighth Avenue. This plan has already drawn the fire of some New Jersey interests, which have demanded that several stations of the same kind be built in other parts of the port district.

The prior situation centres largely about the lack of piers for the 1,000-foot steamships which are planned by several of the transatlantic lines. New Jersey interests point out that it can accommodate the ships, but the New York Board of Trade, after a survey of the entire port district, recently decided that the New Jersey locations were not suitable and recommended that new piers be built on Manhattan.

Two other developments in the lighterage case yesterday strengthened the New York defense.

It was announced that the Chamber of Commerce had filed a petition with the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to intervene and that Parker McCollester had been named to lead the coordinated interests of various New York organizations in the case.

McCollester to Lead Fight.

Mr. McCollester has heretofore been the nominal leader though not officially recognized as such. He is counsel for the State Chamber of Commerce in the lighterage case, replacing Julius Henry Cohen at the request of the latter, to leave Mr. Cohen free to serve as counsel for the Port of New York Authority. He has served as counsel to the special New York commission headed by L. F. Loree, which was appointed by Governor Roosevelt several months ago to investigate the rate situation. He is also counsel for the Shippers' Conference, the New York Produce Exchange and several publishers' organizations. Mr. McCollester will work with counsel for other organizations of New York which have entered the case.

The petition of the State Chamber of Commerce, which was filed by Mr. McCollester, said:

"Petitioner and its members have a direct interest in the matters here in issue for the reason that complainant herein seeks to bring about a change in the basis of railroad freight rates on a large part of the freight transported by carriers subject to the Interstate Commerce act to and from the Port of New York area.

"Petitoner has consistently maintained and now alleges that the best interests of the Port of New York as a whole as well as the welfare and prosperity of the State and city of New York and of petitioner's members require that the commercial, industrial and economic unity of the port area shall be fostered and maintained and that in the making of freight rates this unity of the port area should continue to be reflected in the maintenance, where it now exists, of an equality of freight rates to and from all parts of the New York port area.

"Petitioner further alleges that the changes in the freight rate adjustment apparently sought by complainant would cause great and irreparable injury to petitioner's members, whose business has been built up, whose property has been invested, and who have undertaken projects in reliance upon the present freight rate adjustment, which has long been in effect."

Weigh Beach Pollution Data.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Dec. 8.—Attorney General William A. Stevens and Assistant Attorney General Duane E. Minard left here today for Washington, after reviewing the testimony of municipalities to be presented at the trial of New Jersey's suit against New York City to restrain the latter from causing pollution of the State's beaches.

Mr. Stevens and Mr. Minard will appear in two State actions at Washington tomorrow. A brief will be filed with the Federal Radio Commission, charging that the issuance of a permit to the Columbia Broadcasting Company for a fifty-watt transmitter at Columbia Ridge, N. J., is illegal. New Jersey will be represented at the application before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania to join New Jersey in its suit against New York State over the diversion of the waters of the Delaware. Hearing the State's case against New York City over the pollution of beaches along the North Jersey Coast will begin Wednesday at Asbury Park.

LINERS TO BE REPAIRED.

United States Lines Announces Winter Drydock Schedule.

The United States Lines announced yesterday its program of Winter drydocking and the attendant adjustment of schedules to fit the temporary withdrawal of its ships from the service.

The George Washington has left the Boston Commonwealth drydock after being renovated and is being prepared to sail Thursday on the first voyage of a United States liner to Hamburg, the new Eastern terminus for all ships of the line except the Leviathan. She will carry a heavy consignment of Christmas mail and many passengers who will spend the holidays in their homes in Europe.

The liner America has been removed to the Morse drydock in Brooklyn, where her tourist third class accommodations will be increased, a smoking room added and her dining saloon enlarged.

The Republic will arrive today with the captain and ten members of the crew of the derelict schooner Gander Deal, whom she rescued last Thursday at sea. She will enter drydock after this trip for renovation and inspection in preparation for two cruises to the West Indies, on which she will sail from Philadelphia Jan. 10 and Jan. 28.

The Leviathan will enter drydock after her first arrival in New York in February. The President Harding has been withdrawn from the service temporarily and will resume her schedule Dec. 24.

Academy Gets Pugsley Portrait.

Special to The New York Times.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Dec. 8.—An oil portrait of Chester de Witt Pugsley, the gift of Isabelle Bishop, a New York artist, was presented today to the Peekskill Military Academy. A presentation speech was made by Dr. Walter Hug of Switzerland, research assistant of the Bureau of International Research at Harvard Law School, and a holder of the Pugsley foreign graduate scholarship at Harvard Law School last year. The portrait was accepted by H. Alban Anderson, secretary and treasurer of the board of trustees of the academy.

STATE PAYS MORE INTERNAL REVENUE

Receipts From New York in 1928-9 Rose to $843,000,000, or 28.7 Per Cent of Total.

BIG TAX REFUNDS REPORTED

Total of $126,000,000 in Over-assessments Returned to Taxpayers in Year.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Of the $2,939,054,375.43 collected by the Bureau of Internal Revenue during the fiscal year 1929, an increase of $148,518,837.75, or 5 per cent over the previous year, New York State, according to the annual report of the bureau, made public today, contributed by far the largest portion. Its share was $843,536,203.65, or 28.70 per cent of the receipts from the entire country.

New York's share of the total payments shows an increase of 1.71 per cent over the preceding year.

Pennsylvania came second with $237,576,656.60, or 8.08 per cent of the total.

New York's payments included income taxes of $744,781,797.29 and miscellaneous taxes of $98,754,506.36 and, figured on the basis of 11,550,000 of population, the per capita tax paid was $73.03.

Leaders in Per Capita Tax.

In the latter respect New York was led by two other States. Delaware, with a population of 244,000 and taxes of $30,309,523.07, paid a per capita tax of $124.22, and North Carolina, with a population estimated at 2,938,000, paid taxes of $254,494,657.51, or $86.62 per capita.

Delaware's high per capita ranking was due to heavy income taxes from her industries and industrial leaders, which represented $28,166,915.74 of her total tax. North Carolina's high rating came from miscellaneous taxes of $234,427,672.30, her income taxes being but $20,066,795.21. The chief tax paid by North Carolina was upon tobacco manufactures, and this gave the State the lead over all others in the payment of miscellaneous taxes.

New York was second in miscellaneous tax payments, and Virginia, which like North Carolina is a leading tobacco State, was third, her total of miscellaneous taxes being $67,806,896.72.

Rise in New York Income Yield.

Income taxes paid by New York State were divided into $336,784,291.50 on corporation incomes and $407,997,505.79 on personal incomes, the combined taxes representing an increase of 15 per cent over those of a year ago.

In this connection, however, all States were not so fortunate, the taxes paid in nineteen States, the District of Columbia and Hawaii declining as follows: Alabama 7 per cent, Colorado 4, District of Columbia 4, Florida 25, Hawaii 10, Idaho 2, Indiana 7, Kansas 8, Mississippi 13, Missouri 1, North Carolina 1, North Dakota 11, Oklahoma 13, Pennsylvania 4, South Carolina 6, Texas 17, Utah 5, Virginia 8, West Virginia 15, Wisconsin 14 and Wyoming 46.

Highest Total Revenue Since 1922.

An interesting feature of the report was a table of collections for the fiscal years from 1922 to 1929, inclusive, which showed that, despite the various reductions made in income tax rates and the modification or repeal of some miscellaneous tax rates, total revenue in 1929 was at a higher level than in any year since 1922.

The table further showed that income taxes, when separated from miscellaneous taxes, were higher in 1929 than in any year since 1921. The shrinkage came in connection with miscellaneous taxes, this being due chiefly to the repeal or modification of many of the so-called nuisance taxes which grew out of the war.

Secretary Mellon has contended for years that high taxation on business and personal incomes retarded business expansion and that with their modification the tax receipts would tend to increase.

Cuts in Taxes During Eight Years.

The report appeared to bear out his contentions in large part inasmuch as between 1921 and 1929 the surtax on personal incomes was reduced from 65 to 20 per cent, and normal taxes on personal incomes have dropped from a maximum of 8 to 5 per cent.

The tax collected on corporations during the fiscal year 1929 was at the rate of 12 per cent on incomes earned in the calendar year 1928 and at the rate of 13½ per cent on incomes earned in the calendar years 1926 and 1927, while the tax collected during the fiscal year 1928 was at the rate of 13½ per cent on incomes earned in the calendar years 1926 and 1927 and at the rate of 13 per cent on incomes earned in the calendar year 1925.

The provisions of the Revenue act of 1928 affecting the tax of incomes of individuals, with the exception of a 25 per cent reduction of the net tax upon earned incomes for calendar year 1928 of $30,000 or less, were the same in the fiscal year 1929, as in the fiscal year 1928.

Income and Miscellaneous Totals.

The income tax collections during the fiscal year 1929, the report said, amounted to $2,331,274,428.64, compared with $2,174,573,102.89 in 1928, an increase of $156,701,325.75, or 7.2 per cent.

The miscellaneous tax collections, including all sources of internal revenue except incomes, amounted to $807,779,946.79 during 1929, as compared with $615,962,434.79 in 1928, a decrease of $8,182,488, or 1.3 per cent.

The principal increases in the revenue from miscellaneous taxes for 1929 were $37,994,502.18 from tobacco manufactures and $15,344,322.60 from "stamp taxes," including the tax on playing cards. The chief losses in miscellaneous revenue were due to the repeal of the automobile tax, amounting to $46,082,400.06, and the increased exemptions in the admissions tax, provided in the revenue act of 1928, amounting to $11,641,896.26.

Comparison of Collections.

The collections of internal revenue taxes for 1929 and the preceding year were:

Total receipts, all sources ..	$3,939,054,375.43	$2,790,535,537.68

Cost of Operation Stays the Same.

The amount expended and obligated in administering the internal revenue tax laws for the fiscal year 1929 was $34,877,082.59, not including the amount expended for refunding taxes illegally or erroneously collected, which is in no sense an administrative expense. The cost of operation for 1929 was $1.17 for each $100 collected, the same as for 1928.

The total additional revenue made available for collection was $260,227,744.14, compared with $266,657,218.72 for the previous fiscal year.

$126,595,318 in Tax Refunds.

The total amount of overassessments stated for 1929 was $339,528,941.51. Of this amount $176,398,377.58 was satisfied by abatement, $36,535,245.43 by credit and $126,595,318.51 by refund. Interest, not included above, in the sum of $38,768,622.33 was paid on the amounts refunded or credited.

The total amount involved in rejected claims was $237,378,969.16. During the year 50,229 claims were filed for a total of $613,052,371.28, as against 43,981 claims for $486,603,619.26 a year ago. At the end of the fiscal year 13,250 claims were pending for adjustment.

Miscellaneous stamp and special-tax collections for the year amounted to $87,796,924.81, an increase of $15,535,250.20. This increase was due mainly to the collections of taxes on transfers of stock, amounting to $37,396,927.35, a gain of $13,387,389.65 over a year ago. The record-breaking stock market activity during the year was responsible.

Record in Tobacco Tax Yield.

Collections from tobacco taxes continued their steady upward trend, amounting to $434,444,543.21 for the year, a new high level, an increase of $37,994,502.18, or 9.58 per cent, over 1928. They represent more than 71 per cent of the year's miscellaneous internal revenues and exceed total internal revenue receipts from all sources for any year prior to 1916.

Collections from taxes on small cigarettes established another record, amounting to $341,951,551.22. This represents 78.71 per cent of the total tobacco taxes and is an increase of $40,198,962.58, or 13.32 per cent, over the previous year.

North Carolina led all States in the collection of tobacco taxes, with receipts of $233,915,029.11, or 53.84 per cent of the total collections. Virginia comes next, with $66,965,129.45, or 15.41 per cent, followed by New York, with $29,077,001.52; New Jersey, $22,164,027.18; Pennsylvania, $14,484,268.40; California, $13,097,225.73, and Ohio, $11,761,319.42.

Receipts by States.

NIGHT CLUBS RAIDED IN THEATRE DISTRICT

Police Make Liquor Arrests in Four Places and Seize 14 at Dice Game.

Plain clothes men under the command of Inspector Patrick S. McCormick conducted a series of raids early yesterday morning in the theatrical district. Two alleged speakeasies and two night clubs were invaded by the raiders, and a dice game was broken up and fourteen alleged participants arrested.

The first raid was at 256 West Fifty-seventh Street, where the bartender was arrested. At 264 West Fifty-third Street an employe was arrested.

Many amusement-seekers were interrupted when the inspector's men invaded the Dizzy Club, 146 West Fifty-sixth Street, and arrested an employe. The last place raided was L'Ambassadeurs, 1,638 Broadway, where one arrest was made. The dice game was at 544 West Fiftieth Street.

The members of the raiding party were armed with photographs of Hymie Biller, under indictment for the murder of Arnold Rothstein; James Nannery, who recently escaped from Sing Sing, and Jack Diamond, wanted in connection with the double murder in the Hotsy Totsy Club last Spring.

A NOISY TYPEWRITER KEY DRIVES LIKE THIS

. . . A NOISELESS TYPEWRITER KEY PUTTS LIKE THIS:

Pleasant balm to your ears.

But change your golf course to your office . . . change that click to a CLACK . . . multiply it a thousand times a minute . . . and you have the clackety-clack of noisy typewriters, each one hurling forty-four rattling steel "clubs" against hard-rubber rollers.

No longer balm to your ears . . . but steady blows at your nerves. Tightening tension . . . undermining concentration . . . burning up energy in a sub-conscious duel with din!

REMINGTON NOISELESS Typewriters putt your letters onto paper silently . . . swiftly . . . accurately. They substitute a nimble push for a noisy crash. With an actual impression stroke only one-quarter of an inch long . . . their keys kiss the paper with a gentle impress. They print . . . they don't punch. Silence is built into them . . . with a wholly different type-bar mechanism.

Everywhere REMINGTON NOISELESS Typewriters are replacing old-fashioned hammer-blow machines. Driving out office din. Giving executives the peaceful Quiet that their jobs . . . and their thinking . . . deserve.

We'll silence your office on request . . . with a Noiseless Typewriter in the place of every noisy one . . . in a thorough demonstration without cost or obligation. Just phone REMINGTON RAND BUSINESS SERVICE INC., Typewriter Division, 374 Broadway, New York City, WORth 7500.
